AMERICANS LAUNCH BIG PUSH IN AACHEN AREA
200,000 NAZIS BOTTLED IN LOWER BALKANS

Pierce Siegfried Line in Mighty Combined Assault

British Widen Corridor, Crush Counter-Attacks

By JAMES M. LONG
(AP War Correspondent)

London, Oct. 2.—(AP)—The U.S. 1st Army, striking one of the greatest offensive blows of the war in an effort to break a new hole in the Siegfried Line, drove a steel wedge two miles deep in a six-mile front north of Aachen today.

American infantry and tanks rushed forward toward Geilkenkirchen in Germany from the Netherlands village of Groenstraat, ten miles north of Aachen, and splashed across the Little Wurm river coursing near the Dutch-German border in the first 45 minutes of the attack.

The assault, made across wooded and pasture land pitted with thousands of foxholes and mineshafts which had been converted into strongholds, was aimed at driving a fourth hole in Hitler's west wall. The Americans already held three breaches in the line near Aachen.

The attack still was going forward tonight in the face of heavy resistance from enemy pillboxes, and fire from artillery and six-barrelled mortars.

British troops meanwhile crushed two of the strongest counter-attacks in the western campaign and broadened their corridor in Holland.

Far to the southwest 1st Canadian Army forces on the southern sector of the Allies Lowlands battle line were hammering against three fiercely resisting German divisions attempting to block their advance along a 30-mile front north of the Antwerp-Turnhout canal.

Surging into the rubble of German defences almost before the debris had stopped flying from one of the greatest aerial and land bombardments, the Americans were reported pouring through a lane of ruin pointed at the Rhine between Cologne and Dusseldorf, side door to the Ruhr and main highway to Berlin.

"I doubt if they will stop now until they have reached the Rhine," said one front line correspondent.

The United States 1st Army ending a stalemate of almost two weeks, led off the assault with a tremendous massed artillery barrage in which 10-inch guns thundered salvoes into the enemy's fixed position, and an hour-long aerial attack by hundreds of medium and fighter bombers.

Great towers of earth, stone and debris rose as the explosives tore great holes in the green German countryside and blew apart buildings.

Then the infantry leaped from their outposts with bayonets fixed to spear the enemy before he could rally from the shock and surprise.

First news of the attack came from front line correspondents. Late this afternoon Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters had given no word as to the exact location of the attack. But it cautioned correspondents not to count too immediately on a break-through.

While lighter bombers got in close for pinpoint attacks on the enemy's line, heavy bombers 1,200 strong, sailed over the pounded rail chokepoints at Hamm, Kassel and Cologne through which the Germans could hurry up reinforcements and supplies.

The attack was launched at a new sector of the Siegfried Line near Aachen where the Americans already had pierced the enemy defence belt at three places, front dispatches said.

Still striking for the long Nijmegen bridge across the Waal river, the Germans sent tanks, flame-throwers and infantry beating against the Tommies' line northeast and southeast of the city, but they were broken up by rocket-firing Typhoon attacks, British heavy guns and infantry steel.

Some groups of 15 to 20 infiltrated into the British lines but they were being wiped out today.

British troops broadened their corridor to the west by pushing four miles north of the town of Oss to the Meuse, forming a solid assault wall against the German line through Nuland and Verlicum three to five miles east of 'S Hertogenbosch.

Pravda Accuses Western Powers Of Weakness

Moscow, Oct. 2 — (AP) — Pravda devoted three columns today to another angry attack by Ilya Ehrenburg on alleged signs of weakness among the western powers in exterminating "Hitlerism."

He castigated the French author, Andre Gide, for "mumbling" 'down with Hitler' but simultaneously preparing for the return of the brown fever."

The eminent Soviet writer added: "In Paris, academicians persuade themselves that Petain is not a vulgar traitor.

"In a German city captured by the Allies, an old Nazi is the new mayor. An American newspaper moans over the fate of arrested traitors in France."

Declaring there were no isolationists in Russia, he said, "We are not witnesses or customers but one of the creators of European culture. We writers of the Soviet Union are waiting for words of truth and goodness from the writers of the west."

Finns Battling Nazis in Tornea

Stockholm, Oct. 2 —(AP)— The Finnish communique said today the Finns had been battling German troops in Tornea, in northwestern Finland at the Swedish border, since yesterday morning.

The communique also announced that Finnish troops had captured an island in the Gulf of Bothnia off Kemi, where the Germans were reported carrying out extensive demolitions. Kemi is several miles south of Tornea.

The Finns are seeking to disarm and intern Nazi forces in compliance with the Russian armistice terms.

CANADIANS TAKE CALAIS IN SIX-DAY ASSAULT

Hun Commander and 7,000 Men Taken Prisoners; Troops Now After Dunkerque

PORT NEAREST BRITAIN

By ALAN RANDAL
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army in Calais, Oct. 2 — (CP Cable) — With the capture of Calais, three out of four French coast ports which have been under siege by 1st Canadian Army forces were in Allied hands today, leaving Dunkirk — scene of the British evacuation in 1940—to be subdued.

Calais was captured by Canadian forces late Saturday and the last resistance was eliminated yesterday. The garrison commander, a Col. Schroeder, and some 7,000 prisoners were taken as the enemy capitulated without further fight in the wake of a three-hour bombardment.

Boulogne fell to Canadian troops Sept. 21 and Le Havre to British formations under Lt.-Gen. Crerar's command nine days earlier.

Cap Gris Nez and its batteries of big guns which for four years had shelled Dover and surrounding towns and given that sector of the Kent coast the nickname "Hellfire corner" were seized last Friday.

Calais, like Boulogne, fell after a six-day assault co-ordinated with heavy aerial attacks by big bombers and dive-bombers.

The historic old town, nearest port in France to the English coast, was filled with wreckage as the Canadian forces entered it Saturday. Some soldiers said the destruction was comparable to that in Caen in Normandy.

The final bombardment which brought about the surrender of the garrison came after a 24-hour truce arranged to permit the evacuation of some 20,000 civilians.

During the assault on Calais, which began Sept. 25, the Canadian forces broke through powerful perimeter positions and crossed flooded flats outside the town, using Mae West jackets in places to traverse the water-covered fields.

The final phases of the attack were delivered by Western Canada troops and one eastern Canada unit. American paratroops helped the Tommies beat off the attacks without yielding more than a couple of orchards. The Germans, failing to gain, were reported digging in for an attempt to bog the battle down into positional warfare.

Ralston Encounters Question Barrage on Italian Front

By DOUG HOW
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Corps in Italy, Oct. 2 —(CP Cable)— Canada's Defence Minister, Col. J. L. Ralston, will leave Italy fully aware of the problems Dominion soldiers are thinking about and grousing about as they continue to fight what is already the toughest and most sustained action of more than a year of campaigning in Italy.

The first encounter with the question barrage on his tour of fighting units and base units came at a forward reinforcement battalion.

After that experience, Col. Ralston adopted the tactics of telling the men he knew there were problems about this and that and asking if they had any others.

Questions and Answers.

Generally the Minister found the troops' minds turning on subjects like these:

1. The Pacific war: Will the troops get home leave? What will the Pacific force consist of? How will the men be picked?

Answer: There will be a government announcement following the disclosure of the Quebec conference decisions.

2. Demobilization: Will troops called up for home defence who did not volunteer for overseas service be "de-mobbed" first? When will the troops get home? Will they return via England or straight to Canada?

Answer: The machinery for demobilization has been set up. Canada will get the men back as quickly as possible, but "I don't think any of us realize the great demands that are going to fall on shipping after the defeat of Germany." Mr. Ralston could not promise that the home troops would not be demobilized before overseas veterans.

He added if the transport problem made the return of veterans slow it might be just as well to get the home troops out of the way.

3. Home leave for troops who have been overseas since 1939-40?

Answer: A strict eye is kept on compassionate leaves, the minister said. He had had men ask him why men whose wives and families are behaving should not go home as well as men who get compassionate leave because of domestic trouble. He would take the problem of home leave for the five-year veterans into further consideration but promised nothing.

4. The Peacetime Army:

2nd answer: A pronouncement

SIR WM. MULOCK DIES IN SLEEP IN TORONTO HOME

Former Chief Justice of Ontario and Leading Educationist

IN 102ND YEAR

Toronto, Oct 2 (CP)—The man who gave Prime Minister Mackenzie King his start in politics, Sir William Mulock, one of the nation's leading educationist and only surviving member of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's original cabinet, died in his sleep at his Jarvis Street home here Sunday at the age of 101.

Though Sir William believed he was 100 years old, he actually had passed the century mark and would have celebrated his 102nd birthday next Jan. 19. His grandson, Col. W. P. Mulock, Postmaster General of Canada, clarified Sir William's age by stating that "somewhere in his life he dropped a year and we didn't want to worry him so never mentioned it."

Former Chief Justice of Ontario, former Postmaster General of Canada, creator of the Federal Department of Labor and its first minister, and for more than 20 years Chancellor of the University of Toronto, Sir William "slipped quietly away" after several months of gradually increasing weakness. He had been confined to bed since May although he had not been ill.

Until his death, Sir William retained interest in things Canadian and British and always held up British judicial methods as the pattern for freedom.

Militant Leader.

From the outset of his career, which began with the practice of law in Toronto, he was known as a militant and often dogmatic leader in causes which he launched or adopted. Heading a youthful group of graduates of the University of Toronto, he battled for reform and saw the fulfillment of his prediction that the university would some day embody colleges of every sect and school of learning.

In paying tribute, Prime Minister King said he will be remembered "as one who throughout a long, vigorous and active life was at all times a friend of the oppressed, a lover of liberty, a champion of freedom, one who held high the standards of right and truth and justice."

Chief Justice T. Rinfret of the Supreme Court of Canada, said Sir William's death "will be felt as a personal blow by all Canadians"

President H. J. Cody of the University of Toronto said Canada had lost a great figure in the state, judiciary and educational worlds. Chief Justice R. S. Robertson of Ontario said that "while he had passed his 100th year, it is still somewhat of a shock to learn that such a useful citizen has left us".

BRITISH PATROLS STRIKING ACROSS FIUMICINO RIVER

Germans Occupying the Far Bank in Great Strength

BREAK COUNTER BLOWS

By NOLAND NORGAARD
(A.P. War Correspondent)

Rome, Oct. 2 (AP) — Heavy patrol actions were fought on the Adriatic front as the British 8th. Army cleared the last enemy troops from Savignano and struck across the Fiumicino River where the Germans were occupying the far bank in strength, Allied headquarters said today.

Meanwhile American troops of the Allied 5th. Army beat back counter attacks on Monte Battaglia—lofty height dominating the road to Imola—for the fourth consecutive day, and captured neighboring Monte Cappela after heavy fighting.

The skies over most of the Italian front cleared after nearly a week of frequent rains, enabling the Mediterranean Allied air force to take up an active support role.

At least one enemy attempt to counter attack was broken up by a bombing attack and other German concentrations of artillery positions were assaulted from the air with effective results.

It was reported last night the Germans had rushed reinforcements into the central sector of the front, from other Apennine areas, against United States troops slowly prying loose Field Marshal Kesselring's grip on that part of northern Italy.

On the west coast, enemy artillery fire was increased against Brazilian and other Allied units maintaining pressure on mountain strongholds.

Says Warsaw Destroyed In Uprising Against Huns

New York, Oct. 2 — (CP) — Warsaw, capital of Poland, has been destroyed in the home army uprising against the Germans, a Polish telegraph agency dispatch from London said today.

The dispatch quoted the Warsaw underground radio as broadcasting today: "Warsaw has ceased to exist. All that remains are ruins."

Warsaw, before the war, was one of the gayest capitals of Europe, with a population of 1,300,000.

SQUIRREL IS HOUSE-WRECKER

Kansas City, Oct. 2. (AP)—The Sidney I. Sammis family returned from a week-end trip and found their curtains torn up, the window sills chewed almost in two, stuffing removed from overstuffed furniture, and apples and spices either eaten or spilled. The Sammis' called the fire department, which had trouble in catching the home-wrecker: a saucy, young red squirrel.

Allied Technique Scores at Calais, Bombers Support Ground Troops

With the 1st Canadian Army, Oct. 2—(CP Reuter)— Capture of Calais has given yet another demonstration of the new battle technique that has worked so well for the Allies during and following the break-out from Normandy—the use of medium and heavy bombers in close support of ground troops.

Calais fell before blows from the land and air which began Sept. 20 with the sustained bombing of fortified positions about seven miles to the west of the town.

Within 2½ hours that day well over 3,000 tons of bombs were dropped.

Between Sept. 20 and Sept. 28 more than 11,500 tons of bombs were dropped by R. A. F. bomber command.

The target area included the defences of Calais and other fortified positions as well as gun positions at Cap Gris Nez which were attacked as part of the same operation.

Apart from two attacks on four areas of Cap Gris Nez on Sept. 26 and 28, the bombing moved steadily from west to east right to the outskirts of the town where attacks were made on defended posts which the Germans had established in demolished houses.

The accuracy of this bombing was 100 per cent and the tremendous blasts did not injure one single Canadian soldier.

On the last day of their assault, positions to the east of Calais were bombed as well as the gun posts of Cap Gris Nez.

All air attacks were exactly coordinated with the advance of the Canadian troops.

A map indicating the aiming points of the bombers clearly shows the successive stages of the progress of the infantry through each defended area.

Pillboxes, wired and mined areas, heavy gun posts and every conceivable defence had to be obliterated by preliminary bombing if the port was to be captured without heavy casualties.

The port was captured and Canadian casualties were light, thanks largely to the air effort put up both by the heavy bombers and by the daring little rocket Typhoons which flew whenever the weather would permit in support of the infantry attacking Calais.

2,700 WARPLANES SUPPORT ASSAULT ON DEFENCE LINE

900 Heavy Bombers Smash at Targets Around Cologne And Kassel

ATTACK THRU CLOUDS

London, Oct. 2 (AP)—More than 2,700 Allied warplanes stuck in close and deep support today of the new American offensive against the Siegfried Line in the Aachen sector of northwest Germany.

Over 1,000 medium and fighter bombers blazed a path into the Nazi wall immediately before the Americans.

About 900 heavy bombers with 500 escorts tore at targets around Cologne and Kassel while another 300 heavy bombers poured bomb loads into Germany's greatest freight yards at Hamm, 90 miles northeast of Aachen.

Gen. Eisenhower broadcast a warning to Netherlands residents of islands in the Schelde Estuary to evacuate before the bombers start work there.

Cologne, fifth city of greater Germany with 768,000 people, is 30 miles east of Aachen, near where the United States 1st Army was attacking the Siegfried Line today. The Prussian city on the Rhine is one of Hitler's greatest arsenals and also is a nodal communication centre for supplying the northern end of the German front.

Kassel, a city of 217,000, is one of the most important German railroad centres in the west. It lies 150 miles beyond Aachen. . . .

Some 500 fighters convoyed the heavy bombers to and from the German cities. The bombers attacked through clouds.

Medium and fighter bombers shook the ground around Aachen for miles around with blows at pillboxes, gun positions and troop concentrations, front reports said.

The Germans also reported formations over southwest and south Germany, suggesting a two-directional attack from the west and south. One report said some bombers in the north were approaching the enemy naval base of Emden.

Other forces of speedy Mosquito intruders bombed a rural factory, 30 miles from Handorf, and carried out more than 40 small attacks on rail and canal targets in Germany and Holland during the night. No aircraft were lost in these operations.

Both British and American heavy bombers were idle Sunday after closing the books on one of their busiest months of the war.

RETIRED OFFICIAL DIES

Toronto, Oct. 2 — (CP) — J. Bart Cronin, retired Toronto police official who solved some of the most sensational crimes in the history of Toronto, died today after a brief illness. He was 72 years old.

Born in Welland County in 1872, Bart Cronin moved to Toronto upon his graduation from school and joined the police force in 1900. He was promoted to Inspector in 1924, a post which he held until his retirement in 1937.

Huns Try To Delay Allies in Holland While Defences Rushed Along Rhine

By ROSS MUNRO
(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the 1st. Canadian Army in Belgium, Oct. 2 (CP) Cable) — The Germans are making increasingly strong efforts to block the Canadian army drive into Holland from the Antwerp-Turnhout area, and it is estimated today there are 25 enemy battalions facing the Canadians along this 30-mile sector of the front.

North of Hurnhout the Canadians have reached The Netherlands frontier at two points but the Germans are resisting every advance both from there and from the bridgehead over the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal at St. Leonard.

The Germans have decided to delay both the British 2nd. Army and the Canadian Army in Holland while defences are rushed up along the Rhine. The counter-attacks against the 2nd. Army's powerful wedge into Holland and growing resistance along the Canadian Army front are part of this policy.

Cloudy weather threatened to restrict the tremendous Allied air arm's support for ground operations, and greatly aid the German plan, but it turned clear this morning and Allied bombers and fighters were out in strength over the battle areas.

The 25 enemy battalions facing the Canadians, equivalent in combat strength to nearly three German infantry division, are a mixed collection gathered together hastily from troops which escaped over the Schelde from the strip of Holland just south of the estuary. They are not particularly well equipped but probably are able to put up some resistance in the country north of Antwerp and Turnhout where the terrain favors the defenders.

Five thousand Germans still holding the south side of the Schelde at the mouth of the river are expected to fight it out against the Canadians who have them hemmed in there.

Red Planes Swarm Over Yugoslavia In Round-Clock Raids

German Defences Dented Near Belgrade-Nis Railway

By DANIEL DE LUCE
(A. P. War Correspondent)

Moscow, Oct. 2 (AP) — Russian fighter-bombers swarmed over Yugoslavia in round-the-clock raids on German forces as Russian ground troops gained steadily along a curving, mountainous front 70 to 100 miles southeast of Belgrade in a drive that is bottling up an estimated 200,000 Nazi troops in the lower Balkans.

The Germans were fiercely defending their Balkan life line south east of the Yugoslav capital, but yesterday Red Army troops, with Marshal Tito's Yugoslav Partisans acting as advance scouts, dented the Nazi defences another 23 miles to within 43 miles of the Belgrade-Nis railway, Moscow announced.

Soviet pilots today reported silencing 50 enemy batteries, destroying five military trains and knocking out scores of trucks and tanks along the vital escape hatch for the imperilled Nazis.

Penetrate Hungary

(Meanwhile, an unconfirmed Budapest dispatch from Turkey said other Soviet and Romanian troops had penetrated 22 miles into southeastern Hungary in an offensive aimed at Budapest, Magyar capital less than 100 miles distant. Russian gains in that sector were officially acknowledged by Hungary but their depth was not disclosed.)

Moscow was silent about the Hungarian drive and about the situation at Warsaw, which was described as "critical" by Polish patriots as Berlin said the Nazis were overwhelming the dwindling guerillas.

Soviet progress toward the Morava Valley route of the Belgrade-Greece railway was the only important advance claimed today along the entire eastern front.

Riga Nearly Liberated

On the northern flank of the eastern front, a dispatch to Pravda declared, the "hour of Liberation is near for Riga."

Pravda continued: "The battle of the Soviet Baltic is entering its last conclusive stage. The struggle for Riga is becoming more furious each day. Soviet fighters have to break a complicated enemy defence based on natural obstacles, swamps and forests together with steel and concrete fortifications and minefields. But all these obstacles will be overcome."

Some 50 miles due east of Riga Red Army assault troops forced the Oger River and widened a gap in the enemy line to more than 60 miles, the front line report said.

Chinese Reverses Attributed to Lack Of Essential Equipment

Chungking, Oct. 2 — (AP) — Attributing recent Chinese reverses to lack of essential equipment, a spokesman for the Chinese National Military Council said today the actual tonnage of American supplies delivered to the east China forces since 1941 would not be sufficient to sustain an American or British division in combat for a week.

"The only real help afforded the Chinese armies in East China has been in the form of heroic and remarkably effective air support given by units of the U. S. 14th Air Force in that area," the spokesman said.

The spokesman's statement was issued in response to Prime Minister Churchill's speech in the House of Commons last week during which he expressed disappointment over reverses in China.

FINAL ASSAULT MADE

London, Oct. 2 — Brussels radio said today the final assault on Dunkerque was launched last night. "Allied batteries are hammering the outer defences of the town," the broadcast said. "Dunkerque is defended by a German garrison of 15,000."

ATTEND REUNION

Several local members of the 21st Battalion C.E.F., famous fighting unit of the last great war, returned to the city today after spending the weekend with former comrades at the annual battalion reunion, held in Toronto. Included were Major-E. G. Jones, and Sergeant Bill Atkinson.

PROVINCIAL POLICE DON WINTER ATTIRE

Provincial Police officers throughout Ontario assumed their winter uniform attire of navy blue uniforms over the weekend, thus abandoning their conventional khaki serge uniforms until next summer. The navy blue uniforms are worn as a winter attire until May 30th of each succeeding year.

SHORT CIRCUIT CAUSE OF REAR-END CRASHES

A Frankford wedding party nearly came to grief on the Glen Miller road north of Trenton last Saturday afternoon, when eleven motor cars were in a sequence of rear-end crashes, after the lead vehicle of the celebrating wedding parade suddenly stopped. The sharp squealing of the applications of brakes rent the air and following drivers applied the brakes of their vehicles in futile efforts to avoid rear-end collisions. Fortunately no person sustained serious injuries, but several bumpers and fenders were damaged. Provincial Police were notified with Constable E. J. Soubliere investigating. However, the principal members of the wedding party, namely the bride and groom, became impatient and proceeded on their honeymoon prior to the arrival of the officer. It was suggested the driver of the lead vehicle discovered a short circuit in the steering column of his car, which prompted him to stop.

Farmers Capture Two Armed Youths In Oak Hill Sector

Alertness on the part of farmers in the Oak Hill sector resulted in the apprehension of two juveniles, who returned to the scene of their previous crimes of robbery on Saturday and were captured by John Frederick, Oak Hill, assisted by neighbors. The two lads, 18-year-old Hugh Bell and 16-year-old Floyd Andrews, both of Toronto, were armed with a loaded automatic shot gun, which they had allegedly stolen from Mr. Frederick's home last Friday evening. The lads were securely tied with ropes until Provincial Police were notified and who later secured the pair of young desperadoes in the county jail on charges of robbery.

Late last week Mr. Frederick returned home to find his home had been ransacked. Missing was a fur coat, a suit of clothes, some jewelry, a gun, shells and a suit case in which the articles were removed. On Sunday Provincial Police found the loot cached in a sand quarry some distance from the Frederick home. The goods recovered were valued at over $200.00.

Late Saturday Mr. Frederick observed two lads loitering about his farm and apparently armed. He notified neighbors of his suspicions and despite the fact the two boys were armed with a loaded shot gun the courageous farmers of the district captured them and disarmed the pair. They were found in possession of Mr. Frederick's gun which had been stolen from his farm during the family's absence two nights before. Provincial Police today revealed the pair have previously served terms in the Bowmanville Boys' Training School. They are being held on remand at the county jail.

Only One-Third Of Objective Has Been Obtained

"The response has been good to date, but we still have a long way to go if we are to achieve our objective" Chairman Claire Morgan of the Belleville Community Fund campaign stated this morning. Official figures for the first week of the drive for funds for the Y.M.C.A., Salvation Army, V.O.N. and the Children's Aid Society place the amount at $5,000, or one-third of the objective of fifteen thousand dollars.

Canvassers have yet a large area of the city to cover and campaign officials are confident that the general public of this city and district will make it possible for the fund to realize its quota.

In the meantime the work of the four services goes on apace with a constant demand on the efforts and facilities of these vitally needed organizations. There is a constant drain on financial resources as well as the physical capacities of those in charge. Coffers must be replenished if the work of these important home front units is to be carried on, and the only medium of supply is the pockets of the public.

Canvassers were out bright and early today to start the second week of the campaign, and it is hoped that the weekend will see the goal in sight if not already achieved.

POLICE BLOTTER

The suspicious actions of parties frequently the publicc place beneath the City Hall Saturday evening prompted police to investigate. As a result Chief Probert and Inspector Hayes apprehended James Wright, Picton and Isaiah Green, Deseronto, on charges of violating the L.C.A. Wright was later charged with selling intoxicants.

Disturbs Residents.

Early Sunday evening police were called to the vicinity of the intersection of Ann and Bridge Streets where it was alleged a motorcyclist was disturbing the tranquility of the Sabbath evening by racing about the streets with the machine muffler open. The rider had effected a successful disappearance before police arrived however.

Fender Damage.

Walter Longhurst, 158 King Street in Port Hope, complained to police here that a motor car had collided with his automobile near the Pinnacle-Bridge Street intersection on Saturday resulting in fender damage. The other driver merely shouted something about—"What the H—— are you driving so slowly for"—and drove away. Police are endeavoring to locate the driven of the alleged hit-and-run driver.

$61 Lost in Purse.

A local lady placed her purse, containing about $61.00 on the counter in a downtown department store, while examining some goods Saturday afternoon. When she turned to recover the purse it was gone. So was the money.

Jack Bush Buys Belleville Burial Company Business

Associated with the company for the past 17 years, Mr. Jack Bush, well-known local mortician, has purchased the Belleville Burial Company business from Mrs. J. W. Imlah and took possession on Sunday.

Announcement of the transaction was made known to the public today by Mr. Bush, who stated, that although under new management, the business will continue to be operated under its present name.

A native of the Belleville district, Mr. Bush early chose the undertaking business as his life's profession and started as apprentice with the late Mr. Imlah in February, 1928. He became a qualified mortician in 1932, when he received his certificate after taking a course at the Ontario School of Embalming in Toronto. Interested in sports, he formerly played baseball with the South Hastings League.

Assuming increased responsibilities with the Belleville Burial Company following his qualification as a mortician, Mr. Bush remained with the firm until 1942 when he entered the employ of the Canadian National Railways as a brakeman. He returned to the company upon the recent death of the late Mr. Imlah, however, and since has taken a post-graduate course in embalming and funeral management at the Banting Institute in Toronto.

Up-to-date in every respect, both in service and in equipment, the Belleville Burial Company under its new management will continue to give the same conscientious service to the public. Included in its service is a well-appointed chapel, with rolling stock equipment including a Packard hearse, a Ford service coach and a 7-passenger Plymouth sedan for funeral work. A Belleville boy, Mr. Max McGuire, has been engaged as apprentice.

Twenty-four hour ambulance service with its special Plymouth ambulance car will continue to be featured by the Belleville Burial Company under its new ownership.

Thames Estuary Bristles With Guns

London, Oct. 2—(CP)—The government revealed today that seven forts bristling with guns, built on concrete stilts above the water in the Thames Estuary, have been guarding the strategic seaborne supply route to London since 1942.

From these forts German planes, attempting to sow mines in the estuary in an effort to cut off London from seaborne supplies during the early blitz, met a terrific barrage of ack-ack fire.

The forts successfully fought off German planes planting mines and broke up E-boat attacks on assembling coastal convoys. Later they whipped up effective fire against the robot bombs and also were used as bases for sea rescue boats.

DUTCH TREATMENT FOR COLLABORATIONIST

Remembering those who had collaborated with the enemy during occupation is a very pertinent factor with the loyal people in liberated cities. Here a couple of Dutchmen after recognizing a woman collaborationist, drag her down a street in Eindhoven after the British forces entered the Dutch city.

Building Permits In September Total $40,605

With 23 permits to the value of $40,605 issued at the city hall during September one of the best building months in recent years was enjoyed in Belleville. Two permits, each for approximately $10,000, one to the Weston Bread Company and the other to the Dominion Rubber Company helped to swell the month's total considerably.

Indicative of the building expansion in the city this year is the fact that to the end of September permits to the value $184,210 had been issued by City Engineer Charles Mott. Number of permits issued this year is 139.

Cooking Classes Attract Many R.C.A.F. (W.D's)

Apparently preparing for the rehabilitation period when husbands and husbands-to-be return home from the war fronts to again resume civilian life, members of the Women's Division of the R.C.A.F. from district stations are taking full advantage of evening cooking classes offered at the Belleville Collegiate.

Of a total enrolment of 38 girls in the evening cooking classes which began last week, practically all are Air Force girls from Mountain View, Trenton, and No. 6 Repair Depot. Enrolment in all courses of evening classes at the Collegiate is 397, with classes to continue to the end of March.

Great interest is being taken in the typewriting, welding and motor mechanics classes with Principal W. S. Turner stating there is a possibility that approval for two classes in these courses will be necessary to accommodate the number of students enrolled. There are 63 enrolled in the typewriting class, 57 in the welding and 58 in the motor mechanics class.

Other courses in the office preparation classes include bookkeeping and shorthand, while there are 26 enrolled in the sewing classes. Other studies are machine shop practice, woodworking and draughting.

Early enrolment in all evening classes at the Collegiate is down slightly from last year, according to Principal Turner, but with the institution of a fee system this year it is expected attendance at classes will continue at a higher level throughout the season. This year an enrolment fee of $3 is charged each student, this being refundable if by the end of March the student has attended 80 per cent of the classes. Classes will be held Tuesday and Thursday evenings until the end of March.

Growth of C.C.F. Outlined By J. Noseworthy

Growth of the C.C.F. party in Canada from the time of its inception in Calgary back in 1932 was outlined to members of the Belleville C.C.F. club on Saturday evening when at their club rooms on upper Pinnacle Street, they were addressed by Mr. J. Noseworthy, M.P. for South York.

Speaking to a small gathering of party followers Mr. Noseworthy told his listeners that while the party was comparatively new, the principles which went to make up its platform were not new. "The C.C.F. party," he said, "had its birth as the result of a meeting of progressive thinking farmer and labor parties who were seeking more consideration from the government."

Reflecting on the growth of the Belleville club, the speaker intimated that two years ago only a few in this city candidly admitted their allegiance to the C.C.F. party, while today the local club has approximately 250 members, they having been instrumental in forming other clubs in various parts of the riding. "Twelve years after its inception the C.C.F. party is now considered a national party," he said.

Growth Termed Unique.

He termed the growth of the C.C.F. party as being unique in Canadian politics. Many obstacles had confronted its progress. Newspapers had not granted their support and generally speaking had bitterly opposed the party, while due to lack of finances, little access was had of radio time. Today with the Gallup Poll giving the party 26 per cent of the common vote in Canada, Mr. Noseworthy contended that the growth of the C.C.F. indicated the party has something in its policy which appeals to the Canadian people.

Turning to the forthcoming Federal election the speaker predicted only mediocre success for the Progressive Conservatives. Provincial elections throughout the west and eastern provinces indicated they had little to hope for. "The Progressive Conservatives," he said, "were a party with a past but with little future."

Unstinting support of volunteer workers was one of the reasons for the rapid growth of the C.C.F. party, according to the speaker. Its supporters had voluntarily talked with neighbors, persuading them to join the party and with their own money had purchased literature to further spread its policies.

Held Convention Annually.

Reason for this volunteer support of workers was given as the C.C.F. being the most democratically organized political party in Canada. It was the only party which holds its convention annually and the only party which gives prompt consideration to resolutions forwarded by outlying clubs. In contrast to this was Premier Drew's Progressive Conservative program brought out during the provincial election campaign. According to the speaker many Progressive Conservative candidates did not know of the party program prior to its enunciation by Mr. Drew.

Another reason for the voluntary support given the C.C.F. party was because of the people's liking the way it is financed. Campaign funds come directly from the pockets of the party members, this being in contrast to the policy of the two old parties. Mr. Noseworthy charged they have accepted large contributions from large companies. "People are awaking to the fact that parties accepting election funds from big monopolies cannot legislate for the interest of the common people," he said. "They are realizing they are not being governed by the government but by big interests."

"The C.C.F. party," continued the speaker," is the only party which is free to serve the interests of the common people."

Need New Economic Policy Claim.

For the post-war era Canada was in need of a new economic policy, one which would maintain full production and utilize the full resources of the country. The present economic policy, it was asserted, functions best only in time of war. Then only is full use of resources made.

In addition to maintenance of full production the post-war economic policy must provide for more adequate distribution of the nation's wealth. According to a recent bank statement there were four million bank deposits in Canada. But 93 percent of these accounts averaged only $140. Sixty percent of Canadian families received less than $1,000 per year, yet the national income was sufficient to assure an average of $3,000 yearly for each family.

In conclusion Mr. Noseworthy attacked the nation's monopolistic enterprises which he stressed, at present controlled the vast percentage of the nation's wealth. "The C.C.F. party was the only party pledged to break monopolistic control in Canada," he said. "The only way to do this," he said, "was to bring them under some kind of municipal control.

Introduced by Mr. Douglas Moxam, Mr. Noseworthy was likewise thanked by Mr. Moxam who acted as chairman for the evening.

Many District Men Arrive Home From Overseas

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 2—Three officers and twenty-three other ranks—many of them veterans of fighting in Italy and France, arrived in Kingston last night from overseas. The returning men were accorded a thunderous welcome at District Depot 3A, Fort Frontenac, by relatives, friends, civic officials and representatives of welfare organizations.

The soldiers, one of whom was a member of the Canadian Women's Army Corps, were able to depart for their homes in various sections of M.D. 3 about three hours after their arrival here as a result of a speeded up procedure of feeding, paying documentation and issuing of passes. The new accelerated system of clearing returned soldiers so that they may proceed to their home towns brought enthusiastic praise from the men themselves.

Those who returned were Captain G. A. McCormick, and Lieut. J. H. McQuaig, both of Ottawa, and Lieutenant James S. Freeman of Cornwall.

Others in the group were R.S.M. P. Turner; Private H. J. Powell, both of Kingston; Cpl. A. E. Morin, Pte. S. W. Clark, Pte. M. J. Stover, all of Peterboro; Gnr. G. T. Andress, Rockport; Pte. G. V. Brannigan, Colborne; Pte. L. J. Cooper, Stirling; Bdr. M. W. Free, Campbellford; Sgmn. R. K. Gordon, Pte. L. Turgeon and Pte. J. C. Mallory, all of Trenton; Cpl. L. Kirkey, Harold; Pte. D. H. Lott, Tamworth; Pte. G. L. Menard and Pte. C. J. V. Smith, both of Cornwall; Gnr. S. F. Warren, Brockville; Pte. H. L. Tabb, Tyrone; Pte. R. G. Schmelzer, Ashton; Pte. R. W. Neads, Bowmanville; Gnr. S. Oliver, Cobourg; Spr. W. G. Potter, Deseronto; Pte. W. E. Pringle, Picton; Pte. W. F. Publow, Perth; Gnr. A. J. Shorey, Martintown.

The only hospital case to arrive here last night was Sgt. G. A. Baggaley of Warwick.

"Happy day! Here comes your darling Mother with a package of Grape-Nuts Flakes!"

"What's come over you? You insulted her last time she came to visit us."

"But darling—this time she's bringing a giant package of delicious, nourishing Grape-Nuts Flakes!"

"Splendid! We used up the last package at breakfast this morning. You don't skimp on that cereal."

"Those malty-rich, golden-brown Grape-Nuts Flakes give me carbohydrates for energy; proteins for muscle; iron for the blood; phosphorus for teeth and bones; and other food essentials!"

Urges 'Restraint In Customer Grabbing Under Lend Lease'

London, Oct. 2 (CP)—The United States and British governments should co-operate to "restrain the policy of customer-grabbing under lend-lease," Lord Queenborough, President of the Royal Society of St. George, said today.

"Unless we can trade to our old, full measure with lands overseas, we must perish," Lord Queenborough states in the current issue of the society's publication, "Monthly Message."

Warning that "it is vital to continuing good relations that signs of this restraint be soon," Lord Queenborough adds "a successful fight for temporary markets might be bought at the cost of a crippled friendship which would eventually give entry to some third power who would impoverish both."

3 Prominent Germans For Treason Trial Say Border Sources

London, Oct. 2 —(CP)— Three prominent Germans—one of them editor of Herman Goering's newspaper, National Zeitung—will be tried on charges of treason, according to information today from German border sources.

The editor, Count Schwerin, has been accused of complicity in the abortive bomb plot against Hitler. So has Dr. Gessler, a non-Nazi who once served as minister of war in the Weimar Republic and who also is facing a Himmler trial.

The third defendant was listed as General Wagner, who allegedly refused to follow a direct order from Hitler to fortify certain Bavarian and Austrian sectors as a last line of defence on the ground that he did not want to see Germany turned into a battleground.

RETURNS HOME

Toronto, Oct. 2, (CP)—Sgt. J. W. Brabbs of the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry, is one of the first men to return from overseas under the regulation that a soldier wounded in two different engagements may be granted leave. He arrived in Toronto this morning with more than 100 officers and men. He received his first wound at Dieppe and the second in Normandy.

TRENTON

PO. Bill Rupert Reported Missing

Trenton, Oct. 2 — Pilot Officer Bill Rupert, has been officially reported missing over Germany according to official information received by relatives here.

A former graduate of Trenton High School PO. Rupert enlisted in the Spring of 1942 and after training at Lachine and Oshawa, he re-mustered at Trenton and was then posted to No. 7 Bombing and Gunnery School at Paulson, Man. Later he was transferred to Malton, Ont., where he graduated in August 1943, receiving his Bombardier Wing and Commission at the age of 19. After taking a special course at Jarvis he proceeded directly overseas.

While attending Trenton High School PO. Rupert lived with his aunt, Mrs. P. McGorman, Carrying Place Road, but his father, A. B. Rupert, resided at 26 St. Joseph Street, Toronto.

It is understood PO. Rupert had completed his first tour of operations and had made several trips on his second tour.

A keen sportsman PO. Rupert and a fellow officer, George Maut, of Middlesboro, England, landed a twenty-two pound channel cat in the Bay of Quinte just previous to their leaving Canada, though it took a four hour struggle to land the catch.

New Reported Dead.

PO. Clarence Frauts, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Frauts, York Rd., previously reported missing last January over enemy territory, is now officially reported dead and his parents have been informed that he has been buried in Germany. He enlisted in August 1940, as a wireless gunner and trained at Belleville and Mountain View, going overseas on October 6th., 1942.

A brother, F.O. F. J. (Jack) Frauts, was recently reported missing but is now known to be a prisoner of war. He enlisted first in the medical corps but later re-mustered to take a Bombardier's course, and graduated at Edmonton in February 1943, going directly overseas. On the way over his ship was torpedoed but he escaped uninjured.

Another brother, the youngest of the three, is serving in England with the R.C.A.F. as a control tower operator, while a brother-in-law W.O. 1 Jack McMaster is an aircraft inspector overseas.

Besides his parents and his two brothers and brother-in-law overseas, he is survived by two brothers and a sister all of Trenton.

Only Small Number Stores Illuminated On Sunday Night

Belleville business establishments failed to take full advantage on Sunday evening of the removal of restrictions on the illumination of advertising signs and store window lights with only a dozen or so merchants or other business places letting their lights shine forth.

With government restrictions on street lighting lifted on Sunday evening store owners were permitted to illuminate their store fronts and street advertising signs for the first time since restrictions went into effect in September, 1942, when conservation of electrical energy was deemed necessary in order that additional power could be supplied war industry.

It is expected a different aspect will present itself along Front Street this evening, however, as during the past week many store owners were seen readying lighting equipment in preparation for the removal of restrictions. Undoubtedly few store owners felt like making a special trip to their places of business on Sunday evening to turn on lights and thus take advantage of the lifting of lighting restrictions.

Hindered by Parts Shortage.

Though the ban on street and window lighting officially was lifted on Oct. 1, after two years and 10 days, many Ontario cities including Toronto, were more than 50 per cent dimmed Sunday night, says The Canadian Press.

Most Ottawa streets were ablaze with lights as flashing Neon display signs and store front lights were turned on, but the Dominion Parliament Buildings and parks under Federal jurisdiction remained unchanged. There were occasional clusters of brightness on Toronto streets as a few store owners turned on display and window lights. Street lighting in Toronto is not due to be turned on until Nov. 1.

The main difficulty experienced in most Ontario cities was a shortage of parts for Neon signs and bulks for other display signs and window fixtures. Guelph, Woodstock and Brockville showed few lights though the lights are due to go on in Woodstock tonight.

Power to Sault Ste. Marie merchants—supplied by a private company—has been used for street lights for almost a year since a The bain difficulty experienced civilian defence headquarters there.

FIVE AIRCRAFT DESTROYED

Cairo, Oct. 2 —(AP)—, R.A.F. Beaufighters destroyed five more German aircraft over Aegean islands during the night, bringing total enemy losses to 15 within the last six days, the Middle East Air communique announced today.

The majority of the planes shot down were large personnel-carrying transports, indicating the Germans were attempting to evacuate key men from the islands.

SAYS HUNS THINK HITLER AND GANG WILL TRY TO FLEE

Observer's Story is That Few Will Attempt to Commit Suicide

"LEADERS IN ECLIPSE"

By EDWIN SHANKE
(AP Staff Writer)

Stockholm, Oct. 2 — (AP) — "Everywhere Germans are speculating on plans of Hitler and others for escape when the country collapses," a trained observer said here after a five-year residence in Germany.

Nazi leaders, he says, virtually are in eclipse, and "enjoy less and less respect from the people."

This is the situation as he tells it:

Hitler once was placed on a pedestal as the "man who could make no mistake." Now, when Hitler's name is mentioned at all, it most likely will be critically.

Before the July 20 putsch, the "Heil-Hitler" greeting already had virtually disappeared. Now efforts are being made to reinstate it.

Soldiers seldom die "for the Fuehrer," as death announcements stated generally at the start of the war. In newspapers little is written about Hitler. He rarely speaks officially.

The man whom Hitler designated as his successor should he die — Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, chairman of the Council for Defence of the Reich — has disappeared entirely from the public eye. He is in his own headquarters at Karinhall hunting lodge, outside Berlin. All powers he once had now have been ceded to the three men who always had been his opponents — Paul Joseph Goebbels, Reichs-Plenipotentiary for the total war effort; Heinrich Himmler, Commander-in-Chief of the Home Army, and Albert Speer, Minister of Munitions and Minister of Building.

The question being generally asked is: "How do Nazi leaders intend to save themselves when the war ends in Allied victory?"

"According to common conception in Germany," my informant said, "They all will flee abroad. People claim Hitler has his own giant U-boat in Gdynia, and with others intends to flee to Japan.

"Others are supposed to have prepared for flight to South America and men such as Goering to Sweden. Everyone believes only a few will dare commit suicide."

Germany Must Be Useful Constituent Of Europe's Economy

London, Oct. 2 (CP)—Taking to task those suggesting that Germany be turned into an agricultural state after the war, the Times of London said today that German production "must be raised to its highest point and modelled and organized on lines which will make it a useful constituent of an organised European economy."

"The notion recently mooted that the interest of Europe or the world be served by the obliteration of Germany's productive capacity and a return of the German people to primitive agriculture may serve to express a legitimate indignation," the paper said editorially. "But it does not otherwise qualify for serious discussion."

Warning that supervision and direction of German industry is "a central responsibility which the principal Allied powers will have to shoulder," the Times said "a war ravaged Europe can afford less than ever before to dispense with the contribution which German skill and German labor can make to recovery."

THREE KILLED IN CRASH

Sydney, N. S., Oct. 2 — (CP) — Three men were killed and two others were injured in the crash of a United States aircraft near here last night, police reported this morning.

The plane crashed into a swamp in the middle of thick woods. Poor visibility was thought to be the cause of the accident. It was raining hard at the time.

Names of the men involved in the accident have not yet been released.

● Citizens of Ontario have responded splendidly in support of necessary restrictions in the use of electricity. Inconvenience from "dim out" conditions, darkened store windows and partly lighted streets have been patriotically accepted in order to save power for the tools of victory. The additional voluntary savings of power by Ontario people also contributed substantially to the victories in Europe.

Your Hydro, which had the responsibility of carrying out the orders of the Dominion Power Controller in Ontario, is grateful for the co-operation of Hydro users.

One trying phase of the war is passing. Now, by conserving and concentrating our efforts for final victory, we may look forward with confidence to an early day when abundant power will be available for peacetime use. The added strength that we have built for war can then be used to bring greater light and safety to more Ontario streets and homes, and take over innumerable tasks on farms, in our homes, and industries.

Plan now to take full advantage, after victory, of the added leisure, convenience and safety that abundant electricity can bring to you.

HOW TO CONSERVE FUEL
SIX IMPORTANT RULES

1. Avoid overheating. Do not wait until house is thoroughly warm before checking fire.
2. Keep the ash pit clean.
3. Replace warped or burned-out grates.
4. Keep a fair depth of ashes above the grates. The fire will hold better and will be more readily controlled.
5. Learn how to control the heat with the draft doors and dampers in flues.

(The foregoing points apply in firing your furnace with every type of coal.)

6. When burning soft coal, furnace should be cleaned every week; for hard coal, every two weeks.

HERE is a saving that every householder can easily make. With coal in the bin, don't dig in and pile the furnace high. Remember—every shovelful brings the day closer when more coal will have to be ordered. Save coal—it is essential war material. Stretch each ton to the limit—Save One Shovelful out of every Five—to release much-needed fuel for war purposes, and so back up the efforts of Canada's fighting sons.

Dover-Calais

Two more places on the English Channel are happy, Dover and Calais. The people of these two wellknown towns have felt the war with severity, the English town of Dover which is closest to France which the Germans had overrun and Calais which the Germans hoped in vain to use as a base against Britain.

Saturday the people of Dover were told officially that they need fear no more the bombardment as German long range guns at Cap Gris Nez had been silenced and taken by the Canadian army. They were able to come out of their retreats. Many had been living in caves in the white chalk cliffs especially during the past month of bombardment when the Germans were using up their ammunition on the Doverites and their town in foreknowledge that they (the Germans) would soon be forced to yield.

Then swiftly came the capture of Calais by the Canadians after the expiry of the cessation of the battle at Calais for a day to allow the evacuation of the civilians from the port.

Now the Hun is gone from that narrow stretch, the place where the Germans expected might be one chosen by the Allied commanders for invasion of Europe but it was not for they chose rather the beaches of Normandy.

Dover, one of the oldest of the towns along the channel, because of its proximity to France, is mentioned early in history. It has an ancient castle, a Roman lighthouse, and a massive Norman keep. On a clear day the prospect from Dover includes the French coast from Boulogne to Gravelines and the cliffs from Folkeston to Ramsgate. It was one of the Cinque Ports, is a market town, parliamentary borough and a watering place as well as a terminus of the Dover-Calais route.

Calais, first known in early times as a fishing village, was taken by King Edward III of England in 1346 and remained in English hands until 1558 when it was taken by the Duke de GuGise. During the last war it was greatly expanded as a port for the use of British and American armies engaged on the western front.

These two events, the freeing of Dover from bombardment and the liberation of Calais show in an impressive manner the failure of Hitler and his diabolical ambition. Calais and Dover were in the mind of that "lunatic" as Field Marshal Montgomery calls Hitler. But Dover, though only a few miles across the water, frustrated all the fury that Hitler threw against it. All that Hitler could do has availed him nothing.

The markettown, the closest to German-occupied Calais, Hitler could not shake. The white cliffs of Dover stand British, Calais has been recovered to France, Canadians are rejoiced to know through the Canadian soldiery.

Here is written in these two places, on either side of the Channel, the symbol of the end of barbarism in modern attire, Hitlerized Germany, beaten and smashed in the Allied drive of liberation. Long since the Allied armies passed by in their sweep and Calais and other French ports and places along the French coast were invested and besieged by the Allies and have fallen—all but Dunkerque.

Somewhere on the soil of France, near Calais perhaps, Adolf Hitler stood in 1940 and could scarcely believe it possible that he was within a few miles of England, the goal of his ambition on the way to world conquest. That was the nearest he got to it. It is said Hitler's ships with which he was planning to cross to Britain were so severely lashed and battered in ports along the continental side of the Channel and North Sea that the Hun gave up as impossible the idea of attempting to invade Britain.

The cliffs of Dover still stand, the people return to their homes not fearing gun shells any more, they rejoice and feel the sense of liberation from their ordeal with pride and thanksgiving. While on the French coast the people of a seaport rejoice in liberation from possession of the enemy.

Hitler's Rug-Eating

The German Nazis don't like the suggestions that Adolf Hitler, their Fuehrer, eats rugs in a rage, particularly a rage stemming out of Allied successes. They have issued instructions that everything possible be done to prevent and halt this talk about the German leader.

The New York Times comments on this evidence of German distaste for such comments and says "spoofing isn't tolerated in Germany and certain recent remarks about Hitler can hardly be regarded as other than hostile propaganda." Of this the Times says, "The anecdote befits so singular a person. Against no other 'leader genius' than Hitler has this charge of rug-cutting been brought."

The Times goes on to mention another fact. "A dispatch from Rome says that the Eighth Army troops have captured instructions issued to German First Parachute Division troops asking them to fight against the use of the phrase "If the Fuehrer only knew." The conditional form convicts the phrase. As we all know, only the Fuehrer knows, and he knows everything. But his treacherous defenders tell the officers they are warning that they "may rest assured that he knows far more than they suspect." Could there be a more perfidious way of putting it? An almost twin expression would be: "He isn't so much a fool as he looks," or as you might say, "talks." This is evident propaganda. Isn't it hard enough to be bothered continually by the manoeuvres of military idiots without being called, in effect, an idiot of purest ray serene?"

So the Germans don't like these things. Then what do they think of Mr. Winston Churchill's remark the other day about "the warlike genius" of Corporal Adolf Schickelgruber?

The Weather Man

I'd hate to be the weather man
And all the weather have to plan.
No matter how he tries to please,
Someone with him disagrees.

He works all day and all night too,
In fact, his work is never through.
And if we freeze or if we tan,
We blame it on the weather man.

In summer when the sun is hot,
We try to find a cooler spot.
We fret, and fume, and sweat, and blow,
And wish for winter's ice and snow.

But never satisfied are we,
Complaining creatures that we be.
When comes the winter to our clime,
We long for "the good old summertime."

And if he sends us rain or shine,
Heat or cold, storm or fine,
There'll always be someone to pan
The poor hard-working weather man.

Indestructible Seas

(London Calling)

The only real—the only dependable—interior lines are the sealanes. You can bomb and batter roads and railways until they are at any rate temporarily unusable.

But you can't blow up the oceans. Unless you command the seas yourself you cannot stop your enemies from bringing in by sea more troops, arms, and ammunition in a day than you can bring overland in weeks.

Look back at the North African campaign. Rommel's men with only 200 miles of sea to cross were beaten by the British troops brought 12,000 miles by sea. Men and materials were taken on that long 12,000 miles voyage in such vast quantities that the Axis forces were overwhelmed.

Wartime Nurseries

In England and Wales there are now 1,500 wartime day nurseries where babies are cared for while their mothers are busy with various kinds of war work, says The Ottawa Citizen. The Ministry of Health has decided that no further nurseries are needed.

JUST FOLKS

TWO VIEWPOINTS

Man thinks his wife will never see
Another male so fine as he;
That round about there can be none
She'd happier be to look upon;
No male with judgment quite so clear;
No kinder man; no cleverer here;
Not one, be tempted how she may,
With whom she's up and run away.

But lovely woman's not so sure
Her hold on love is that secure.
She thinks some other woman can
With artfulness get any man.
She knows the way her sex beguiles
The silly males with cunning wiles,
And knows when pretty maids they see
How weak and foolish men can be!

Thus men and women all life through
Cling to a different point of view.
Proud, peacock man is sure that he
The finest of his kind must be,
But woman, beautiful or plain,
Not so complacent can remain.
Whether she has or not, appeared,
Always the other dame is feared.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

(Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease, diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received only a few can be answered here. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address Dr. William Brady, care of this Newspaper.)

UNTO THE FOURTH GENERATION.

Not since I visited the certified milk farm where I had been promised all the fresh milk I wanted, have I been so uplifted and then so cruelly let down — at the farm they made me pretend to eat some extremely uninteresting beefsteak and stuff while the men were milking, and then, dadblast it, they went and cooled the milk before they served it. If I want cold milk I can get it out of our own refrigerator. When I want fresh milk I want it straight from the cow—or goat—and no fooling.

Well, today's mail brings a letter that establishes some kind of record. Here, read it:

Dear Mr. Brady—

I was talking to my husband's grandfather who is now 87 years old and is in perfect health except for (well, we'll delete mention of the exception.)

Grandfather told me that his family (wife and four children) read your column and had always considered your advice of much value.

He said he once had his son-in-law (my husband's father) look you up when you were in ...... giving a lecture, and that you were a good natured man, robust with health, a fine man and an honest doctor (all right, that's enough blarney to indicate that I'm no Scandinavian.)

Grandfather was born in .. he and Grandma, now 83, are the dearest, most lovable (here we go again, folks ..). They are expecting their fifth great grandchild—our first—in December and would appreciate receiving "Preparing for Maternity" and "The Brady Baby Book."

It may be a bit presumptive to call it the fourth generation, but I submit the letter as evidence that I have been health adviser for at least 3½ generations of the family, and that, I believe, is a record, so far as the health columning goes.

But health columning and answering many letters every day is not all beer and bowling. I was lifted to the skies by this letter. Plumb delighted. And then suddenly I was dashed o the ground when I found the writer signed only initials—I hope that was only thoughtlessness.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Eye Exercises

You recommended eye exercises in your column. My doctor says I have myopia (near-sightedness) and eye exercises can do me no good. He says it will tend to progress toward the worse as I grow older. I am a school teacher. The doctor says I should give up teaching and find work which doesn't require use of my eyes for close fine work such as reading, drawing, needle-work. Is he right? (M. L.)

Answer—Yes. Only eye exercise I have recommended for myopia or other fault of vision is frequent looking up from near work and off at distant scene, and every kind of open air play, work or recreation that affords the chance to rest the eyes by viewing distant scenery. There is some evidence to support the opinion that vitamin D deficiency may be a factor of myopia (near sightedness) in youth. It can do no harm in any case to adopt the practice of supplementing the daily diet with a good ration of vitamin D.

Calcium is Chalk and Chalk is Calcium

Your advice about calcium and vitamin D has stopped me from eating chalk. For years I had had the craving. (Mrs. K. A.)

Answer—Well, chalk is calcium carbonate, not so pure as the calcium gluconate, calcium carbonate, di-calcium phosphate, etc., commonly used in medicine, but not so different either. Perhaps the vitamin D enabled you to assimilate calcium better, and so your body's need was satisfied. Most people suffer from calcium shortage. Send stamped envelope bearing your address, and ask for pamphlet The Calcium Shortage—but do not send a clipping—you must ask for what you want.

AND/OR

"And/or" is a device frequently found in legal and commercial documents.

It means "either both or only one," as the case may be, and indicates that the idea expressed is both distributive and inclusive.

"John Brown and/or Paul Jones" signifies the same as "John Brown and Paul Jones or either of them;" that is, these two men are responsible individually as well as collectively.

The conjunctions are so written to avoid using them side by side—"and or"—which would be awkward as well as confusing.

The technical name of the short slanting stroke between "and" and "or" in the device is "vergule," a French word derived from Latin "virgula," diminutive of "virga," rod, and literally meaning "little rod." It was the earliest form of the comma and was also used by early printers where a hyphen is now employed to indicate the division of a word at the end of a line.

"And/or" is of questionable value even in legal and commercial documents and certainly it has no proper function in ordinary writing.

In 1938 Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, made an effort to prevent the use of the clumsy and meaningless device in bills passed by Congress.

"Whoever invented 'and/or'" declared the Senator, "should be in an institution for imbeciles."

In the same year Justice Chester A. Fowler of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin said:

"'And/or' is a befuddling, nameless thing, a Janus-faced verbal monstrosity, neither word nor phrase, the child of a brain of someone too lazy or too dull to know what he did mean, now commonly used by lawyers in drafting legal documents, through carelessness or ignorance or as a cunning device to conceal rather than express a meaning."

World's Oldest Alliance Survives the War

(By Sir E. John Russell in London Calling)

John of Gaunt helped the Portuguese defend their country 550 years ago England and Portugal were already friends of long standing. The accords ripened with the years. Following a visit to Portugal Sir E. John reports the friendship still strong, despite the difficulties which the country has faced during the years of war.

I recently had occasion to go to Portugal—one of the few European countries the Germans haven't overrun. It's a neutral country, but a friendly neutral, and always has been even in the dark days of 1941 when France had fallen and people who didn't know us, very well thought that we should fall, too.

It's a pleasant country to go to and in peacetime the way there was pleasant, too; about three-and-a-half days on a comfortable, roomy ship with a friendly ship's company and nobody in any indecent hurry. But nowadays you don't travel like that. I went by air, blacked out all the way, going by a secret route, so that inquisitive Germans shouldn't know where to look for us—and landed safely in Lisbon about seven hours after starting off. And then I had a vivid feeling of stepping straight out of war into peace.

Lisbon is a good city to look at; it's about the size of Melbourne, and has Melbourne's air of friendliness. It is built on a land-locked harbor big enough to take a tremendous lot of ships, surrounded by hills and very attractive; it would be illuminating to hear a Sydney man and a Lisbon man discussing which of their harbors is the finest in the world.

Seen from the harbor Lisbon seems to climb up the hill; the water front is very busy and at its centre is a handsome square surrounded by some fine buildings. The houses on the hill have got the tall windows and hanging shutters you see so often in Western Europe; they are mostly white or light colored with red roofs. But the hills are broken so the sky line is not hard and straight and according to where you are standing it is dominated by the great domed Church of the Star, or by the wonderful twelfth-century Cathedral or an ancient battlemented castle that goes back to the days when Portugal was struggling for independence, first against the Moors and then against the Kings of Castile.

HELP FROM JOHN OF GAUNT

And your Portuguese friends remind you that the English helped them in this struggle; they tell you how John of Gaunt (whom we all remember through reading Shakespeare at school) came out and fought with them, and how their king married his daughter so that she became Queen of Portugal. It was a long while ago, more than 550 years, but even that wasn't the beginning of the friendship between England and Portugal; our alliance with them was already well established.

Actually ours is the oldest alliance in the world, and this is a fact about which you hear a good deal in Portugal; both they and we are proud of it. I got some touching examples of this at the time of Mr. Churchill's illness. It was easy to see that the people were feeling this as a personal sorrow. One lady told me that her little girl of three had asked her that morning in an anxious voice. 'How is Mr. Churchill today?' and that her little boy of five had prayed for him when he said his evening prayer. As often happens with countrymen and sailors the Portuguese have a deep sense of religion; they are mainly Catholic.

But, all the same Lisbon is a city at peace and I found that strange. You go round the streets; the shops are very good; one street in particular has shops with beautiful gold filigree work — an art learned from the Moors; the streets round the centre are packed with people of all kinds, townspeople, country people, sea people and women with baskets of fish on their heads, very skilfully dodging the traffic.

You see mules with baskets hanging from their sides, country carts, good city motor vans, and taxis darting about so that you would think there must be an accident, yet there isn't — at least I never saw one. Leaving the centre of the town and climbing up the hill are the streets — some wide, some narrow — where people live. Many of the houses are adorned with porcelain tiles often making a picture; this, too, they learned from the Moors. The upper windows usually have balconies, often of nice iron work. There are some interesting old biuldings too, but not as many as there might have been for an earthquake in 1755 destroyed much of the old city.

But you have to go into the country to see Portugal completely. There you find a lot of very attractive little towns, many of them with churches or houses or something or other worth travelling many miles to see. There are lots of villages, too, and famhouses and cottages scattered over the countryside; and they grow some things that you don't commonly see elsewhere.

There's the cork tree; an oak, but a very special kind, for its bark can be split off without injury to the tree, and that bark is cork. The tree proceeds to make new bark and so you get a regular supply. Then, too, there are olives. Almost everywhere there are grapes, especially in the North, and these are made into wine. They do their agriculture well because they are interested in it; you get the impression in Portugal that you are in a land of country gentlemen; and certainly some of the homes I've visited both in Lisbon and in the country have been very attractive.

NEVER FAR FROM THE SEA

But in Portugal you are never far from the sea, and the Portuguese have always been good sailors. In the old days they played a great part in exploring the earth and one of their sailors, Vasco da Gama, was the first to find the way round Africa to India. Today there are no new lands to find, but their sailors are as good as ever, and their fishing fleets helped to feed not only Portugal but other countries as well. They are specially successful with sardines, of which we buy great quantities, also they catch a good deal of cod which their fleets bring home for salting, but that isn't a dish we are keen on.

It is this combination of country gentleman and sailor that gives the Portuguese people much of their distinctive character. It gives them a keen sense of humor and the power of extracting a laugh out of an unpleasant situation, and of making the most of any good things that come their way.

My own particular job in life is agriculture and I found Portugal very interesting, because although it is only small it has a remarkable range of climates. In the north towards the sea the summers are so warm that maize is the standard grain crop, but as you go inland the climate gets so much colder that even wheat won't stand up to it and they have to grow rye; it is one of the few regions where a short motor run will take you out of maize into rye.

Then as you go south you get into the region of very high quality wines, the Douro valley, where port wine — Portugal's prime speciality — is produced and sent down to Oporto to be shipped abroad.

For years much of this wine has come to England. It is particularly favored in academic circles, where they take little but insist on that little being good.

Well, that bit of our English life is closely tied up with north Portugal. Then as you go south of Lisbon you get into drier country: the region of the cork oak, and in still drier parts the ilex oak which produces big acorns on which they feed their pigs. Here, too, are olives, and everywhere wheat. For they grow wheat, though in peace time not enough for themselves, as other crops are more profitable. Then right in the south is the warmest part: sub-tropical, producing delicious oranges and other fruits.

English people get on very well in Portugal, and there is quite a good-sized English colony there; some people retired there before the war, others were on business and are concerned with buying the things that Portugal exports: wines, especially port, sardines, cork. Others are concerned with the things that Portugal imports: coal, cotton, wheat, fertilisers, motors, etc. They like the sunshine and the genial climate, the even more genial people; the kindly honest servants that help them run their houses, and the general atmosphere of cheerfulness and friendliness.

Penny Paradise of Old Is Gone Forever

Since taxation and other causes have increased the price of so many things in recent years, I have noticed a wistful expression coming on the faces of some of the older generation when they begin to talk about the prices which were current in the Golden Age—or ought we to call it the Copper Age?—of their young manhood, says "Y.Y." in The New Statesman and Nation. Especially in public houses the elderly are given to recalling the vanished cheapness of the poor man's luxuries. "Why, bless my soul," I heard a gray-haired publican saying the other day, "when I first started in this business, a customer would come in and ask for a glass of beer and put down a penny. And that wasn't all he got for his penny. We kept clay pipes in stock for our customers, and, if he wanted one, he got it for nothing. And, if he wanted a box of matches, he could have that for nothing, too. All this, mind you, and all we got for it was a penny. I sometimes wonder how we made it pay, but we did."

As one listened to him, one felt that one might almost have been listening to a passage from some Utopian romance. In Utopia, as it is imagined by the best people, perhaps, the customer would have been given the beer, too, for nothing; but to get beer, a pipe, and matches for a penny is probably as near Utopian conditions as most of us dare conceive in our dreams.

Pensioner Sighs for Old Days

I know an old age pensioner who has again and again said to me, when putting down his tenpence for a pint of beer: "I remember the time when I could get this for twopence." As he fills his pipe with tobacco, costing something in the neighborhood of two shillings an ounce, he tells me: "Threepence an ounce it used to cost. We'll never see that again." He smiles a little wryly as he comments on the change. At the same time there is a certain pride in his tone, as though he wished to convey to his younger auditors how much they missed in not having been born between 70 and 80 years ago.

Like the old age pensioner, I, too, can hardly help feeling that I am describing a wonderland when I tell one of the young that I once lived in a city in which a small whisky cost twopence, and a "special" twopence halfpenny, and where twopence was the ordinary price of a pint of porter or a bottle of Guinness. It was considered a breach of descencies in some circles in which every penny mattered to ask for a drink that cost more than twopence. A frequently told story of the time concerned a man in a public house who, on being asked what he would have to drink, said: "I guess I'll have a Bass"—the price of which was twopence-halfpenny—to which the man who was treating him replied: "Guess again, and guess bitter."

Cigarets Dropped in Price

Cigarets, on the other hand, were dearer in my boyhood than in later years of my youth. When I first became a secret, though still only an occasional smoker, a packet of 10 cigarets cost sixpence — a price which ultimately fell to twopence. I do not think pipe tobacco cheapened proportionately. My first pipe mixtures cost me fourpence-halfpenny an ounce, and in the strong air of the seaside I used sometimes to buy an ounce of plug or twist for threepence. Youths with recherche tastes used to pay sevenpence an ounce for a tobacco called Old Judge, but this was regarded by most smokers as an extravagance, beyond the normal pocket.

It is a curious fact that, when men gloat over the low prices of the past, it is nearly always of the luxuries they are thinking. Economic historians are interested in the price of the 2lb. loaf fifty years ago, but I have never heard it mentioned in casual conversion in an inn. Many people like myself, who do not happen to be responsible for paying household bills, could not even tell you what the 2lb. loaf costs today. If I sat down to an examination paper in which all the questions referred to the current prices of the necessaries of life, I doubt whether I could secure a single mark. I know neither what milk nor what meat costs. The price of a pound of sugar is as far outside the scope of my knowledge as the area of the Caspian Sea.

50-year-old Listings Intriguing

Even so, as a reader I can easily become absorbed in lists of prices. I like to learn what a chicken cost in the time of Queen Elizabeth and how much people had to pay for a pound of tea in the reign of Queen Anne. I like to know even what a pound of apples cost as recently as the Victorian Nineties. Hence, it was with considerable pleasure that I read a postcard recently sent to me on the back of which was printed a catalogue of the prices charged for a great variety of articles in Hull fifty years ago or so. The compiler of the postcard has taken his facts from the advertisements that appeared at the time in the Hull newspapers. Some of the prices, I confess, astonish me. Take, for example, the prices of boots and shoes of all sizes in 1890:—

Ladies 1/4d.; beaded toes, 1/11d.; Satin shoes all colors, 2/11d.; Real Morocco calf, 3/11d.; Gents' genuine calf, all sizes, 4/11d.; Girls' patent Oxford shoes, 2/6d. and 2/9d.

The prices seemed all the more incredible to me, since I clearly remembered going into a shop, as a schoolboy, to be measured for a pair of boots which were to cost 30/-. It was the dearest shop in town, no doubt, but I should have been surprised to hear that there was even one local shop in which I could have got boots of any kind for 4/11d. a pair. Most people considered that the American boots which began to be imported in great numbers a year or two later and cost 16/6 a pair were marvels of cheapness.

Paradise in Sweets for Children

Hull, however, seems to have been a remarkably economical town in which to do one's shopping. Butterscotch, for example, was advertised at 11d. a lb. I was myself, a butterscotch addict, but I never paid less than 4 1/2d. a packet for it, and that was in a shop that boasted of its popular prices. What I paid for acid drops I cannot remember; in Hull in 1897 they cost 2d. a lb. I can readily believe that a pound of dates could be bought for a penny; as a child, I used to go into a small shop for a halfpenny-worth of sweets and was given an enormous quantity for my money.

Announcement of change in Spirits Ration

EFFECTIVE OCTOBER 2nd, 1944

COMMENCING October 2nd, 1944, and until further notice, every individual permit holder will be permitted to purchase monthly one bottle of spirits (25 or 26 ounces) or two half bottles as available.

As a result of the restrictions imposed by the Dominion Government under the Wartime Alcoholic Beverages Order P.C.11374, it was necessary to reduce the monthly ration of spirits to 13 ounces to assure adequate supplies of spirits until the end of the year. In increasing the ration it should be explained to the public that unless the restrictions imposed by the Dominion Government are removed a similar restriction will be necessary again next year, although the Board, except for the Dominion Restriction, would be able to make available for distribution stocks of spirits in excess of the present ration.

In any event, however, the ration becoming effective on October 2nd can be maintained throughout the winter months, so it is hoped that the public will co-operate by not buying in excess of actual requirements.

Two New Scarf Styles

The print called violet faces, on a stole, is here used as a draped sash; on the head, a square scarf printed in the four face designs of color to match the stole scarf, is tied into smart turban.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

The gaiety of prints continues into Winter's scene with a series of new scarfs designed by Marcel Vertes, whose angel-faced sketches in charming color arrangements are familiar both in printed pictures and fabrics.

The stole, a long, narrow scarf, returns with Vertes designs, and one may use it as a belt, scarf, headband, neck circling plastron, etcetera. The usual square scarf of multiple uses is ready in several new prints, in bright color combinations to accent new season plain dress colors.

WEDDINGS

MARTIN—MILLER

The Free Methodist Parsonage, Harrowsmith, was the scene of a pretty wedding when Lois Aerial, only daughter of Rev. and Mrs. P. O. Miller, became the bride of Pte. Wesley Ernest Martin, Barriefield Camp, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Martin, Sharpe's Corners.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. A. Daw, of Kingston, at one p.m., Tuesday, September 26, in the presence of immediate relatives and a number of friends.

Given in marriage by her father, the lovely dark-haired bride was gowned in a floor length model of ivory brocaded satin, fashioned with fitted bodice and sweetheart neckline. A coronet of dainty white rose blossoms formed her headdress, from which fell a finger-tip veil of white silk net. A bouquet of pink roses and maidenhair fern completed the charming costume.

The bride's attendant was Miss Delores Shillington, Harrowsmith, who wore a floor length dress of white sheer, Grecian design, with insets of lace, and long bishop sleeves. Her flowers were orange and yellow gladioli, with fern.

Mr. Bruce Shangraw, Harrowsmith, was best man.

As the wedding party entered the room, the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin was played by Miss Keitha Charlton, who also played "I Love You Truly" during the signing of the register.

Following the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served, Mrs. Miller, mother of the bride, wearing a heavenly blue printed silk crepe suit-dress, with corsage of pink asters and fern, and Mrs. Martin, mother of the groom, wearing a dress of blue printed silk, with corsage of mauve asters, received the guests.

Pte. and Mrs. Martin left for Niagara Falls, Kitchener, and other points west, and upon their return will reside in Kingston. For travelling the bride chose an all-wool suit of king's blue, with trapunto embroidery in navy, and matching accessories.

Wedding guests included Mr. and Mrs. William L. Miller, Mrs. Veaty Eaton, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Campney, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Hawker and sons, Paul and Lloyd, Mrs. Wesley Thomas and daughter, Ruth, Mrs. Arthur Miller and sons Russel and Richard, Mrs. Richard Bringman, all of Picton.

SHAPPEE—SMITH

The chancel of Christ Church, arranged with baskets of dahlias and the altar with asters and zinnias, was the scene of a pretty early Autumn wedding on Saturday afternoon, September 30, at three o'clock, when Margaret Marie Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Smith, became the bride of Sgt. John Clifford Shappee, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Shappee. The Rev. Wm. J. Robinson, of Tweed, was the officiating clergyman or the occasion.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. Calvert, and during the signing of the register, Master Ronald Elmy sang "I Love Thee".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked lovely in a long gown of traditional white satin, accentuated with insets of lace and fashioned with long sleeves ending in points over her wrists, sweetheart neckline, tight fitting bodice and softly gathered full skirt falling into a slight train. Her fingertip veil of tulle was caught to her hair with a Mary Queen of Scots headdress. She carried an arm bouquet of red roses.

Miss Olive Smith, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, and Miss Betty Shappee, sister of the groom, as bridesmaid, were wearing floor length models in pastel pink and ice blue taffeta respectively. Both wore half hats which were in matching hue to their gowns and dusted with veiling. The maid of honor carried a Colonial bouquet of Rapture roses, batchelor buttons and scabiosa, while the bridesmaid had a Colonial bouquet of Briarcliff roses, batchelor Buttons and scabiosa.

Sgt.-Major B. F. Davy, of Napanee, was groomsman, and the ushers were Messrs. Robert Ragsdale and George Wonhacott.

The bride's mother chose an effective ensemble in deep toned fuchsia, black accessories and corsage of Talisman roses for the reception at the home following the ceremony. The mother of the groom was attired in a rust suit complemented with black accessories and corsage of Rapture roses.

For travelling to Toronto and points west, the bride selected a chocolate brown gabardine suit, accessories in the same shade and corsage of Briarcliff roses.

Three - Day Conference Hears Many Addresses, Discussions on Youth Movement

BANQUET HELD

Don Williams, Chatham Street, was elected president of the Bay of Quinte Conference Young People's Union at the annual convention held in Bridge Street United Church over the weekend. The secretary is Miss Helen White, of Port Hope, and the treasurer, Mr. Roy Ormiston, of Brooklyn.

Upwards of two hundred and fifty delegates from the various sections of the Conference area attended the three-day convention which formally closed Sunday night with an impressive candle-light service held by the Belleville Presbytery in the church.

Delegates were billeted with United Church members of the city. Luncheons were served at Y.M.C.A., Tabernacle United Church and the Conference banquet held in Bridge Street United Church. Official welcome was extended by the host minister, the Rev. Dr. James Semple.

Theme addresses were given throughout the conference by Rev. Roy Richard, while business and fellowship groups were conducted during the Friday and Saturday sessions. Sunday was marked with impressive services with the Rev. Roy Rickard speaking on "Living a Life That Counts," during the morning service and the Rev. Basil Thompson preaching on "What Will I Do With My Life?" at the evening worship. Mr. Thompson is the president of the Bay of Quinte Conference.

Short Worship Service

The session Saturday morning opened with a short worship service in charge of Oshawa Presbytery.

Bible study and fellowship groups were in charge of Floyd Howlett and Morley Clark, students of Victoria College.

Rev. Charles Dawe of Aylmer, Quebec, entertained us for fifteen minutes at the organ.

The first theme address was given by Rev. Roy Rickard, the speaker for the weekend. The topic was "Living a life that counts." He mentioned theree conditions that one should fulfil in order to make life count. First, every young person in order to make life count needs a religious faith — a faith in God and a consciousness of His abiding presence. Second, live a life that is pure. The third condition is a high and holy purpose. In conclusion, we need to recognize what Christ has done for us in order that we may live a Christ life that is best and make life count.

Discussion Groups

Following the address the commission groups met. There were five:

1. Your Future led by Taylor Franklin, Albert College, Belleville.
2. Excellent Investment, Marion Daniels, Foxboro.
3. Efficient Organization, Rev. Lois Carlson, Morrisburg.
4. Serving Others, Miriam Henderson, Hartington.
5. Recreation, Fun for All, Loretta McDougall, Peterboro.

Dinner was served at Tabernacle Church.

The afternoon sessions opened with a worship service in charge of Cobourg Presbytery, followed by the second meeting of the commission groups.

Slate Accepted.

The slate of officers brought in by the nominating committee was accepted.

The report of the legislative committee was made by Warren Trotter.

The topic for the second theme address by Rev. Roy Rickard was "How can I make my life count?"

It is possible for us to make life count by our examples. Also through the words which one speaks. We make our influence felt too through our spirit.

There are certain instruments we may all use to make life count.

1. Instrument of prayer.
2. Instrument of the Christian Church.
3. using our own personal influence to win others for Christ we can make life count.
4. We need to live in the close and intimate and vital fellowship of Jesus Christ.

The highlights of the evening were first of all the fellowship banquet at which there were about 200 present. Following the banquet we were favored with selections by a male quartet from the high school, solo by Eleanor Clements of St. Thomas, piano solo by Br. Gordon. Greetings were brought from Baptist and Anglican Young People's groups.

The second highlight was a period of music appreciation by Rev. Charles Dawe. It was an hour and a half of unsurpassed entertainment.

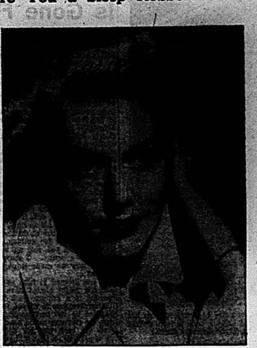
Are You a Sleep Robber?



Hard-working Jinx Falkenberg keeps fresh by getting plenty of sleep

By HELEN FOLLETT

Women who rob themselves of sleep, who stay out late or prowl around the house at all hours of the night, won't get a mite of sympathy from this doctor of pulchritude when they bawl about their good looks griefs. Unless the body receives sufficient rest, during which time nature makes repairs and sends the nervous system off duty, the skin will wrinkle early and lose coloring, eyes will lack lustre, the youthful lines of the anatomy will disappear.

The human engine can stand so much strain and no more. If you are up at seven, you should be in bed by eleven, ten o'clock is even better. Women who cut down their sleeping hours, age before their time. Some of them are irritable, think it is because the cruel hand of fate has been raised against them, when that is not the cause of their ill nature. They're tired. Tired all the time. Fatigue bugs interfere with wellbeing. Digestive motor slows up, so does circulation.

Young women who work all day in shop, office or factory, dance half the night, report for work at the usual hour with lagging steps are doing themselves an injustice. Of course, they should have fun. Recreation is necessary to all of us. But let them have their fling on Saturday nights when they can sleep late next morning.

Lying quietly in bed, nicely relaxed, mind at rest, waiting for the sand man to close your eye lids is very pleasant. The moments between wakefulness and sleep — that delightful drowsy feeling — should be moments of enjoyment. Why postpone falling in between the sheets until you're so tired your muscles and nerves are tide into knots and you can't relax? There's such a thing as being so tired you can't sleep. Stop activities before you get to that point, lady, if you would ward off good looks worries.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Correct Posture When seated

When a woman stands or walks, she is likely to be figure conscious, so pulls up her back bone, draws in the abdominal muscles, lifts her chest. This consciuosness is not always present when she is sitting, and that is a pity, because to be a pretty sitter is to sit on the top of the world, as far as looks are concerned. It won't do to flop and fold up, a habit of the teen-age contingent. As considerable time is spent in chairs, the framework of feminine body and and the musculature are affected by poor posture.

The typist who doesn't sit erect during long hours of keypounding may find that her hips are spreading, her chest going flat. Late in the afternoon she suffers from fatigue, wishes she had married That Man and had given up the idea of being a career girl. Girl customers at the movies who slump, throw their spinal columns into the wrong angle, get restless and wriggle. They wouldn't be restless if they maintained a straighter position, kept a neat nip-in at the back of the waistline.

When mama comes home very cross from social activities, it may be because of poor posture that has brought on muscle fatigue and irritated nerves.

Though women are ever galloping after good-looks laurels, they give scarcely a thought to the subject of posture.

Never sit on the edge of a chair. The further back the thighs are placed, the more perfect is body balance, the better is the pose of the spinal column. The shoulders should touch the chair back. Between shoulders and thighs there should be an inward curve that automatically lifts the chest, pulls in the adominal muscles, gives an easy pose to the shoulders.

There are special chairs designed so that the backs offer support at the waist line, and lucky is the typist or desk worker who has one. Such a chair fends off the so-called "middle-aged shape." Incidently, we don't like that expression. Women of fifty who have exercised all their lives, taken pride in good carriage often have prettier, better-contoured figures than some younger women. One must start early at the game of time-fighting.

Nature gave us perfect support in the form of a spinal column, but it can function only when the correct position is maintained and the muscles of the back are strong and resilient.

Sitting in a huddled position contracts the lungs, keeps them from getting their quota of air. In turn, the complexion suffers because the blood is not properly supplied with oxygen. This position sends the head too far forward, inviting an extra chin to come along and join the one that nature created. It seems senseless to woo beauty griefs, especially when it is such an easy matter to avoid them.

Smiles are fashionable, as you will notice when you glance at the lovely ladies pictured on the society pages of the daily newspaper. Who can smile when the teeth are not up to tip-top form? We must urge the members of this beauty class to put their minds on their biters, to give them more than a passing thought and a hasty brushing twice a day.

No girl can be a soldier in the army that marches in the cause of pulchritude unless her teeth are in good condition. The pert frock, the chic chapeau, ambrosial locks and the svelte figure mean little or nothing if the teeth are discolored, in need of repair.

When we think of the dentist and his array of mean little pickaxes and buzz saws, most of us get goose-flesh. Yet every individual should seek his attentions twice a year without being driven to his office by aches and pains. Brushing cleans the surfaces of the teeth, but more than that is required for their well-being. There must be a careful examination; if caries are present, they must be filled. Tartar must be removed. Tartar is a hard, cement-like growth, formed by chemicals in the mouth; it does not give way before the brush, must be removed with instruments.

If you keep a keen, watchful eye on the balance in the check book, as most of us must do, economize on clothes, cosmetics and amusements, but spend whatever may be necessary on your teeth. Unless they have professional services as soon as some irritation sets up, there is a possibility of serious infections that may be picked up by the blood streams, carried to the heart or other organs of the body. Take no chances. A throbbing tooth never cures itself. Pus is forming, there must be an outlet. Waste no time. Put on your hat, and beat it.

With the twice-yearly examination, small cavities are caught while they are young. The expense in the long run is less than if one waits for trouble to start. Also, be sure of your dentist. Your physician will recommend one. He must not only be skillful and experienced, but honest and conscientious.

For the sake of your teeth, eat raw vegetables — cabbage hearts, turnips, carrots. Every morning have a small glass of orange or tomato juice. Milk contains calcium of which your teeth have need; a quart a day is not too much.

Don't scour the teeth roughly with a brush of hard bristles. You may injure the gums, cause them to recede. Brush away from the bases of the teeth to the biting surfaces, using a rolling motion, so that the sides of the teeth will be cleaned.

Cigarette smokers should brush their teeth now and then with a mixture of equal parts of salt and baking soda.

THE MARRY-GO-ROUND

Bachelor--A Vanishing Type

The bachelor is becoming an extinct species. Most men either are married or have been married--or will be married, although they don't yet know it.

Of course, there are still some born bachelors, some selfmade bachelors and some who have had bachelorhood thrust upon them. But we seldon speak of them as "bachelors". We ask "Is he single, is he available or is he a wolf"?

But the self-made bachelor, or single-footer, we shall have always with us. He got that way by making a "pet" of himself all of his life. He just doesn't NEED any any girl to help him love himself or coddle himself.

He doesn't even want a girl to "mother" him. He can be a "mother" to himself; and he spends practically all of his time trying to find out what "Sonny" wants next.

He would never let any female stand between him and a steak with fried onions or a glass of beer; and he wouldn't give up a good night's rest or an afternoon of golf for the most romantic adventure. He has made a god of his personal comforts and amusements and has cheerfully sacrificed his heart and all his natural impulses on its altar. His life is one long fight to defend his freedom, and his battle-cry is "Give me liberty or give me death!"

When he thinks--just academically--of marrying a girl, and considers that it might mean eating the cheaper cuts instead of filet mignon and porterhouse, going home before midnight and spending his money for baby shoes and to pay off the mortage instead of champagne and good company or rare books and painting he shudders and puts the idea from him exactly as he would shove aside a burnt chop.

Not all confirmed bachelors are of this variety, as I've said. There is the man who never married because he had to support a doting mother or a pair of sisters. And there is the man with a tradegy--the man whose one love died, or the man whose ambition kept him working too hard for him to have time or thought for others. And the man who was too shy.

No, not very bachelor is his own fault. Yet even in England, where there has always been a man-shortage, the self-made bachelor has always existed here and there. Somtimes he is content and cheerful and sometimes he is sorry for himself. Usually the latter, because he has placed his love in the wrong bank, where it yields no interest. The only love that pays dividends is the love you give away.

But cheer up! I think that with the end of the war these self-made bachelors will soon become extinct. Just one of the "Vanishing Americans." Getting married is so popular now that there may be NO bachelors left!

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Caught Him With Another Girl — Eventually Proved to be His Cousin.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm very much in love with a boy who lives near me, and he says he loves me too. We've been going steadily since February, and we have a date every Friday. Last week he broke our date; just said he couldn't make it, giving no reason.

The same evening I saw him with a girl. I became very jealous and made up my mind I'd never speak to him again. But after thinking it over, decided not to say anything. I thought if he really loves me he'll tell me, and sure enough the next evening he came over and told me all about it. This girl was his cousin whom he hadn't seen for six years, and she was on her way to marry her fiance in camp.

If I had kept my word and had not spoken to him, I would never have heard the reason and would have been heartbroken the rest of my life. As it is now, we're planning to marry sometime in the future.

— Happy Bride-to-be

Here's a warning to all girls, tempted to fly off the handle and indulge in jealous tantrums, refuse to speak, etc., etc. This boy had a perfectly legitimate excuse for breaking his date with his best girl. She now signs herself "happy Bride-to-be" but see what might have happened if she had carried out her first intention of dropping him.

A Good Many Fathers in Defence Plants Experience a Silly Season.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Loose money, loose talk, and loose women are wrecking our marriage. We are both unhappy, but he refuses to try to snap out of the spell he is in. He says he doesn't love me, but still comes home to sleep and have his meals. He goes out every night while I stay at home. He isn't interested in my friend, and, won't let me get too well acquainted with his. He is silent, grouchy, penny-pinching at home, but with his men and women friends he's a good talker, pleasant and a good spender. He's working in a defence plant.

Is it fair to separate the children from their father, because we can't get along, or must we endure it for their sakes? He said he thinks more of his car than his own children. His language around home makes poor environment for young children. He says a man could not find a better wife than I've been, but still he treats me only as a housekeeper. For the past three years, there have been other women.

I'm only 30 years old, and the children and an unfinished house aren't enough to keep me satisfied. Could I forget him if I divorced him, as he asked, or shall I keep on, hoping he will change? All I want is happiness, love and companionship. What do you advise?

D. F. N. W.

A man who says his car is dearer than his children isn't normal, unless he is talking for effect which is probably the case. Just another example of a man gone haywire working in a defence plant—women on every side, and some mighty easy to know.

Do you really want a divorce, and if you do, what skills have you to enable you to support the children? Are you willing to wait and see how things turn out when war work in the defence plant comes to an end? At that time many fathers will experience a lucid interval.

CANADA'S VETERANS
Their Post-War Opportunities
This is the first of a series of advertisements to inform the people of Canada of plans to re-establish men and women of the armed forces. To get the full details save and read every advertisement.

For complete information write for the booklet "Back to Civil Life."

The Future After Discharge — A MESSAGE TO RELATIVES OF THOSE IN THE ARMED FORCES

When your boys and your girls come home, when they lay aside the uniform, when they go out into the world as normal peace-loving Canadians, what lies ahead? Can they pick up their lives as civilians, where they laid them down, months or long years ago? Are there plans to help them do the things they wanted to do before the war? Will they have security? Can they continue education, or receive needed training? Will they be assisted in home owning, or to establish their own business, and will they be enabled to pick up their family life once again?

These are questions which concern all those Canadians who have loved ones in the services. They are questions which this series of advertisements is designed to answer.

OPPORTUNITY IS THE OBJECTIVE
Canada has been making plans for your boy's and your girl's return to civilian life since early in 1940. These plans are in effect and operating now. The aim is that every person who has served shall have opportunity. Thousands, already back in civilian life, have benefitted by training, by maintenance grants, by advice of departmental officials, and by the social security provisions. There is ample help for those men and women who want to help themselves.

ASSISTANCE ON DISCHARGE
When your boys and girls are discharged from the services, they will be given:
1. A clothing allowance of $100.00 (if discharged after August 1, 1944).
2. Their pay to date of discharge.
3. One month's additional pay, if they have 183 days' continuous service, as a rehabilitation grant.
4. A railway warrant home or to the place of enlistment.

Dependents will receive:
1. Their normal dependents' allowance to date of discharge, with assigned pay.
2. An additional month's dependents' allowance, with assigned pay, if there has been 183 days' continuous service.

Your boy or girl will be allowed to retain certain items of uniform. They will be given a complete medical and dental examination and will be eligible for free needed treatment for a year after discharge. Those discharged not physically fit, in need of continuing treatment and unable to work, will have their pay and allowances of rank continued for at least a year if necessary and, if the disability is pensionable, for as long as curative treatment is beneficial. All are interviewed by Veterans' Welfare Officers and told of the re-establishment programme.

WAR SERVICE GRATUITY
On discharge, those enlisted to serve outside Canada, or those who served in the Aleutian Islands, are eligible for a war service gratuity. It provides $7.50 for each thirty days' service in Canada and the Western Hemisphere and $15.00 for each thirty days' service overseas or in the Aleutian Islands. For those with overseas service or with service in the Aleutian Islands, there is an additional seven days' pay and allowances for each six months of such service. Payments will be made at the end of each month in the months following discharge. Complete details of the war service gratuity will be given in a later advertisement.

RE-ESTABLISHMENT CREDIT
In addition to the war service gratuity, there is a re-establishment credit of $7.50 for each thirty days' service in the Western Hemisphere and $15.00 for each thirty days' service overseas. This is for things such as the purchase or repair of a home, the buying of furniture, a business, or government life insurance, and for certain other purposes which will assist your boy or your girl in becoming re-established. This credit, which is reduced by grants given for training or education, or under the Veterans' Land Act, is primarily for those who do not wish assistance under these three plans.

RETURN TO FORMER JOBS
If your boy or girl held a civilian position before enlisting, and was not engaged to replace somebody already in the forces, and if the position still exists, and your boy or girl is capable of filling it, it is the employer's duty, under the law of Canada, to reinstate him or her in that position with seniority. Application for reinstatement must be made to the former employer within three months of discharge from the forces or from hospital.

Veterans' Welfare Officers are stationed in key centres throughout Canada. They are the friends of Ex-Service men and women. It is their duty to advise and assist all Ex-Service personnel with their re-establishment problems. If there is anything about the Rehabilitation programme which you do not understand, consult your nearest Veterans' Welfare Officer.

TRAINING AND EDUCATION
The surest way to permanent employment—the thing your boy or girl will want—is a skill to get and to hold a job. Canada's plans give opportunity to acquire needed skill either at university or in preparation for a business or industrial career. Fees are paid by the state, along with living allowances, while training or continuing education.

WHILE ILL OR UNEMPLOYED
There is protection against illness or unemployment by maintenance allowances which can be drawn against in the first eighteen months after discharge. There is also protection under the Unemployment Insurance Act for those who enter insured employment and remain in it fifteen weeks.

HOME OWNING AND FARMING
There is provision to assist city and other workers to have homes of their own, either on small acreages of land outside the high taxation area, or in town, under the National Housing Act. Full-time farmers can be given financial assistance in full-time farming, while commercial fishermen may secure financial help in getting their own homes, on small acreages of land, and in buying needed fishing equipment.

FREE TREATMENT
In the year following discharge, service men and women are eligible for free treatment, hospitalization and allowances for any condition, even if not the result of service. Pensioners are entitled to this for life for their pensioned disability.

THE POLICY ON PENSIONS
Canada's Pension Act is administered by an independent commission, all former members of the services. Any permanent disability suffered overseas, not a result of misconduct, is pensionable. Where service is in Canada only, the disability must be a result of service.

Published under the authority of Hon. Ian A. Mackenzie, Minister of PENSIONS AND NATIONAL HEALTH

Don Boyle Pitched, Batted Columbian Squires to 6-3 Win In Ten Innings Over Carltons

Game Played in Peterborough and Winners Trailing Till Eighth

TEAM IN FINALS

Peterboro, Oct. 2 — Don Boyle pitched and batted the Belleville Columbian Squires to a six to three overtime victory over Toronto Carlton Parks here Saturday afternoon in the third game of their O.A.S.A. junior semi-finals as the Belleville youngsters came from behind a 3 to 0 deficit to tie up the game in the 8th and win out in the 10th.

Boyle not only held the Toronto kids to six hits and 2 tainted runs but he led his club at bat with 3 hits, driving in the tieing run in the 8th and the winning counter in the 10th.

Carltons Helped

Defensive slips assisted Carlton Park to score their first two runs and their last marker was a gift when shortstop Moher and left-fielder Donovan allowed an easy fly to drop between them for a double. Boyle got better as he went along and blanked the Toronto team for the last five frames allowing only one hit after the fifth.

Opposing him was Walter Yurkiewich, a surprise starter for Carlton Park. The slow ball pitcher held Belleville off the score sheet in the first seven frames and with a 3 to 0 win to work he looked good for a win. However Columbian Squires broke up his delivery with a pass and three hits in the eighth to tie the score and then jumped on him for 3 more runs in tenth to take the series.

Boyle had 3 hits to lead the winners at the plate while Moher, Bunton and Culkin each had a pair of safeties. Chinkaluk with two doubles was top batter for Carlton Park. Culkin's fielding was a feature.

Scored in First

Toronto youngsters broke into the lead in the first inning. McBride walked, Walker filed to right, Pogorelski rolled to Rollins who made a bad toss to second trying to force McBride and everybody was safe. Chinkaluk then doubled to centre to score McBride. R. Stramba rolled out and after Yurkiewich walked Tenesi filed to Culkin in centre.

Belleville wasted singles by Bunton and Culkin in the second. Carlton Park added another unearned run in the fourth. Tenesi singled to centre and advanced on a passed ball. J. Stramba filed to Culkin and Chomyshn fanned but McBride drew a pass and Tenesi scored when his fly to right was muffed.

Pogorelski filed out to left.

The losers finished their scoring in the 5th. Chinkaluk doubled and scored when Yurkiewich's easy fly to short left was allowed to drop for a double as the Squires got their signals crossed.

Tide up in Eighth

That was all for the Toronto kids. Boyle keeping them off the score sheet for the rest of the route Belleville tied it up with a rally in the eighth. Rollins walked and stole second. Moher filed to right but Fitzpatrick singled to centre, sending Rollins to third. Bunton doubled to right scoring Rollins and Fitzpatrick. Bunton going to third on a wide throw home. Boyle singled to centre scoring Bunton with the tieing run. Boyle tried to go to 3rd on bad throw home but was nailed. Culkin rolled out. Squires won the argument in the first of the tenth. With one away Moher singled to centre. Fitzpatrick filed to centre. Bunton was passed purposely but Boyle came through with a single to left scoring Moher and when Chomyshn threw high to third Bunton also ran home.

Culkin Hits Triple

Culkin laced a triple to centre scoring Boyle, Adams filed to centre. Carlton Park had a chance in their half when J. Stramba walked with one out and Chomyshn was safe on a fumble by Moher but Boyle struck out McBride and got Walker on a bunt along the first base line fielded by Bunton.

Line-up: Carlton Park — McBride 3b; Walker 2b; Pogorelski 1b; Chinkaluk ss; R. Stramba c; Yurkiewich p; Tenesi cf; J. Stramba rf; Chomyshn lf; Belleville — Wardaugh 3b; Rollins 2b; Moher ss; Fitzpatrick c; Bunton 1b; Boyle p; Culkin cf; Adams rf; Donovan lf.

NAVY BULLDOGS LEADING ARMED SERVICES LOOP

Hamilton Wildcats Take Hold on Top Position in O.R.F.U.

VETERANS SHINE

(By The Canadian Press)

Sensational scoring performances by veteran players highlighted the four-game Ontario Senior Football program Saturday from which Toronto Navy Bulldogs emerged as undisputed leaders of the Ontario armer services league race and Hamilton Wildcats strengthened their hold on top position in the Ontario Rugby Football Union standing.

Leading Seaman Annis Stukus continued his 12-point-a-game scoring clip to lead Bulldogs to their second consecutive win in the services league with a 12-10 triumph at Hamilton over the Hagersville R.C.A.F. Bombers. Sgt. Fred Kijek personally accounted for 18 points as Camp Borden R.C.A.F. Hurricanes mauled the St. Thomas R.C.A.F. team 33-0 at London. Camp Borden now is tied for second place in the league standing with Hagersville with one apiece while the St. Thomas team is in last place with two losses.

Joe Krol accounted for all six points as Hamilton won its second straight O.R.F.U. game from Ottawa Trojans, 6-1. Earl Selkirk registered nine points as Toronto Balmy Beach won its first O.R.F.U. game of the season from Toronto Indians, 19-1. Beaches now are in second place behind Wildcats. Trojans with one loss in one start and Indians with two in two starts bring up the rear.

Kicked Two Field Goals.

The scoring outbreak by Stukus at Hamilton was the day's most brilliant individual performance. After Hagersville went into an early lead with a touchdown by L.A.C. Mickey McGee and a convert by FO. Pete Wright in the first quarter, Stukus kicked field goals from placement in the third and fourth quarters to tie the score. Hagersville went ahead again on a single and a field goal by Wright but Stukus came right back with a touchdown and a convert to give the sailors their win.

Kijek started Hurricanes on the victory trail at London with a touchdown and a convert early in the first quarter and also kicked one single and converted four touchdowns.

At Ottawa Krol converted his own touchdown while the single Ottawa point came in the third quarter when Mel Lawson was rouged on veteran Arnie McWatter's punt.

Sam Sward and rookie Boris Tipoff shared scoring honors with Selkirk in the Beach victory at Toronto. Sward scored a first-quarter touchdown while Tipoff dashed 44 yards for a major score in the third. Selkirk collected four other points on three converts and a single.

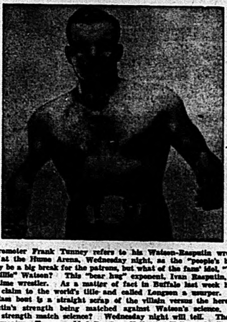
BITES OFF A BIG CHUNK!



Promoter Frank Tunney refers to his Watson-Rasputin wrestling bout, at the Hume Arena, Wednesday night, as the "people's break." It may be a big break for the patrons, but what of the fans' idol, "Whipper Billie" Watson? This "bear hug" exponent, Ivan Rasputin, is no smalltime wrestler. As a matter of fact in Buffalo last week he put forth claim to the world's title and called Longson a usurper. This highclass bout is a straight scrap of the villain versus the hero with Rasputin's strength being matched against Watson's science. Can brute strength match science? Wednesday night will tell. Then for good measure Tunney added Dr. Len Hall, the Hollywood villain, to meet Pierre DeGlane in the semi-final, with a newcomer, Jim Burke of Buffalo, meeting Johnny Gyreffy in the opener. Tickets are going fast at Cook's news stand. Phone 74.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By FRED KERNER

Toronto, Oct. 2 — (CP)—They're warming up the sport pages these brisk autumn days with talk about—you guessed it—rules! A London Free Press sportscribe, who writes under the nom de plume Beejay, roasts the C.R.U. for showing a lack of broad-mindedness.

Monsieur Beejay goes so far as to suggest his fair city take the initiative and form a "new union with a new code." Claiming nothing is as thrilling as the runbacks of punts and kick-offs of the American brand of football, he lauds the Montreal Interscholastic Athletic Union for their introduction of U.S. rules.

Of the new high school rules in Montreal, Dink (Montreal Gazette) Carroll comments that most of the foot has been taken out of football. The teams are not punting for they found that under the new code they can make sustained downfield marches. Anyway, says Dink, our high schools are now playing the American game . . . where do they go from here?

These were the days!

A statement of expenses for an out-of-town game played by the Waterloo, senior hockey club back in 1900 was unearthed a few days ago. It showed that a five dollar bill took care of the needs of eight players on the squad. That includes staying overnight, with a little party thrown in.

Eight suppers totalled just two dollars and beds for the night came to $1.25 with the bill for breakfast amounting to the same. The last item on the statement indicated the boys had a little pick-me-up after the game. It's listed as "one flask whisky", presumably for internal use, and the cost was — 50 cents.

Then again, at that price it was probably cheaper than liniment and might have been used to rub on aches and bruises.

Travelling costs? The team went to Preston by horse and sleigh, for Henry Ford was still a-dreamin' of his horseless carriage, and the cost was $4.25. Those were the days!

Things and Such:

The dizzy pace at which Detroit Tigers are travelling seems to be infectious, for Tiger coach Aloysius J. (Wish) Egan was fined for speeding the other day . . . With Bill Durnan unavailable to Canadiens, the gossip-shoppers are whispering the name of little Jerry McNeil, Montreal's Senior Royal's goalie last season. And a snappy puckstopper the lad is . . . An Edmonton Journal scribe is certain that University of Alberta professor W. G. Hardy, who's prexy of the International Ice Hockey Association, will one day be N.H.L. boss... Johnny Mitchell will be around again this winter with enticing offers to young Canadian pucksters, but not for Providence of the A.H.L. Johnny's with Pittsburgh Hornets now . . . History repeats for Hamilton Wildcats. In the O. R. F. U. opener a week ago Cats trounced Toronto Indians 35-0, the identical score they won by over the same club in the '43 opener. The Felines think the omen is good.

St. Louis Browns Win First American Loop Pennant In Tightest Race in Its History

Race Not Decided Until Last Out on the Last Day

TIGERS SECOND

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sport Writer

The third wartime baseball season in the major leagues ended yesterday (Sunday) with St. Louis Browns winning their first pennant in the tightest race in American League history, a race not decided until the last out on the last day.

A 5-2 victory over New York Yankees coupled with a Detroit defeat by Washington, 4-1, gave the flag to the Browns by one game, breaking a tie that had existed since Friday.

Most fans were pulling for the Browns, not only because they had never won a pennant but also because of their thrilling comeback. Three weeks ago they had skidded to third place after having led nearly all season.

With Sigmund (Jack) Jakucki hurling a six-hitter before 37,815 fans, the largest St. Louis crowd of the season, the Browns swept a 4-game series from the Yankees, to climax a great stretch drive in which they won 11 out of 12.

Two homers by Chet Laabs and a third by Vern Stephens accounted for the Browns' runs but pitching was their chief weapon all season. Nelson Potter, Jack Kramer, Denny Galehouse, Bob Muncrief and Jakucki hurled 10 complete games of the last 12, including four shutouts, and did not give up more than four runs in any of the last 11 games.

Leonard Tiger Tamer

Emil (Dutch) Leonard, 34-year-old knuckleballer, who had not beaten the Tigers since Sept. 15, 1941, was the Tiger tamer, hurling a four-hitter before a crowd of 45,565. Stan Spence, whose hitting beat Detroit Friday to create a 1st-place tie, cracked his third homer in three days to put the crusher on the Bengals.

Paul (Dizzy) Trout made his 2nd attempt in three days for his 28th victory, but suffered his 14th defeat instead.

The Browns, who finished as high as second only twice before — in 1902, their first season, and in 1922, when they missed the pennant by one game — won the right to meet St. Louis National League representative, the Cardinals, in the world series opening Wednesday.

The Tigers made a game fight, sparked by the return of Dick Wakefield, whose big bat won a score of games for them, and the great pitching of Hal Newhouser and Trout. Newhouser's 29 victories tied George Mullins' mark of 1909 as the most wins turned in by a Tiger hurler. Among the league' left-handers, only Bob Grove of the 1931 Athletics won more games with 31.

The Yankees failed in an attempt to win their fourth straight flag, dropping to third, the lowest in the Joe McCarthy regime.

Put up Game Fight

Hit hard by the loss of such stars as Bill Dickey, Charlie Keller, Joe Gordon, Bill Johnson and Spud Chandler, the Yanks put up a game fight, but faded in the last week, ending with four straight losses to the Browns.

Boston Red Sox, a contender all season, fell back when their ace pitcher, Tex Hughson, winner of 18 games, and their ace hitter, Bobby Doerr, batting .325, were called into the service, a month before the close of the season. They finished with a .500 average in fourth place, 11 games off the pace. They ended the season splitting a twin-bill from the White Sox, winning 3-1 and losing 4.

The second division clubs were Cleveland and Philadelphia tied for fifth, Chicago seventh and Washington eighth. The Mackmen won both games from the Indians 5-5 and 5-0 to tie Cleveland, making their best finish since they placed fifth in 1934. The A's were responsible for the Yankee downfall, sweeping a crucial three-game set in mid-September to knock the Yanks out of first place.

For the Senators, it marked their first last-place finish under Clark Griffith since he took charge in 1912.

Cards in Runaway

The Cards made a runaway of it winning their eighth flag and their third in succession by a 14 1/2 game margin to become the first club in National League history to win more than 100 games for three successive years. They ended the season splitting a twin-bill with the Giants, losing 6-5 in 13 innings and winning 10-5.

Pittsburgh nosed out Cincinnati for the runner-up spot on the final day, splitting a twin-bill with Philadelphia, winning the opener 9-1 and losing the nightcap 7-1, while the Reds bowed to Brooklyn 6-5. Cincinnati finished third, 1 1/2 games farther behind.

Chicago Cubs, after a bad start rallied to snatch fourth place from the Giants, making it the first time since 1926 that all the western teams finished in the first division. Charlie Grimm replaced Jimmy Wilson as Cub manager in May.

The Giants led the second division followed by Boston, Brooklyn and Philadelphia.

ALEMITES WIN BASEBALL TITLE

Ernie Smith, Former C.O.B.L. Hurler, Went Route for Winners

In a free-hitting contest the Alemites won the city baseball championship by walloping the Belleville Juniors 25 to 10 at the Alemite Field yesterday afternoon. Ernie Smith went the route for the winners, while Al Kelleher and Bob Bunton shared the Juniors' pitching chores.

The Juniors were leading the parade until the fifth when Ernie Summer's Alemites broke out in a hitting spree that resulted in eight runs crossing the plate. The winners added eight more in the seventh to cinch the game and city title. Errors figured primarily in the Alemite runs racked up.

The Juniors got off to a flying start with three runs in the first, but the Alemites bounced back with a pair, before the kids added one more, but Alemites evened matters in the third and it was rather even until the ultimate winners broke out with their eight-run barrage in the fifth and it was all over. Smith struck out seven, Kelleher four and Bunton three.

The line-ups: Alemites—Hammett ss, Dickey c, Palmer rf, Booth cf, Smith p, Philp 3b, Donovan 2b, Tebworth 1b and Keller lf. Juniors — Doyle 2b, E. Bush ss, Strachan 3b, R. Bush 1b, B. Philp lf, McCabe cf, Dell c, Hogan rf, Kelleher and Bunton p.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Three professors were sitting in a railway station, waiting for a train. They became so deeply engrossed in conversation that they failed to notice, when the train arrived. In fact, not until it was pulling out did they see it. At that, all three sprinted with great diligence, and two of them caught the train.

The third was standing dejectedly on the platform when a waggish bystander said, "Why look so sad? Two out of three made it. That's a pretty good average!"

"Yes, I know," sighed the professor, "but they came down to see me off."

On to a Title.

Doing it the hard way the local Columbian Squires pushed the Toronto Carlton Park kids out of the Junior O.A.S.A. semi-finals at Peterborough on Saturday. The local kids trailed until the eighth, when they had to produce or else. The Squires were trailing 3-0 and Walter Yurkiewich, a surprise starter on the Toronto mound possessing a tantalizing slow ball, had blanked the locals quite handily. However, the Squires finally found Yurkiewich and broke through to tie the score in the eighth and then go on to win 6-3 in ten innings.

Pass the orchids to Don Boyle, the Squire's main pitching stay. Boyle threw a six hitter and let the Toronto kids down with exactly one earned run, as local errors entered into the other two Carlton Park counters. Not satisfied with pitching himself a creditable softball game Boyle went on to bat in the tieing and winning runs which isn't a bad afternoon's diamond effort on any man's field. Now the Squires are in the provincial championship."

Meet Half-Way.

It has been proposed the 1944 Junior OA.S.A. finals, between Belleville Columbian Squires and the Windsor Mic-Macs be played at a place mid-way between the two cities concerned, presumably Hamilton. However, if the Mic-Macs could be persuaded to play the first game of the Junior Provincial Softball finals in Belleville on a Wednesday afternoon there would be a full grandstand welcome the clubs at the Exhibition Park here.

The Mic-Macs advanced to the junior finals by eliminating Hamilton Aikens in a third and final game played at London last week, winning 3-1 Apparently in Western Ontario they play a strong type of defensive ball, as the opposing pitchers allowed but five hits each. Hamilton booted the ball for two costly errors, both of which entered into the Windsor scoring column. There has never been a junior O.A.S.A. provincial softball title won east of Oshawa, but if the local Squires play the calibre of softball they are capable, maybe 1944 will see a precedent established. All the locals have to do is remember the mistake they made in the second game against Toronto and realize no team is in the provincial finals without being good.

Watson on Spot

Whipper Billie Watson hasn't won a wrestling bout in so long it isn't getting to be fun with the "pride of East York." True enough he made a host of friends by refusing to take the nod over Earl McCready here last week when "Big Earl" was the victim of an unitentional foul, but then Watson hadn't looked so hot against the Aurora farmer up to that point. Wednesday night "The Whip" meets Ivan Rasputin, the villainous mad Russian, who has no ring scruples whatsoever. Because Watson is popular with the fans means little to the Russian bear hug exponent, whose sole ambition is to beat his ring adversary by fair means or foul

Remember When

Sir Thomas Lipson, Glasgow-born Irishman who became famous as a merchant and sportsman, died Oct. 2nd, 1931, shortly after his entry into the Royal Yacht Squadron, one of the most exclusive clubs in the world. He spent large sums in building five different yachts in unsuccessful bids to win the America's sailing cup.

Broadcast Series

The Gillette Safety Razor Company's sports broadcasting team, Don Dunphy, Bill Corum and Bill Slater, will be at the mike to describe the 1944 World's Series to Mutual Network listeners. Dunphy and Slater will handle the play-by-play account, succeeding Red Barber and Bob Elson in that role, and Corum, ace sports columnist of the New York Journal-American, will do the color commentary for the games as he has done in previous series.

Nickel World Series.

Credit must be given the St. Louis Browns in winning the American League. After leading the junior loop for nearly ninety percent of the season, the Browns fell into a slump last month and saw Boston, New York and then Detroit take over the No 1 slot in the league standing. Suddenly Luke Sewell's charges regained their winning ways and kept pace with the Tigers until they were finally rewarded with their first American League title when Chet Laabs hit two, two-run-producing homers to beat the Yankees. Ironically enough it was two former Detroit players who figured in the final downfall of the Tigers and the winning for the Browns. Laabs is a Tiger cast-off, as is Dutch Leonard, who pitched the lowly Senators to a 4-1 win over the Tigers to eliminate them from the pennant race Sunday. Leonard has been trying for two years to beat the Tigers and his triumph over the team that cut him loose came when it hurt most Again "Dizzy" Trout failed to register his 27th win of the season when the Tigers bowed out to Washington yesterday, while in St. Louis Kreevich and Laabs hit in succession to give the Browns enough runs to win their first American League pennant and the right to meet their fellow-townsmen, the St. Louis Cardinals in a nickle world series that opens in Sportsman's Park in the Mound City Wednesday.

In their first 22 years in the American League the Browns were edged out by the Yankees by half a game in 1922, 22 years later the Browns beat the Yankees to win the flag in the closest race the junior circuit had seen since 1922. It has been a nerve-wracking race for the Browns, while the Cardinals virtually coasted in to a pennant. Naturally the Cardinals are odds-on-favorites as the fall classic approaches.

LESSON NO. 435

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Many a partner will spoil all your fun by starting with three when he should start with one. Sometimes it works well. Oh, unhappy day! From then on he does it forever and aye.

Not only is a true opening three bid (in a major suit) hopeful of making a game in that suit. It also shows a potential slam hand. And partner can usually tell if slam chances are good.

You see, a correct three bid promises a trump suit that needs no help from partner. It also shows at least one sure trick outside of that suit. And it is assumed to be able to take eight tricks.

Partner of such a hand does not need a great deal of help to promote a slam for their pair. Let such a partner turn up two sure tricks with anything else and a slam is very promising.

Consequently, we utilize that knowledge and develop a workable rule out of it. The rule is: In answer to a true three bid, partner with two sure tricks signals that there may be a slam.

What is the signal we employ for such a purpose? One that has no chance of being misunderstood. One that will not interfere with the true course of love for a game contract.

When partner of a three bid has no trick, no game is in their pair. So, the responder passes. To show a trick or more but short of slam values, responder merely assists to four in that suit.

Therefore, anything but a pass or an assist to four in that suit becomes a slam-suggesting signal. In other words, responder promises two sure tricks if he bids any other suit or no-trump.

Suppose your partner opens with three hearts when you have this hand:

♠A J 9 5 2
♥9 8
♣9 7 4

Your response is three spades. The fact that you did not respond with four hearts admits that you have two sure tricks in your hand.

NEWARK BEARS AND BALTIMORE ALL TIED UP

Orioles Even Series on Sunday by Winning at Homc 7-3

HEAVY HITTING

Baltimore, Oct. 2 —(AP)— Newark Bears and Baltimore Orioles, their series tied for the second time, will clash here tonight in the fifth game of the International League's final play-offs to determine which team faces Louisville in the Little World Series.

Orioles, after losing 6-4 in Newark Saturday night, found their home luck held good yesterday as they staged a six-run rally in a wild eighth inning to triumph 7-3 and even the best-of-seven series at two-all.

Manager Alphonse (Tommy) Thomas named Sam Lowry to face the Bears tonight, while Frank Hiller was due to take the mound for the visitors.

Yesterday's crowd of 29,667 went wild when the Orioles, after trailing 3-1, tallied six times in the eighth as the Bear infield fell apart. Joe Page had previously held Baltimore to two hits, one a home run by Howie Moss.

Baltimore got only two more hits in the eighth, but Newark contributed four errors and Page allowed four bases on balls. Eleven Orioles went to the plate.

Ambrose (Bobo) Palica started on the mound for the Birds and after giving up seven hits and three runs, retired for a pinch hitter in the eighth. Johnny Podgajny finished.

Detroit Tigers Gather To Split 2nd Place Money

By FRANK KENESSON
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

Detroit, Oct. 2 (AP)—It was a sad band of Detroit Tigers that gathered at Briggs stadium today to determine the split of their second-place World Series share, only a fraction of the contender's purse they lost yesterday in the hottest pennant finish the American League has ever seen.

The Bengals were booted out of a league lead they had held continuously since Sept. 17 when the last-place Washington Senators arose to smack them, 4-1, on the last day of the season while St. Louis Browns were pasting New York Yankees for the fourth straight game, 5-2.

By splitting their last four-game series with a Washington club they had beaten 15 times this season in 18 starts, the Tigers missed their seventh flag by a single game. The Browns clinched the pennant on a pan of homers by Chet Laabs, who once wore a Detroit uniform.

To make it worse for the Tigers, they lost yesterday's super-crucial verdict to old-timer Emil (Dutch) Leonard, who had lost eight straight games to Detroit and hadn't beaten the Bengals since 1941.

Paul ((Dizzy) Trout, making his third start in six days and trying for his 28th win for the Tigers, went all the way but was pegged for eight hits, one of them Stan Spence's 18th home run, with Joe Kuhel on base in the fourth inning.

Manager Steve O'Neill had nothing but praise for the Detroit players who climbed from the second division as late as Aug. 1 to make their stretch fight.

O'Neill said he was especially indebted to Trout (27-14) and Hal Newhouser (29-9), the major leagues' two top pitchers, who "worked their hearts out for me, the club and the fans."

Yesterday's Stars

By The Associated Press

CHET LAABS, BROWNS — Hit two homers, each with one on to help give the Browns a 5-2 victory over the Yanks and the American league pennant.

DUTCH LEONARD, SENATORS —Held the Tigers scoreless for eight innings to ruin Detroit's flag hopes with a 4-1 four-hit victory.

RIP SEWELL, PIRATES—Clinched second place for Pirates by winning 21st over the Phillies 9-1, in opener of twin-bill.

JOE BERRY, ATHLETICS — Received credit for both victories over Indians in relief, which enabled Philadelphia to tie Cleveland for 5th place.

SEVEN JUNIOR 'A' CLUBS ENTER O.H.A. THIS YEAR

Possibility Port Colborne Might Come in to Round Out Two-Group Loop

POOL RECEIPTS

Toronto, Oct. 2 (CP)—Ontario Hockey Association officials announced today that seven junior "A" clubs will start the 1944-45 season during the week of Nov. 13. The statement said there also is a possibility of Port Colborne returning to the series to round out a two-group, eight--team circuit.

Plans were drawn up at a meeting with the sub-committee of the O.H.A. here.

Stratford and Brantford of last year's set-up have withdrawn from Junior "A" competition for this season. With eight clubs operating the groups will be as follows, Eastern Oshawa Generals, St. Michael's College, Marlboros and Young Rangers of Toronto. Western group, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Port Colborne and Galt. Should Port Colborne decline the issue, they have until Oct. 9 for a definite decision, seven teams will operate as one group with the first six qualifying for play-offs.

If two groups are in operation, play-offs will be the same as last season. Top teams playing in a best four out of seven with seconds and thirds meeting in a best two out of three games. Semi-finals between seconds and third winners to be best two out of three with the ultimate winner meeting the victor in the top series in a best four out of seven games for the junior "A" O.H.A. championship.

Junior "A" clubs agree to continue their group insurance pool of 7 1-2 per cent of all gates. One referee and a linesman will be in charge of league games. W. A. Hewitt, Secretary, was authorized to prepare a schedule for adoption at a later meeting.

Kroehlers Win Softball Title For Second Time

Stratford, Oct. 2 — (CP) — The Stratford Kroehlers girls' softball team won the championship of the provincial women's softball union for the second straight year by defeating Peterboro Westclox 6-5 before a capacity crowd at Kroehler Field here Saturday.

A series of five Stratford errors nearly cost them the game, but a run in the ninth frame clinched the game and the title, thus making a third game unnecessary. Stratford had defeated Peterboro 3-2 in the eastern Ontario city a week ago.

Peterboro had the edge on the score at the end of the third, but thereafter was unable to score a run, while Stratford was able to tie the count by the end of the 7th.

Bullock, on the mound for the visitors, chalked up 10 strikeouts and walked four, while Greta Harmer on the Stratford mound had no strikeouts and walked only one.

Peterboro ...... 203 000 000—5 10 0
Stratford ...... 001 002 201—6 12 5

Owen Sound Kids Win in Lacrosse

Toronto, Oct. 2 — (CP) — Owen Sound Juveniles won the Ontario juvenile lacrosse championship for the second year in succession when they defeated Toronto Lakeshores 7-3 here Saturday to take the round, 18-6.

Lumley starred for the winners and Frank King was best man on the Toronto squad.

Brampton defeated St. Catharines 9-8 Saturday in the first game of the midget two-game goals-to-count final round at Brampton.

In the first game of the bantam finals, St. Catharines C. Y. O. (Catholic Youth Organization) trounced St. John's Training School 17-5.

Second games of the midget and bantam finals will be played at St. Catharines tomorrow night.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was eating her grapefruit diet this morning and she said to pop, Well, time in its flight never stands still, I mean another Thursday has rolled around and Nora is off today, so the kitchen is left to my own tender mercies.

Good, the only real home cooking is a dinner prepared exclusively by the fair hands of the fair lady of the home, pop said.

Meaning ma and proving he knew she was just going to suggest going out to a resterant, and ma said, I'm glad to hear you say so, William, because it spurs me on to do try my hand at a General MacArthur stew.

A stew by any other name would taste as savory if you cooked it, I'm sure, pop said, and ma said, It's a combination of this and that and the other, and I'll bet you anything up to a hundred to one that you wont be able to tell me what kind of meat it's made of.

I'll bet you anything up to a thousand to one you lose your hundred to one bet, pop said. You cant fool an old thoroughbred meat hound. I know by your discription alone that it's good old hash turned into a stew with the best features of about 4 different kinds of left over meat, he said, and ma said, Then I'll raise the best to a million to one, because you lose. There's not even a fraction of a shred of any kind of meat at all in it. In fact that's why it's called a General MacArthur stew, because it's supose to help the war effort by economizing on meat. It's made entirely of vegetables, with a broad background of 3 different varieties of beans for color and substance she said.

I'm sure it still would be wonderful with you at the helm, but maybe we'd better try that new place on the Avenue for a change, pop said.

Ma claiming she was willing without trying to look too willing.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

Helen expanded. It was pleasant to feel that she had managed things. She began to talk about Tom Barton, and wouldn't it be more sensible for Ann to own a Scottie instead of a Great Dane?

"A lot more sensible", Ann agreed. Already, in her thought, she had started off for Myles.

When she awakened the next morning, she was bothered by a queer tightening in her chest. Some silly after-effect of her cold, she concluded. But she had no intention of giving up her trip to Broadfields.

Tom telephoned just as she was leaving. He said "Don't forget we're going to the theatre tonight".

"I won't. I'll be ready at seven-thirty", she promised, and sneezed.

She felt better as soon as she hit the outskirts of the city. The day was lovely, with the air sun-warmed and full of spring. Rowdy was beside herself with joy, ecstatically breathing down Ann's neck, and fogging the windows.

As Ann came within view of Broadfields, she drew the car to a stop with a sense that she was dreaming. Contrary to Helen's gloomy prophesy that she would find a shambles, there was fresh paint on the house and barns, long stretches of well-kept lawn, and endless patterns of new hurdle fence running off toward smooth meadows, freshly ploughed and cleared of brush.

Tears dimmed her eyes. For so long, she had wanted to reclaim the land and bring Broadfields back into its own. And then the dream melted into nightmare as she thought of the hundred dollar check out of the sale of Mad Anthony, that she had contributed toward repairs. Christopher Wain must have spent thousands, she thought in rising panic. Even now, there was a veritable traffic jam of workmen's cars parked all around the place. A thought occurred to her. Was he punishing her for her stubborn refusal to let him know where she was?

Ann should have heeded her first impression of him—an ingratiating ne'er-do-well, the sort o fungrow-up man a woman likes to ruffle the hair of. . . . Now she'd probably spend the rest of her life paying for his delusions of grandeur. She could tell the fence people to come and get their fencing, but she couldn't tell the painter to take the paint off the house or the lumber dealers to unbuild the kennels that were springing up like mushroom growth beyond the paddocks.

Trembling with the shock of it all, she started the car again and sped up the driveway into the courtyard. Rowdy scrambled across her knees and poured like water through the open car door. Ann was wild. "Roughneck! You come back here!" But Rowdy was gone, out across the lawn. A man yelled, and ran after her. He brought her to Ann, his fingers firm against her collar. He was angry. "Please put your dog back in the car, Miss", he commanded. "We don't 'low stray dogs around".

Ann's rage mounted. The man was short and stocky, and he had a foreign accent. "This is not a stray dog," she informed him coldly.

"Well then, Miss, if you've come for the Baron, it wouldn't be possible even if you had an appointment. The Baron's resting for a couple of days."

The Baron? Oh, yes, the Baron von Offerin. Her brows climbed. So the Baron was resting, was he?

"Is Mr. Wain resting also?" she queried, thinking it was a shame to waste the dig on such Teutonic stolidity.

"Mr. Wain is in New York."

"In that case, I'd like to see Mrs. Wain."

"Mrs. Wain isn't here, she's also in New York."

"But I've got to see somebody!" Ann cried. "I'm Miss Rivers! I own this place!"

The man's eyes popped as he said, "Wait! I find out; I call Johnson!"

Johnson appeared, every inch of him a granite Vermonter. He offered "If you will just wait a minute, Miss, I can tell you when Mr Wain is coming back." He hurried toward the house.

Ann looked after him. Obviously, they'de been expecting her to show up some time or other. She said to the Teutonic stock man, "How many dogs has Mr. Wain got here?"

"Twenty-two of them, Miss, not counting the Baron and a new litter." His eyes were on Rowdy. "That's a nice little one of yours. Out of the Rheingold bloodlines, yah?"

"She is," Ann said in surprise "How could you tell?"

"She's got the Rheingold head. Also, I been in this business thirty years; I ought to be able to know a few things." He dropped on his knees before the dog, examining the spring of her ribs, the firmness of quarters, stifles and hocks. Ann watched him, arrested.

This was no casual petting, no friendly winning of the dog's affection. He was like a veterinarian, the way he pulled down Rowdy's jowls, spaced off the spread of her head, and examined her bite. Then running his hand knowingly along the straight clean line of her back he rose to his feet.

"Where would you fault her?" Ann asked eagerly.

"Nothing she won't grow out of. Did Mr. Wain get a look at her?"

"Yes. He chose Gretel instead."

"Sure. Gretel's better in the hind quarters."

"How about the brisket?" Ann's voice was tart with an innuendo that was lost on him. He shrugged. "Nothing the matter with the brisket," he said. "Her brisket's all right."

"Well, well, well," Ann murmured, "I must have done a good job."

"She's in nice shape," he conceded. "Coat's in nice condition. bones covered nice. What do you give her?"

"She's had half a horse," said Ann.

Mr. Johnson returned at that moment. He was panting a little. "I just spoke to Mr. Wain on the telephone. He—he's driving up. He says for you please stay until he gets here; he—he has to see you." Johnson stammered a little in his eagerness. "He says for you please to go up to your old room if you've a mind to and Mrs. Johnson will fix some lunch for you."

Ann felt the slow color rise to her cheeks. "Thank you," she said. "I'll just run down to the village and have a sandwich at the drugstore."

"Mr. Wain won't like that, Ma'am," Johnson protested a little nervously.

Ann smiled pleasantly and said, "Mr. Wain won't like a lot of things."

Christopher Wain drew a complicated doodle on his desk pad. It was one of his better doodles, starting out with the block outline of a Great Dane, and then slowly working through a metamorphosis of curlycues into the elaborately tufted semblance of a French poodle. The two men facing him droned on with their story. He had already assimilated their tale of woe but he had to let their righteousness run its course. Presently he would get down to the bitter business of making them realize that there never was a story with only one side to it. That was it—there was always another side.

Wain glanced down at the clipping on his desk, which told of the death, the week before, of the noted polo player, Jimmie Hemingway .. an automobile wreck outside of Dublin, somebody's wife who would never be the same again .. Jimmie was a specialist with other people's wives. Although in specializing with Brenda, it hadn't really been another man's wife, for the Wain marriage had been a travesty long before Jimmie had come upon the scene. Christopher wondered what effect the tragic end of Hemingway's life would have on Brenda. She had never discussed the relationship, but he had assumed, when she had asked for a divorce six months ago, Jimmie had been the reason for her abrupt decision. He glanced again at the date of the clipping. April seventeenth. That would be last Thursday. Brenda had written him on Thursday and the letter had been forwarded to the Broadfields where he was spending the weekend. She hadn't mentioned Jimmie's death but one could never tell with Brenda; she might or might not have heard about it.

Smith, his secretary — she had lost the "Miss" several years back —slipped into the room and put a mesage before him. He glanced at it. Johnson at Myles is on the phone.

"Tell him I'll call back."

Smith scribbled another note and put it over the first. It's something about Miss Rivers.

"Why didn't you say so?" he demanded. "Excuse me, gentlemen." He picked up the telephone. "Wain speaking."

"She's here!" Johnson's voice assumed the quality of an arch conspirator. He didn't know what her visit meant but he knew it was important. ("There are exactly two things for you to do," his employer had impressed upon him. "Oversee Broadfields, and notify me immediately if a Miss Rivers appears upon the scene.")

Christopher was on his feet as he placed the receiver in its cradle. "Gentlemen," he addressed his clients "perhaps you had better send me all the correspondence relating to this case and let me study it. I will give it several days' careful attention at my place up in the country."

He ushered them to the door, and turned into Smith's office adjoining his own. "Clear up everything," he instructed her. "I'm going up to Myles. I'll let you know when I'll be back."

He could see protestation sizzling on the secretarial tongue. She knew all his affairs, guarding his bank accounts, and looked upon the dog business as not only an extravagance, but a hobby that seriously interfered with his profession. There had been a growing element of disfavor in her attitude during the past weeks, for it was she who had written the letter confirming the rental of Broadfields, and she who had made out the checks for subsequent expenditures. Now she met his announcement with candid opposition. "It's a wonder you didn't find some cosy little retreat in northern Canada," she remarked. Then she added, "Don't forget you're to meet Mrs. Wain for lunch. She's called twice to remind you."

He wheeled on her. "My My! What kind of a secretary are you? I told you to get me out of it."

"I'm sorry. I can't achieve the impossible. Mrs. Wain was in one of her persistent moods." Smith scribbled something on a slip of paper and gave it to him. He glanced at her with a scowl.

"I know perfectly well that Mrs. Wain lunches at the Colony and where that is"

"But you have a convenient habit of forgetting it," she remarked.

"Tie a card to my coat lapel with my name and address on it, why don't you?"

"That's an idea," Smith took up with alacrity. "I'll also put on it: 'Please return to law practice when found'."

He grinned sheepishly, making a twill of the slip of paper, and inserting it like a boutonniere in his lapel. "You're a keen gal!" he told her, and dropped a kiss on her astonished cheek.

She watched him disappear thru' the door. If she were thirty she knew she'd be madly in love with him, but as it was, she could only mother him.

"A first class legal mind; yet he had to get himself mixed up with a woman like Brenda, and, raise dogs instead of a family." She addressed this to a Hogarth print of lawyer and client that hung on the wall.

* * *

Christopher stumbled into the Colony. He was about to accost a dim shadowy dress and hat at the bar when he heard Brenda call to him from a table in the corner.

"Well, stranger," his former wife greeted him in her clear brittle voice, "have a drink?"

"Not if you've had yours." He put his hand on her shoulder. "Let's eat. I'm dashing out cf town."

A waiter led them to a stall where the light was just sufficiently better to enable one to read an exotic bill of fare. Christopher put it aside without glancing at it. "Corn beef and cabbage," he ordered, after Brenda had settled on eggs with a fancy name.

"Beg pardon, Monsieur?"

"Monsieur is a peasant at heart when it comes to food," Brenda smilingly explained to the waiter as her ex-husband changed his order to boeuf a la mode. She patted Christopher's hand. "You are a peasant, you know. A rather nice peasant, but still a peasant."

"Was this meeting arranged so that you could call me such pet names?" he objected. "If so, you could have done that just as well over the phone."

"Sweet—" The word was one that Brenda used as some people use a comma. It served to punctuate a pause or a change of topic. "Sweet, I do believe that now we're divorced we can be better friends than we ever were. Actually Chris I could fall in love with you all over again. Oh, don't look so horrified —I shan't. But I can't help feeling that this is all so beautifully civilized and friendly."

"Brenda, it's—quite barbaric," he stated firmly.

"And you're looking so well," Brenda was a past master at keeping a conversation exactly where and how she wanted it. "Different. Younger. Excited. What's this I hear about a farm in Connecticut?"

Christopher girded himself. That was Brenda all over. She'd prattle on and on, and suddenly into the middle of supposedly idle chatter she'd slip the vital question. And woe betide the unsuspecting, or she'd be in like a lynx to the kill.

"Oh, it's just the kind of set-up I've always wanted," he returned, offhanded. "Try to imagine the very opposite to the Westchester place and you have it."

"Good Lord! Hasn't it even got a bathroom.

"Several. But they're nice old fashioned white ones."

"Oh?" it was one of Brenda's "Ohs," uttered like a question. She turned her head, bird-like, to one side and studied him. "You know, Chris, as a woman of the world who had done all of the proper things, and some of the more properly improper ones—who has been married for six years to the unpredictable but thoroughly delightful Christopher Wain, and who has graduated from the Reno school of divorce, I would say—"

"You'd say what?" Christopher interrupted, halting his attack on the Colony's version of boeuf a la mode.

"I would say that a lady had come into your life."

"Bosh!" he retorted.

"Or perhaps," Brenda purred on, "it might be a new dog."

"Right!" he conceded with relief.

"You see, darling, I know you so well. Do tell me about it. Something you've imported, of course."

He eyed her distrustfully. Talking to Brenda was like being interrogated by the Gestapo, she inquired by indirection.

"No, she's American bred," he answered cautiously. "I bought her from Paul Freund."

"Boorish creature! He came looking for you at Crestview a couple of weeks ago. His wife was with him. Pretty little thing."

"She was on the stage," Christopher mentioned conversationally, "Odd combination, those two."

She glanced at him shyly. He saw what was running through her head and chuckled inwardly. Brenda was as jealous as if she were still married to him. She didn't want him but, like predatory female she didn't want anybody else to have him.

"Look here," he said good-naturedly, "leave the Freunds out of this. They're having a hard enough time getting along as it is. Nobody's buying Great Danes these days, and he hasn't done much winning with the foreign competition I've brought in."

Brenda laughed—one of those tinkling laughs that never quite come off.

"Ah, now I know why you bought an American bred dog! You went soft hearted and wanted to help them out. I'll bet you paid a pretty price for the creature."

"Just the usual. And it wasn't a gesture. She's a flyer."

"Do tell me what you saw in her," Brenda coaxed.

"Well," Christopher began, "she's got everything: dark eyes, splendid tuck-up, perfect hind quarters—it's a joy to see her gait—" As he spoke he remembered the picture of Rowdy and Gretel racing across the lawn at Broadfields, with Ann standing beside him watching. Fervor crept into his voice in spite of himself. "She's beautiful," he summed up simply.

"What's her name"?

"Ann." It slipped out unconsciously. He could have kicked himself around the block. Pulling Brenda's leg, he'd tripped himself good and proper.

HAIDA PIONEERS NEWTYPEWARFARE FOR CANUCK NAVY

Tribal Class Ship and Sister Craft Have Remarkable Series of Achievements

MANY DECORATIONS

This spring Canadian destroyers added surface action to their anti-submarine role. This story, one of a series on Canadian naval activities by a CP War Reporter is about H.M.C.S. Haida, the ship that fired the first shots in Canada's first naval surface action in history.

By FRANK LOWE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

A South Coast Port, England, Oct. 1 (CP)—In the seamen's alphabet, the letter "H" could stand for heroism, heartbreak and Haida because during the year that has seen H.M.C.S. Haida develop into a battle-hardened destroyer the three have been inexorably tied together.

Until this spring Haida was just another Tribal class destroyer with big guns and no targets, and then she went into the English Channel to pioneer a new phase of naval warfare for Canadian ships.

Up to the time Haida began her hazardous runs in the choppy channel separating Britain from France, Canadian craft had been used exclusively as anti-submarine ships.

Battle Elbing Class Destroyers.

But Haida, and her sister Dominion ships Huron and Athabaskan, early in April slugged it out with Elbing class destroyers—craft that are smaller but more heavily armed than Canadian ships—and won.

Then a few days later, Athabaskan and Haida were out again and in the inky blackness of a spring morning engaged more Elbings. Athabaskan blew up and Haida was left, outnumbered, to fight alone.

Throwing broadside after broadside and snake-dancing through the answering broadsiders of the Germans, Haida exacted quick revenge for the sinking of her sister ship. Then, with German shore batteries hunting them and with torpedo-bearing R-boats in the vicinity, the Canadian craft returned to pick up survivors from Athabaskan—a daring, skilful bit of seamanship that won the D.S.O. for her skipper, Capt. H. G. DeWolf of Bedford, N.S.

With the invasion and the resulting escape attempts by the Germans from the channel ports, Haida had few action-free days or nights.

Ship after ship she sent to the bottom in company with R. N. ships —Capt. DeWolf added a D.S.C. to the D.S.O. while Lieut. Chuck Mawer of Calgary got a D.S.C. and CPO. Doug Abbott of Victoria won the D.S.M. twice.

But Haida didn't escape unscathed Enemy fire punctured her sides, men died in the backflash of jammed guns, twice flames licked high over her superstructure and on several occasions storms gave her a bad pummelling

She always came back, however, to this grey stone port that is her overseas home, and, after a brief time for refueling and repairs, put to sea again.

Many Decorations For Crew

An East Coast Canadian Port, Oct. 2 (CP)—Proud of the record of their gallant vessel, members of the crew of the Canadian destroyer Haida have returned to Canada on leave after hanging up a list of achievements second to none in the Royal Canadian Navy

In an action-packed six months they and their Tribal class vessel have shared with other R.C.N craft and with Royal Navy ships in one U-boat sunk, four enemy destroyers sunk or otherwise destroyed, four destroyers damaged, 10 merchant ships and small escort vessels sunk, two small craft captured with Nazi seamen fleeing from France.

These same operations, while the Haida prowled the coast of France under enemy guns on the hunt for trouble, brought 10 decorations and 21 mentions in dispatches for the Haida's crew under Capt. Harry G. DeWolf D.S.O., D.S.C., of Bedford, N.S.

Gordon Brydson Wins Playoff

Seigniory Club, Que., Oct. 2—(CP) —Gordon Brydson of Toronto today captured the Canadian Professional Golfers Association championship, shooting a one-over-par 72 to whip Gerry Proulx of Montreal in an 18-hole play-off.

The two, who tied at the end of 72 holes of medal play yesterday, battled until the 16th when Brydson came up with an eagle three on the 370-yard par-five hole, and followed that with a par on the 17th and a birdie on the 18th. Proulx did the 16th in par, but skidded on the next hole and wound up with a 77.

Two Convicts Back in Cells

Prince Albert, Sask., Oct. 2—(CP)—Two convicts were back in their cells today and a prison garage instructor was in hospital following an escape-attempt at the Saskatchewan Penitentiary here.

The instructor, J. W. R. Clarke, was blackjacked by the convicts, prison authorities reported today, and suffered shock and bruises. The convicts' names were not disclosed.

The prisoners obtained the key to a penitentiary truck and attempted to drive to freedom through a gateway. A shot from a guard's rifle halted them in the prison yard.

A year ago, Charles Chisholm, an instructor in the prison shoeshop, was stabbed by a convict. Stiff suffering from his wound, he has not yet returned to work.

Lieut.-Governor Granted Leave

Regina, Oct 2 (CP)—Premier Douglas said today he had been informed by Ottawa authorities that Lieutenant-Governor A. P. McNab of Saskatchewan had been granted leave of absence from Oct. 1 to the end of the year when it is expected he will retire.

Chief Justice W. M. Martin of the Saskatchewan Appeal Court has been appointed administrator to substitute for the Lieutenant-Governor. It was reported he had consented to act in that capacity only until the year-end.

Cairo Says Huns Yield 3 Islands Off South Greece

London, Oct. 2 —(CP)— The Germans were reported from Cairo today to have given up three islands off the southern tip of Greece in the face of British commando attacks while other advices told of Allied forces driving into Greece from the northwest and of partisans fighting in the vicinity of Athens.

The Paris radio said Allied troops had landed in northwestern Greece on the Albanian frontier and had made contact with Greek patriots.

Meanwhile, the BBC broadcast a Cairo report that German forces hopelessly isolated by the collapsing Balkans, have given up three islands between Crete and Greece to British commando troops. One island, possibly Kapela, was said to be off the southern tip of Greece. The others were not located.

The official German news agency D.N.B. asserted without confirmation that British airborne forces in Albania had been thrown back near the port of Valona and the coastal stronghold of Himara. The British 5th Airborne Division, 2nd Airborne Brigade and a Highland infantry regiment were said to be taking part in the fighting.

Two days ago the Greek prime minister, George Papandreou, hinted that Greece's liberation was drawing near. From Cairo he announced the signing of an agreement between the Greek government and armed organization in Greece and said: "Today is the last time we address the nations from abroad. The time that separates us is now very short."

SIR WM. MULOCK

Most Rev. J. C. McGuigan, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Toronto, said Sir William "was a model of the public spirited citizen and gave unstintingly of his services to every cause for the good of the community".

Premier Drew of Ontario, said the famed jurist's death brings to an end "one of the most useful lives in Canadian history". He had been an outstanding example to coming generations of the real meaning of public service.

Sir William's death leaves Sir Allan Aylesworth, 89, of Toronto, the only surviving member of Sir Wilfrid's Cabinets. Sir Allan said last night that Sir William's "unequalled success as postmaster general and Canada's first minister of Labor gave him a parliamentary and administrative reputation in Canada never excelled and seldom rivalled anywhere".

Born in Bondhead.

Sir William was born in the village of Bondhead, Simcoe County, Ont., son of Thomas Homan Mulock, a young Irish physician, and Mary Cawthra, daughter of English settlers. He attended school in Newmarket and in September, 1859, entered University of Toronto as a member of the first class to study in the present University College building.

Graduating in 1863, he was called to the bar in 1867.

In 1881 he became vice-chancellor of the University of Toronto, holding the office until 1900, when he retired owing to pressure of work with the federal government.

He was elected to the Dominion parliament in 1882 and re-elected later until his retirement in 1905. During his 14 years, he revamped the post office department and was responsible for the adoption of penny postage, imperial cable and organized the department of Labor. He hired as his first assistant in the Labor department, the present prime minister.

Sir William was knighted in 1902 for his service to Canada and attended the coronation later of King Edward VII.

Defended Judiciary

In his later years he more than once attacked what he felt was a tendency of Canadian legislatures to encroach on judicial ground. "British justice is a priceless possession," he said on one of these occasions. "Of late years some of the legislatures in Canada, not appreciating the effect of a certain class of legislation, have moved in the direction of interfering with the independence of judges, and I avail myself of this opportunity of suggesting to the Bar whether it would not be advisable for them to organize for the watching of proposed legislation which may impair the administration of justice. For long years legislation has encroached on many of the people's most sacred rights." He was also an uncompromising foe of Communism.

On one of his later birthdays he told an interviewer, "I am living on borrowed time but I enjoy it just the same." A few months afterwards he was shaken but unhurt in a motor car collision near his home, and he got out and gave the youthful driver a lecture on safe driving.

Born in the village of Bondhead, Simcoe County, Ont., January 19, 1843, son of Dr. Thomas Muloch, a native of King's County, Ireland, and Mary, daughter of John Cawthra, M.L.A., William Muloch passed his early years on a farm in Simcoe. Doubtless the boy who was destined to write his name in Canadian affairs was influenced by the pioneer rural environment of his youth where he learned the importance of hard work.

William Mulock was educated at the Grammar School in Newmarket, Ont., and the University of Toronto, and graduated from the university as gold medallist in modern languages in 1863.

After graduation from the university, he entered on a course at Osgoode Hall and made a fine record in the study of law. He was called to the Bar in 1868. Later he accepted a lectureship in Law at Osgoode, where he also became an examiner. He practised his profession while occupying these positions and ultimately organized the law firm in Toronto which still bears his name.

Entering the Dominion Parliament as Liberal member for North York in 1882, Sir William was re-elected in that constituency in 1887, 1891, 1896, 1900 and 1905. When he retired in 1905 he had the honor of never being defeated in an election contest.

Entered Cabinet in 1896

He became a member of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Cabinet in 1896 with the portfolio of Postmaster-General. Two years afterwards, on Sir William's motion, the Inter-Imperial Postage Conference in London adopted penny postage within the British Empire. Postage rates on letters between Canada and the United States were reduced while he was Postmaster-General from three cents to two cents, but the old three-cent rate was resumed during the War.

Sir William Mulock organized the Department of Labor in Canada in 1900, and while retaining the position of Postmaster-General became the head of the new department. In this connection it is of interest to recall that as Minister of Labor his first deputy minister was Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, present Prime Minister of Canada.

Sir William retired from politics in 1905, having been Postmaster-General nine years and Minister of Labor five years. He then was appointed Chief Justice of the Exchequer Division of the High Court of Justice in Ontario, and later succeeded the late Sir William Ralph Meredith as Chief Justice of Ontario. On a number of occasions he filled the position as Administrator of the Province of Ontario in the absence of the Lieutenant-Governor.

Receiving knighthood in 1902 for services to the Empire, Sir William attended the coronation of Edward VII. the same year.

Lady Mulock, formerly Sarah Crowther, died in 1912 and William and Cawthra, sons, some years later. Other children are Mrs. Henry H. O'Flynn, and Mrs. A. E. Kirkpatrick. Col. W. P. Mulock, M.P., York North, is a grandson.

Distinguished as a jurist, educationist and statesman, Sir William was responsible for introducing Canada's present Prime Minister, Rt Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, into public life 44 years ago, when as Dominion Labor Minister, he made Mr. King his deputy. The two had been close friends since.

A graduate of Osgoode Hall, Sir William practised law before he entered Parliament as Liberal member for York North in 1882. When he retired in 1905 he had never been defeated in an election. Nine of those years in the cabinet of Sir Wilfrid Laurier were spent as postmaster general and Sir William became known as the father of Empire penny rate postage which was accepted by an inter-imperial postage conference in London in 1898.

Varsity Chancellor.

Sir William was long connected with the University of Toronto, where he himself graduated. He became its chancellor in 1924 and remained in that post until his death. One of the highlights of his career as an educationist came in June last year when he conferred a bachelor of art degree on his great grandson, William Johnston Mulock, son of Col. Mulock.

Somewhere along the road of life, Sir William dropped a year off his age. His last birthday was celebrated as his 100th, but the records show he was born January 19, 1843, in the village of Bondhead, Simcoe County, Ont., the son of a country doctor, Thomas Mulock, a native of King's County, Ireland.

Brought up on a farm, Sir William always championed the rights of the agriculturist when he entered public life.

In his later years in the judiciary he more than once attacked what he felt was a tendency of Canadian legislatures to encroach on judicial ground. He believed that "British justice is a priceless possession".

In his late years Sir William was frequently interviewed and always the subject of his age came up. He attributed his longevity to his choice of healthy parents. He once said that he was "living on borrowed time but I enjoy it just the same".

A few months after that he was shaken up but unhurt in an auto collison, but he got out and gave the youthful driver of the other car a lecture on safe driving.

On Sir William's last birthday celebration, Prime Minister King took a day off from his busy Ottawa duties to spend it with Sir William at Toronto. The "grand old man" held a reception at his home for his numerous friends.

He retired as Chief Justice of Ontario in .936, at the age of 93. He was still vigorous, mentally and physically. He continued active in the duties of Chancellor of the University of Toronto.

A few months previously, when celebrating his 92nd birthday, he remarked: "I am still at work with my hand to the plough and my face to the future. The shadows of evening lengthen about me but morning is in my heart. I have lived from the 40s of one century to the 30s of the next. I have had varied fields of labor and full contact with men and things, and I have warmed both hands before the fire of life.

"The testimony I bear is this: the Castle of Enchantment is not yet behind me. The rich spoils of memory are mine. Mine too are the precious things of today, books flowers, pictures, nature and sport. The first of May (he remained an ardent fisherman in his 90s) is still an enchanted day for me.

"The best thing of all is friends. The best of life is always further on. Its real lure is hidden from our eyes, somewhere beyond the hills of time". Worry was one of the worst diseases affecting mankind, he declared.

He attributed his longevity to his choice of good healthy parents. "I have always been an optimist", he also remarked. Even as an octogenarian he planted a large tract of his North York estate with black walnut trees and started broad acres of the Georgian Bay district in reforestation.

Achieved Many Things

Sir William Mulock, though identified with numerous interests of a public or semi-public nature, was essentially an educationist, as his long connection with the University of Toronto indicates. He was chiefly responsible for the federation which brought Victoria, Wycliffe, Knox and St. Michael's Colleges into the university. When only 30 years of age he became a Senator of the University and continued to be a member of the Senate until his appointment as Chancellor, April 28, 1924.

While in office at Ottawa, Sir William took a leading part in bringing about the laying of the Pacific cable between Canada and Australia. One of the early advocates of public ownership in Canada, Sir William endeavored to persuade the Laurier Government to take over the telegraph and telephone systems of the Dominion. The failure of the Intercolonial Railway to make ends meet proved too strong an argument against this suggested extension of government ownership.

Brought up on the farm, he was always a champion of the agriculturist. One of the first bills he introduced in Parliament was for the protection of farmers from unscrupulous patent holders. He sponsored another bill to prevent trains from blocking highway crossings to the inconvenience and loss of farmers in getting across to the market. Sir William made an attempt to get a bill through Parliament prohibiting members from travelling on railway passes, but was unsuccessful.

Sir William Mulock's path in his young manhood was in striking contrast with that of his maturer years, and when at college he had to be resourceful and exceedingly careful in order to finance his way through.

When he arrived in Toronto to begin his college course, fresh from the farm in Simcoe County which his widowed mother conducted, his chief capital was an ambition to gain knowledge, a determination to advance and a belief in himself. Of money he had little, and the nucleus of that little had been earned by gravelling turnpike roads in Simcoe, a wheelbarrow and shovel being his road machinery. He carefully husbanded his small resources by cooking his own meals in the room where he lodged, by teaching in Upper Canada College and by doing work at nights as a tutor.

An incident in connection with Sir William Mulock's numerous interests in things affecting the public welfare is related in connection with the Toronto and York Patriotic Fund Association, which did valuable work during the War. One evening in 1915 a group of Toronto citizens were assembled at the association's headquarters checking up the day's street collections in aid of the Toronto victims of the War. Out of one of the boxes tumbled a street car ticket, worth about four cents. The ticket was immediately put up for auction for the benefit of the fund. The bids ranged from $1 into the hundreds. Finally the auctioneer called out: "Are you all done?" They were all done, but one person. "Sold to Sir William Mulock for $1,000." exclaimed the auctioneer.

5. Beer:

2nd answer: He did not know the men were not getting their half-bottle per week, as arranged. The fact that the beer was sometimes British was due to pooling. He would investigate.

6. Why isn't the Canadian Corps equipped entirely with Canadian vehicles? Why are the Canadians sometimes using second-hand British trucks while British units are using new Canadian trucks?

Answer: Like beer, vehicles are pooled. There was a policy of the direct supply of Canadian vehicles to the Canadian Corps but it was always subject to "operational requirements."

7. Cigarets:

2nd answer: Delivery in Italy will be speeded up by the use of vehicles instead of trains.

8. Mail:

The system was not perfect and he would try to get more planes.

(Generally speaking, the mail situation in Italy had been good until it slipped slightly in the last few months: Air mail letters average about two weeks from Canada to the front. Parcels are slow in reaching here, but it has been pointed out that thousands go astray because of bad packing and poor or inaccurate addressing.)

To questions of rehabilitation, gratuities and loans the minister gave the answers which have already been made known by Ottawa.

STRONGEST FORT GUARDING METZ CAPTURED

Burning Oil Used To Drive Germans Out From Tunnels

Dunkerque Civilians Leave During 36-Hour Truce

By JAMES M. LONG
(C. P. War Correspondent.)

London, Oct. 4 (AP)—American 3rd Army troops captured Fort Driant, strongest bastion of the fortress ring guarding Metz, by assault today and their 1st Army comrades 125 miles to the north shoved deeper through defences guarding the Rhine and Cologne.

A 36-hour truce at Dunkerque, to enable evacuation of an estimated 20,000 civilians before British infantry of the 1st Canadian Army launches its final assault on the historic 1940 escape port, went into effect at 6 a.m. today, front reports said.

One report added there was belief at 1st Canadian Army headquarters that the German garrison, believed to number about 15,000, would be ready to surrender shortly after cessation of the Armistice.

A similar truce was granted at Calais last week before Canadian infantry moved in for the final onslaught, and the garrison there surrendered a few hours after battle was resumed.

Dunkerque is the last bit of territory still held by the enemy along the channel coast of France.

Sever Aachen Escape Road.

The U. S. 1st Army, battling hastily-gathered German reserves, had severed a main escape road north of Aachen, and was cutting off that ruined stronghold in developing the breach torn in the west wall defences.

Fort Driant, on the Moselle river's west bank, fell after a two-day battle. Infantry in the final hours burned out the last Germans by setting fire to crude oil sprayed into tunnels of the fortifications.

Seven miles north of Metz, other units seized Mazieres Les Metz, and high ground on the Moselle's west bank along the Luxembourg-German frontier.

Favored by clearing weather on the Vosges front, the American 7th army liberated the villages of Grandvillers, Deyeimont and Lepanges northeast of Epinal and to the south edged farther into the valley entrance to the Belfort gap.

Quiet on British Front.

Only fighting of note on the British 2nd Army front in Holland today came when Lt.-Gen. Dempsey's men beat off a light counter-attack north of Nijmegen in a brief but fierce encounter.

Flood threat faced German troops on Walcheren Island, off the Dutch coast, where R.A.F. Lancasters yesterday blew out 120 yards of the sea wall protecting the island from the North Sea.

Gen. Eisenhower had warned civilians to evacuate all the islands off the southwest coast of Holland.

Several big guns capable of sweeping approaches to Antwerp harbor are located on Walcheren, westernmost one of the chain.

In their advance on the southwest sector of the British Netherlands salient, 1st Canadian Army troops took the important road junction of Withof, eight miles northeast of Antwerp, and cut the Antwerp-Breda road.

Bad weather over the front line curtailed yesterday's activities of French-based Allied aircraft, but altogether more than 550 fighter-bomber sorties were flown in support of ground troops.

1st Army Still Gaining.

U. S. 1st army troops struck on each side of Ubach, taken in breaching the Siegfried Line. Its units fought along and across the main northeast road from Aachen to Gladbach. Aachen already was flanked on the south by the first major breach in the Westwall line.

A front dispatch said the 1st Army still was gaining on this third day of its new offensive and the Germans were reforming stragglers into new battle groups. The battle was for German positions backstopping the Siegfried Line in this area.

Infantry smashed a German counter-attack in company strength at dawn against the wedge driven three miles east of Ubach. The 1st Army was moving ahead in that sector, knocking out road blocks.

Allies Could 'See' Nazis Take Off Over 100 Miles Away

Toronto, Oct. 4 (CP)—By use of a "fighter direction ship" in the English Channel, the Allies could "see" Nazi planes take off from their bases more than 100 miles from the Normandy coast invasion beaches, it was revealed here today by a young Toronto naval officer just returned from overseas, Lt.-Cmdr. Ronald Weyman, 29.

"Our job was to cruise up and down the channel 'spotting' enemy planes on the way to attack our forces," he said "Often their aircraft never got off the ground before they were attacked by our fighters" Details of the spotting devices were not disclosed.

20,000 Civilians At Dunkerque Being Evacuated

By BILL BONI
Associated Press War Correspondent

First Canadian Army Headquarters, Oct. 4 (AP)—After a 12-hour preliminary Armistice in which the road leading south from Dunkerque was repaired, some 20,000 civilians began evacuation of that channel port at 6 a.m. today.

The period for withdrawal of the town's population will extend until 6 p.m. tomorrow, following which there will be the traditional 12-hour truce during which the road will be re-dynamited and mined. At 6 a.m. Friday hostilities will be resumed.

The evacuation of civilians through lines of British infantry under Lt.-Gen. Crerar's command is in strange contrast to the British army's bloody withdrawal under fire from the same port 4 1-2 years ago.

The Armistice terms were agreed to at a conference yesterday morning between representatives of the British and German commanders. It was believed here that there was a strong likelihood—as at Calais—that the enemy will be ready to surrender shortly after cessation of the Armistice.

MISCHIEVOUS MONK CAPTURED

Miami, Fla., Oct. 4 (AP)—A monkey with a penchant for nipping passing ankles sent Miami's police force on an impromptu safari all day yesterday The monkey led police in patrol cars and on foot a merry chase throgh back yards, vacant lots and city streets. Salted peanuts, bananas and cajoling words failed to tempt him to surrender, but finally he fell victim to a dog catcher's net.

SPAIN WILL NOT PROVIDE ASYLUM FOR CRIMINALS

Foreign Secretary, Anthony Eden, Makes Announcement In House of Commons

OTHER QUESTIONS

London, Oct. 4 —(CP Reuter)—Spain has assured Great Britain that she will not provide asylum for war criminals, Foreign Secretary Eden [illegible] the House of Commons today. He said the British Ambassador in Madrid had received assurances to this effect, as did the American Ambassador.

Mr. Eden asked for time to reply to the question of whether similar assurances had been received from Portugal.

When Capt. Cunningham Reid, Independent, suggested the possibility of war criminals arriving in Spain under assumed names, the Foreign Secretary replied: "I think human ingenuity can deal with that."

Mr. Eden assured the House that the government was opposed to the return of Italian colonies to Italy. Percy Bartow, Labor, had sought assurance that the British government would adhere strictly to their declaration that the Italian Empire in Africa was irrevocably lost.

To another question Mr. Eden replied that the majority of Spanish internees in France had already been released and rapid examination of the files of the others was being made by the French authorities.

Matter for French.

Asked whether guarantees against enforced repatriation of these Spaniards to Spain could be given, the Foreign Secretary said it was a matter for the French authorities who "I am sure will deal with it in accordance with the principles of justice and humanity." A number of Spanish Republicans had joined the French Forces of the Interior, Mr. Eden added.

George Strauss, Labor, asked the Foreign Secretary if those responsible for crimes against German democrats and anti-Nazis such as the recent murder of 7,000 internees at the Buchenwald concentration camp would be added to the list of war criminals.

Mr. Eden replied that crimes committed by Germans against Germans, however reprehensible, were in a different category from war crimes and could not be dealt with under the same procedure. He could not agree with the suggestion that the War Crimes Commission terms of reference be widened. "They have a very definite and prescribed task." Some other means of dealing with those Germans guilty of crimes against Germans would have to be found, he said.

'Big Four' of Nazi Leaders on List Of War Criminals Says Churchill

London, Oct. 4 — (CP-Reuter) — Prime Minister Churchill made it clear in the House of Commons today that Hitler, Goering, Goebbels and Himmler were on the British list of war criminals.

Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, had asked the Prime Minister whether the German leaders named were on the British and United Nations list of Axis war criminals.

"So far as the British list is concerned," said Mr. Churchill, "the parties mentioned are included. It should not be assumed that procedure of trial will be necessarily adopted (cheers). I am not in a position to make any statement about the United Nations list at the present time."

Samuel Silverman, Labor, asked if the Prime Minister was aware that under the War Crimes Commission terms of reference none of "these gentlemen" would be indictable for any act committed against German Nationals.

Mr. Churchill replied:

"We have to consider a lot of countries and we are in touch with many countries. I was asked a question I was not particularly looking forward to because all this is very general at the present time. We have not completed our job yet and I am not able to give full answers respecting international bodies."

Sir William Davison, Conservative, suggested some law should be laid down as to how cases of this kind should be treated.

"I would not like to commit myself to any sweeping assertion which would appear to challenge the broad foundations of international law," said the Prime Minister. "I do not think there is any immediate hurry about making any further announcement on the subject."

Savage Struggle Rages Within and Beyond Siegfried Barrier

By DON WHITEHEAD
(AP War Correspondent)

Rimberg, Germany, Oct. 4 —(AP)—Savage, bitter fighting raged within and beyond the Siegfried Line today as infantrymen battled to widen their new breach in Nazi defences which Hitler has ordered held to the death.

With chill winds blowing across the fields and woods, United States infantrymen slowly were driving the Germans from pill-boxes, foxholes and houses. The enemy was using all the manpower he could scrape together in the attempt to hold the drive of the 1st Army.

From Ubach south to Merkstein and Hofstadt the battle is flaming intensely. The Germans are rushing up 75 and 88-mm. guns for direct fire and artillery is thundering all along the front.

Three times in the early morning the Germans counter-attacked trying to drive the Americans back from hard-won positions. But each time infantry and artillery poured fire into the enemy and broke up the forays with no loss of ground.

FORMER GOVERNOR ALFRED E. SMITH DIES IN NEW YORK

Democratic Candidate for President of United States in 1928

ILL LONG TIME

New York, Oct. 4 — (AP)—Alfred E. Smith, 70, native of New York City's east side, four times Governor of New York State and 1928 Democratic presidential candidate, died today.

Death came to the man who made the brown derby famous at 6:20 a.m. E.D.T. in Rockefeller Institute. Dr. Raymond P. Sullivan, his physician, said lung congestion and acute heart failure were the causes. He had been transferred to the Institute Sept. 23 from St. Vincent's Hospital where he had been treated for an intestinal and liver disturbance since Aug. 10.

Only last night a dozen red roses arrived at the hospital for him from President and Mrs. Roosevelt. It was Mr. Roosevelt who nicknamed Mr. Smith the "Happy Warrior" when he nominated him for the presidency in 1928.

The close political and personal friendship between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Smith cooled, however, in 1936 when Mr. Smith took what he called "a walk" from Mr. Roosevelt and the Democratic party and supported Alf Landon for the presidency. He again opposed the New Deal in 1940, stumping for the Republican candidate, Wendell L. Willkie.

Not Active Recently

Mr. Smith had not taken an active part in politics in recent years, devoting himself to management of the Empire State Building and aiding in bond drives and other civic activities.

A prominent Roman Catholic, Mr. Smith knew he was dying "and was praying all the time," said Rev. John Healy, his pastor, who was present when death came. Father Healy said Smith "passed on peacefully." His death took place five months to the day from the death of his wife, Catherine Dunn Smith.

He was defeated for the presidency in 1928 by Herbert Hoover. Although he carried only eight states he received 41.2 per cent of the total vote.

5TH ARMY MAKES SLIGHT GAINS ON 20-MILE FRONT

Stiffest Resistance Yet Encountered in the Italian Sector

TROOPS BOGGED DOWN

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Rome, Oct. 4 (AP)—British and American infantry of the Allied 5th Army made slight gains yesterday on a 20-mile front through the stiffest kind of German resistance, the Allied command announced today.

In the Adriatic sector, the Fiumicino river, behind which the Germans are strongly entrenched, was in full flood and only a few British 8th Army patrols managed to cross it to probe enemy positions.

Fighting was reported in Borghi at the inland end of the 8th Army front spanning the southeastern corner of the Po valley. The town remained in British hands.

Deep mud and determined opposition slowed 5th Army troops fighting along valley roads on the north side of the Apennines toward the Po valley.

Clearing skies helped artillery observation, however, and Allied guns held German road movemnets to a minimum.

Near the coast, an official report said the Brazilian division with the 5th Army "continued to maintain pressure against the enemy along its entire front."

In the mountainous central sector the most striking gains were made east of highway 65, the main Florence-Bologna artery. American units reached the area just south of Boschi, 15 airline miles from Bologna, a city of 270,000.

Other American units driving northwest toward the Po valley road junction of Imola mopped up Campeggio, and advanced 1,000 yards. who cleared the junction town of Monghidor advances two miles beyond to within 16 of Bologna. San Menedetto, 3 1-2 miles west of Monghidor, and Sant'Andrea two miles farther west, also were seized.

Fifth army British troops moving up toward Faenza repulsed sharp counter-attacks and gain another hill position.

Clearing weather enabled bombers to resume support of the Allied armies on a moderate scale. Six planes were lost from 800 sorties.

New 'V' Uniform For British Army

London Oct. 4— (CP) — Mass production on a new victory uniform for the British Army--to be known as "V"--will be started shortly, it was disclosed today, so it may be ready when Allied troops stage their expected victory march through Berlin.

The new uniform will not be of the battledress type, and military tailoring experts describe it as "the smartest thing ever."

Cut from khaki cloth, the tunic will have lapels and shiny plastic buttons and will be worn with collar and tie. The trousers are a non-crease style.

VETERAN COMMUTER

Oakville, Oct. 4 —(CP)— At 85, Duncan O. (Doc) Cameron says he'll never retire. He's been commuting from Oakville to his Toronto law office for the last 52 years, and has travelled more than 500,000 miles over the same line since buying his first commuter's ticket.

FLOOD WATERS NOW ISOLATE RUHR VALLEY

Dortmund-Ems Canal Wrecked by British Bombers on Night Of September 23rd

31 TRAINS DESTROYED

London, Oct. 4 — (CP) — Allied bombers kept up the pressure on Hitler's transportation system during the night as the Ruhr Valley, heart of industrial western Germany, lay paralysed and cut off from many of the main rail and water connections with the rest of the Reich.

R.A.F. Mosquito bombers attacked 31 trains, 20 barges and 25 motor transports in Germany and Holland after more than 1,000 American daylight bombers, out for the seventh time in nine days, pasted important industrial targets in southern Germany and R.A.F. 'heavies started the flooding of the Dutch islands.

Last night's total brings to 115 the number of trains attacked by Mosquitos on 3 successive nights.

The Ruhr is reported to be completely isolated now by waterway, both from the North Sea and from central and eastern Germany, following the wrecking of the Dortmund-Ems canal by British bombers Sept. 23.

The Air Ministry called it the "most important air attack on German communications so far" and added that the economic and military effects would be far-reaching.

Reconnaissance photographs show long lines of barges lying helpless on the bottom of the canal. Some of the bombs shattered great safety gates and loosed flood waters over hundreds of acres deep in the rear of the Siegfried Line.

A more serious flood threat faced German troops on Walcheren island, off the Dutch coast, where R.A.F. Lancasters yesterday blew out 120 yards of seawall.

REV. J.L. HOMER DIES SUDDENLY

Iroquois, Ont., Oct. 4—(CP)—Rev. J.L. Homer, 63, minister of St. John's Anglican church here, died yesterday while being rushed to hospital at Brockville, Ont. He had been ill for several days and his condition became more serious during the day.

Mr. Homer had been in charge of the parish here for 20 years.

He is survived by his widow and a daughter, Mrs. Bernard Foxton of Kingston, Ont.

HUNGRY BEAR FOILED

Tomiko, Oct. 4 —(CP)— It was a lucky day for the owners of a cookery here that their meat house was solidly constructed. A bear attempted to raid the cookery, owned by Holden Brothers, and dug a large hole, but failed to gain entry. Tomiko is in Temiskaming district.

AB. G. Doran, Belleville, Enjoys Life In French Villa After Invasion

Ottawa, Oct. 4 — (CP) — The assault landing craft flotilla unit attached to the Canadian Navy's combined operations ship Prince David had a busy but easy time in the Southern France invasion, but their first glee at being billeted in a fashionable villa was deflated when they found the condition it was left in by Germans.

Lieut. R. G. Buckingham of Montreal, commander of this only all-Canadian detachment to take part in the landings, said the Canadians had moved to the villa with great expectations but they found the Germans had wrecked its interior, Breaking up the furniture, cutting mattresses and pillows and hacking a handsome car to pieces.

But the Canadians had a week of swimming in the Mediterranean and acting as marine traffic cops for incoming convoys.

The flotilla hit the coast originally about eight hours before the main assault force, carrying in French Commandos for specialized jobs of demobilization. They later landed reinforcements and then took over the villa while acting as marine police.

"We didn't have much excitement," commented Lieut. Ken Crowhurst of Chapleau, Ont., a former Canadian Naval Commando who joined the David just before it left for the invasion. "There was one Jerry plane which used to whizz along the coast every night on reconnaissance and every ship in the place would shoot at it, but it always got away."

Among the Canadian ratings in the flotilla were AB R. Cameron, Iroquois Falls, Ont.; AB. G. Doran, Belleville, Ont.; Stoker J. Funnell, Lansdowne, Ont.; AB. H. Tripp, Peterboro, Ont.; AB. E. J. Wright, Point Edward, Ont.; Stoker J. Evans, Galt, Ont.

Powerful Armored Task Force Moves From Romania

Disorganized Nazis Driven Back 30 Miles in 24 Hours

By DANIEL De LUCE
(AP War Correspondent)

Moscow, Oct. 4 — (AP) — Russian machine-gunners with Yugoslav Partisans acting as guides, drove westward along the Danube less than 20 miles from Belgrade today.

Nearly all Yugoslav territory east of the big elbow formed by the confluence of the Danube and Tisza rivers was reported swept clean of German resistance by Red Army forces advancing like a flood from the foothills of the Transylvanian Alps more than 50 miles beyond the Danubian iron gate.

Scouts of Marshal Tito's Partisan Army ferried across the Danube to meet the Russians on the northern bank and help lead them westward toward the Yugoslav capital, field dispatches said.

While still hammering at the frontiers of Hungary, Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky shifted a powerful armored task force from southwestern Romania with the assignment to free the Yugoslav capital.

Free Rich Farming Country

The rich farming country of the Yugoslavia-Romania border fell in one swoop to the Russian push, which drove the disorganized Germans back as much as 30 miles in 24 hours.

If the present Russian pace is maintained the embattled Serbian population of Belgrade may see a Red Army victory parade before the weekend.

Malinovsky's main force was approaching from the northeast. A simultaneous thrust to the eastward was driving for the Greece-Belgrade railway, blocking of which apparently would isolate an estimated 50,000 Germans in the lower Balkans.

Although liberation of the land of the South Slavs from three dark years of German rule took the spotlight, a Russian objective of even greater strategic importance was the drive to defeat Hungary — the gateway into southeastern Germany. New successes were scored against enemy troops in northern Transylvania.

Close to Transylvania's Capital

Cluj, centuries-old Transylvanian capital, was reported resounding with the sound of Russian guns, now less than 12 miles southeast. Due eastward 43 miles Malinovsky's forces captured Reghin after crossing the Muresul river.

Cleaning up the North Baltic, Marshal Leonid A. Govorov's Leningrad Army yesterday captured the Estonian island of Hiiu (Dago), one of two major island bastions commanding the approaches to the Gulf of Finland and the Gulf of Riga. A communique last night said a full German infantry division was routed in the capture of Hiiu.

The island of Saare (Osel), directly to the south, remains in the hands of Germans.

Murder Charge Comes As Surprise Move by Police

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 4 —(CP)— John Shemko, 47, today was arraigned in magistrate's court on a charge of murder in the death of Frank Scibor, whose charred body was found last Thursday morning in his automobile, parked outside his home in nearby Balden township. Shemko was remanded a week at the request of the Crown.

The murder charge came as a surprise here although it was known Provincial Police were investigating the death. Neighbors of Scibor had advanced the theory that his car was struck by lightning. The car was almost destroyed in the fire.

An inquest originally was scheduled for tomorrow night but now that a murder charge has been laid it may not be held.

Investigation in the case was carried out by Provincial Constable W. T. Gilbert who disagreed with the lightning theory. He was assisted by Provincial Constable Harry Ramsbottom of Harrow, who laid the charge.

Authorities said that Shemko has been held since shortly after the body was found that he had was questioned because of marks on his face.

One reason given for doubt of the lightning theory was that Harry Imeson, a neighbor who rode home with Scibor the night of his death, said it wasn't storming when he left the car, a short distance from Scibor's home.

Two Belleville and two Trenton naval ratings, crew members of the Canadian destroyer "Kootenay", who took part in D-Day operations and who played a prominent part in the Allied invasion of the Normandy beaches are back in Canada, it has been announced in R.C.N. headquarters. The local sailors returning home are Stoker Tom Cavanagh and Stoker Joe Pringle of Belleville, and AB Robert Farrell and Ldg. Smn. Reginald Outingdyke of Trenton. They have proceeded to their homes on furlough.

MATTER OF DAMAGES AMICABLY SETTLED

While attempting a lefthand turn off Bridge Street to proceed south on Front Street, an automobile driven by Ronald Schamerhorn, Belleville, was in collision with another motor car driven by Godfrey Moulds, No. 6 Repair Depot early Tuesday evening. Sergt. Douglas Ellis, of the city police department, was an eye witness to the collision and after obtaining the names of the drivers, Mr. Schamerhorn agreed to assume the responsibility of damage resulting as the matter was amicably settled.

Mrs. H. Lewington Wins Fur Coat

A tiny little lady from the "country" will enter a large furrier store in Toronto within a day or so, and shyly pick out a handsome fur coat for herself.

She is Mrs. H. Lewington, of 15 Everett Street, who held one of the winning tickets on the Linen Shower for Russia draw held in Toronto a few days ago.

The only Belleville resident to hold a lucky ticket in the draw, Mrs. Lewington, who purchased four tickets, won prize No. 23, which is merchandise to the value of $200 at the E. Herman Co. Ltd., 700 Bay Street, Toronto.

"I am going to get a fur coat for myself," she announced proudly this morning when interviewed. "This is the first time I have won a prize in contests of this nature, or any other kind for that matter."

Mrs. Lewington has received official notification of her good fortune from campaign officials in Toronto. She expects to leave this week for Toronto where she will make her selection.

Incidentally, she celebrates her 70th birthday today (Wed.).

Hickory Nut Yield Reported Good

Squirrels of the district are uttering loud protests against the invasion of their sources of winter supplies by the genus homo.

In other words, too many people are going "nuts" about nuts.

That choice entree of the squirrel menu, the hickory nut, appears to be the goal of the nut-hunting fraternity, and last Sunday as well as other days when the Autumn sun shone with near-summer warmth, saw a large number of people out gathering nuts.

Supplies are said to be plentiful. One of the main producers of the tasty embellishments to a layer cake, is in the vicinity of Massassaga.

Here, it is reported, hickory trees are shedding quantities of nuts that surpass those in the last decade.

Cottagers in that vicinity report an influx of urban invaders who regardless of age, girth or girdle, insist upon harvesting as much squirrel food as they can garner.

Maybe the coming winter won't be so hard after all.

Corporal Gannon is deeply mourned by his wife, father and mother, brothers and sisters and all who knew him.

Few Appeals Made For Apple Pickers

Although the Bay of Quinte district is well known as an apple producing area and farm labor has been short all summer, farmers this season are having little difficulty in finding sufficient workers to pick their apples.

At least this would appear the case considering the few appeals which have been made to Selective Service officials in Belleville. Very few inquiries have been made thus far for apple pickers by farmers, it was stated this week by Mr. H. H. Reed of the Selective Service. To ate only twelve workers have been etailed to apple picking, these going to the Trenton district.

Slackening off in the tomato season was suggested as the reason for the apparent non-interest of farmers in applying for apple pickers. With the tomato season practically over canning factories are closing or preparing to close soon and labor is thus released for other jobs on the farm.

Members of the R.C.A.F. at Trenton and ..o. 6 Repair Depot have given considerable service in canning factories this fall and also are reported picking apples in the Trenton district. Selective Service officials did not state what farmers are offering for the services of apple pickers, but from another source it was reported they were paying approximately the same as tomato pickers received. This rate was the highest on record with workers receiving ten cents per bushel.

No. 5 Ration Book To Be Distributed In Week Oct. 14-21

Although tea and coffee are no longer rationed there is a continued need for the conservation of butter, sugar and preserves, and, as a result, distribution of No. 5 ration book is scheduled for the week of October 14-21 and already local ration boards are preparing for the campaign.

The distribution will differ in few respects from those previously carried out under the same auspices. The major change is that in view of the elimination of a surrender card from the No. 4 books, it is necessary to make use of the spare K coupon sheet at the back of the book for that purpose. Book-holders are required to fill out the stub, both back and front, of that sheet and present it, still attached to the ration book, at the nearest distribution centre.

Prior to the distribution of the new ration books ample notice will be given setting forth the various distribution centres and the dates and hours at which they will be open. In the meantime local ration boards are anxious to enlist the services of volunteers to help in the distribution of the new books.

The new ration book will be good for 50 weeks instead of only 36 as in the case of the first four books used by Canadians.

With the end of the war expected in the not too distant future, officials of the Ration Administration were able to gauge the supply situation better than a year ago, making it possible to figure rations for 50 weeks ahead instead of the usual 36.

The cost of distributing the ration books to 11,500,000 Canadians is expected to be less than the one and seven tenths of a cent per book, the cost of distributing Ration Book No. 4. Cost of distribution of the ration books dropped from two and eight tenths of a cent per book for Book No. 1 to the one and seven tenths of a cent for Book No. 4.

As many as 113,000 extra volunteers will help distribute the new books along with the 6,000 volunteers already in the 600 local ration boards across the country.

Distribution of the new books to employees of industrial firms at their places of business is already underway.

Nurses-in-Training Require Senior Matric

Educational requirements for nurses-in-training at Ontario hospitals have again been raised to a senior matriculation standing on orders of the Ontario Department of Health, it has been announced. The new order came into effect on July 31st.

During the early war years a shortage of nurses made it necessary that educational requirements be lowered in order that sufficient girls and young women entered hospitals each year to train. On the advice of the department, however, the matriculation standing is again necessary so that the quality of the graduate will be on par with the larger hospitals' graduates in the province.

Probationary nurses entered Belleville General Hospital in two groups this year, one in July and the other in September. The full class totals 36 nurses and is the largest in the history of the hospital. The resident nurse situation at the hospital is still acute, however, with officials stating today that several additional nurses are needed to attain a full staff.

U.S. Opens Drive To Wipe Out Japs' Gasoline Supply

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Oct. 4 — (AP) — Four-engined bombers, in the longest mass raid ever made in the Southwest Pacific, have opened a drive to wipe out Japan's big source of aviation gasoline and lubricating oils at Balikpapan, on Borneo, it was disclosed today.

More than 60 bombers dealt a crippling blow Saturday, battled 30 Zeros for more than an hour, weaved through skies filled with bursting ack-ack and all but three got back, some badly shot up, some with gas tanks almost empty.

But their 74 tons of bombs, carried from advance bases which made possible repeated raids, caused heavy destruction at what was described as "the most lucrative, strategic target in the Pacific."

Forty bomb hits were counted on the power plant and refraction towers of the 3,000,000-barrel capacity Pandansari refinery.

An Allied communique pointed out that the destruction of Balikpapan would curtail "drastically and immediately the enemy's capacity to wage air and naval war and to move essential cargo."

Douglas W. Bews Receives C.C.F. Nomination Here

Teacher at the Belleville collegiate for more than a decade, Mr. Douglas W. Bews has been nominated as the C.C.F. candidate to represent the riding of South Hastings in the forthcoming Federal election. The nomination meeting was held in the C.C.F. club rooms on Pinnacle Street on Monday evening.

Many names were received by the riding executive with all nominees being interviewed before a ballot was prepared. Runner-up to Mr. Bews was Mr. G. A. Riley of Trenton, who, when the result became known, asked that the nomination be made unanimous.

Mr. Bews needs no introduction in Hastings county. During the last provincial election he contested the riding of West Hastings, the results of the balloting indicating a remarkable increase in C.C.F. support in the riding. He has been associated with the C.C.F. for many years, being one of the original members of the club which was formed in Belleville in 1935.

The candidate has been a member of the staff at the Belleville collegiate for the past 15 years with the exception of some time spent in the service in the present war. In the first Great War, Mr. Bews enlisted as a sapper in the Canadian Engineers and served in France and Belgium, being discharged in 1939 with his commission.

He is a graduate of Queen's University with the degree of Bachelor of Science in civil engineering, and is a member of the Engineering Institute of Canada. He is also a graduate of the College of Education, Toronto University and is the author of two text books on technical subjects.

In accepting nomination as the C.C.F. candidate for South Hastings, Mr. Bews thanked the members for their confidence and for the honor conferred upon him.

Don Cossack Chorus Features Wide Variety of Songs

The original Don Cossack choiristers, sensational Slavic songsters, wil be heard here October 9 on the stage of the B. C. I. auditorium. They will be presented by Canadian Concerts and Artists, under sponsorship of Collegiate Institute & Vocational School.

Led by the diminutive Serge Jaroff, who speaks a minimum of English, the brawny giants of the Russian steppes, sing folk tunes, soldier songs and sacred themes that go back a millennium.

Organized 22 years ago, they have sung 5,000 times and in all corners of the globe. Shortly they will become United States citizens, having taken out their papers some years ago and having spent the past summer on the New Jersey coast memorizing the American constitution, though in their native tongue.

The individuality of the Cossacks lies in their vocal range—such as no other male chorus attempts. All songs are arranged in six or eight parts, touching the upper and lower limits of the voice, from reedy soprano to subterranean bass.

Most popular of the Cossack songs are: God, Hear My Prayer, of David, Song of the Volga Psalm of David Song of the Volga Boatman, Kolj Slavenj and Don Kosaken.

This is the original company, not the company appearing here last year and it will be an entire change of program.

The proceeds of the concert are to further the work of the Students' Council of the Collegiate.

2-Year-Old Child Runs Directly Into Car's Path

Attempting to cross the road in front of his home, two-year-old Nell Peck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Beauford Peck, Rednersville, ran directly into the path of an eastbound truck and was knocked onto the pavement when struck yesterday afternoon. The little lad was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital, where Dr. G.B. Cronk was in attendance. Fortunately only minor lacerations and abrasions occurred.

The Peck child was in the company of his father and grandfather, who were packing apples in a drive shed opposite the Peck home. The adults did not observe the little boy as he apparently decided to cross the Rednersville road, three miles west of the village, to go home. Robert G. Galloway, 57 1-2 Dundas St., Trenton, was the driver of the truck. He informed investigating Provincial Police officials the child was upon him before he so much as had the opportunity to swerve his vehicle or stop.

Says U. K. Must Insist On Taking Full Share In War in Pacific

London, Oct. 4—(CP-Reuter) — Sir Keith Murdoch, Australian newspaper proprietor, reviewing the war in the near East in an article in the Daily Mail today, said that although the United States forces now are "prodigiously strong" and are capable of winning the struggle against the Japanese on their own, Britain must insist on taking her full share.

"Undoubtedly some important sections in the United States would like Britain to take a back seat, and some are even determined that she shall do so," wrote Sir Keith. "But every consideration of speed, every moral obligation and material interest make it necessary for us to reject this secondary role and be strong on the decisive fields."

FORMER GOVERNOR

Born Dec. 30, 1873, the "Happy Warrior" — a nickname given him by Franklin D. Roosevelt when he nominated Smith at the 1928 Democratic National Convention — had little formal education.

Entered Politics at 22

He entered politics at the age of 22 as a clerk and subpoena server for the Commissioner of Jurors. In 1903 he was elected a State Assemblyman. He served 12 years at Albany, N.Y., becoming Democratic leader of the Assembly in 1911 and Speaker in 1913.

After serving as Sheriff in New York County, he became president of the Board of Aldermen.

Tammany Hall ran him for Governor in 1918 and he won, defeating Gov. Charles S. Whitman. He suffered his first political defeat two years later when Nathan L. Miller was elected to the governorship but Smith came back in 1922 and beat Whitman.

As the Democratic presidential nominee in 1928, he made his 21st and last campaign for public office. After his defeat he branched out into business life as a director on a dozen or more boards.

When Smith reached the apex of his political climb in 1928 he faced four personal issues — he was a devout Roman Catholic, a member of Tammany Hall, an anti-prohibitionist and a product of the east side. The campaign that year was one of the bitterest ever fought, largely because of the unspoken words that accompanied it.

He is survived by three sons, Capt. Alfred E. Smith, Jr., now serving with the U. S. Army in the South Pacific; Arthur W. Smith and Walter Smith; two daughters, Mrs. John A. Warner and Mrs. Francis J. Quillinan; a sister, Mrs. Mary Glynn, and 14 grand-children.

ALLIED PRESSURE MAINT AINED INSIDE GERMANY

Bright Lights Add Much To Business Streets

Belleville's downtown main business streets are rapidly taking on a pre-war appearance, insofar as night lighting is concerned. With the recent government order permitting outside lighting of stores and business houses, local merchants have lost little time in the restoration of their store lights, as well as window lighting which also adds considerable brightness to the downtown area at night. All types of outside store lighting, window display lights, theatre marquees also add to the brightness of the night downtown. With outside lighting having been dimmed for over two years throughout Ontario the lights have now gone up again to add lustre and brightness to the business section of the city.

JAPS IN PARIS REMAIN FREE

Paris, Oct. 4 —(AP)— Although France is at war with Japan, some 40 Japanese residents of Paris still are circulating freely in this city swarming with Allied troops. While the Japanese are subject to arrest as enemy aliens, the French war ministry said, no action has been taken thus far because of "administrative delays." The unofficial opinion is that they are being permitted freedom in informal reciprocity for the liberty granted thousands of French citizens in Japanese-occupied Indo-China.

Men of Navy Praised By Kiwanis Speaker

The men who go down to the sea in ships were highly praised by J.P. Hagerman of the Navy League of Canada at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday. A full attendance had luncheon under the direction of Jack McVeigh as president with Norm Edwards collecting the fines and Harold "Bing" Carruthers leading the community singing. Leo B. Riggs presided at the piano.

A lengthy business session was held by the club, the President reporting that the Kiwanis Club would take an active part in the furtherance of the 7th victory loan soon to be launched. He also reported on the Quebec convention stating, that the delegates were royally entertained by the host club and that a full report of the convention would be given at a later date. The president also announced that Belleville Club had now been placed in Division no. 5 which includes, East Riverdale, York, Oshawa, Lindsay, Peterboro, Cobourg, Belleville and Kingston. Jack White reported on the chicken bingo, which will be held in the K. of C. rooms on Friday and Saturday of this week and the chairman requested that every member be on hand to assist. The Knights of Columbus council was sincerely thanked through Frank Domenico for the use of the rooms.

Archie Harris reported that the club would assist in the Salvage drive on October 16th and that six trucks and 24 members would be required to carry out the club's portion. He also stated that 8,000 magazines had been shipped and this was the third shipment of a like amount sent out by the club this year. The brown collection taken at the luncheon at present amounts to $75 and this money will be used to purchase razor blades to send to the boys overseas. The chairman stated that the school children had materially helped in the collection of magazines and that a donation was being made to each school in the city.

New Member Introduced

Harry Trepanier, proprietor of the Seiberling Tire Shop, was introduced as a new member by Jack McIntosh, chairman of the committee and he was initiated by the past district governor, Cliff Baragar. The Belleville Club was awarded a membership plaque at the recent International convention at Chicago. This plaque is for securing the most new members in a given stated time and to Jack McIntosh and his committee goes all the honor and Jack accepted the token on behalf of his co-workers. The chairman announced that more new members will be introduced in the near future. The speaker of the day was introduced by Fred Lewis and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Aubrey Coe.

Mr. Hagerman stated, that ships had always meant freedom to the British people and that they have done a magnificent job in the present war. He asked for the co-operation of the club in sending games, magazines and comforts to the men of the navy, especially those in the merchant marine. He showed that the convoy system had saved both Russia and Britain and that hostels in the Eastern port were doing a wonderful job in looking after the men, when they came from sea. The women were also praised for their help in making sweaters and socks. He showed that the Canadian Navy had passed the 700 mark in ships and 91,000 plus in volunteer enlisted men.

12,000-Pound Bomb In Direct Hit On Battleship Tirpitz

London, Oct. 4 (CP)—Lancaster bombers of the R.A.F. recently scored a direct hit with a 12,000-pound bomb on the German battleship Tirpitz, it was disclosed tonight.

The attack was made without loss and the "earthquake" bomb was dropped after a round-trip involving a flight of 3,000 miles from bases in Britain to an airdrome in Russia and then to the objective in Altn fjord.

The 2,000-mile flight from Britain to Russia with the heavy bomb loads was made in 11 hours and that in itself was described as a great feat.

After refuelling in Russia, the heavies flew to Altn fjord, returning to Russia to refuel for the homeward flight.

Most attacks against the Tirpitz have been made from the sea and the attack from the landward side was made in the hope of springing a surprise.

Many Pay Tribute To Memory of Late Sir Wm. Mulock

Toronto, Oct. 4 —(CP)— The final chapter was written today in the mortal career of Sir William Mulock who devoted most of his 101 years of life to public service of the Dominion and his native province of Ontario.

The body of the former Postmaster General of Canada and former Chief Justice of Ontario was buried at nearby Newmarket, not far from where he was born in 1843. A private funeral service was held at his home and a public service in St. Paul's Anglican Church where he worshipped.

Among the 3,000 persons who filled the church to overflowing were leaders in public life, including Prime Minister Mackenzie King, as well as many less-known who had come to know Canada's Grand Old Man as friend.

Mr. King and Justice Minister St. Laurent represented the Dominion Government and the Ontario Government was represented by Premier Drew.

The University of Toronto, which he served as chancellor for more than 20 years before his death Sunday morning, was closed for the afternoon. So was Toronto city hall. At Osgoode Hall, where he presided as Chief Justice for 13 years after serving as Chief Justice of the Exchequer Division for 18, the courts did not sit.

The funeral procession which accompanied the body from the home on Jarvis Street to St. Paul's was one of the largest ever seen in Toronto. The service was conducted by Rev. F. H. Wilkinson, the rector, assisted by Rev. H. J. Cody, president of the University of Toronto and a long-time friend.

At Newmarket a guard of honor of soldiers from the Canadian Army Training Centre there and Air Cadets was to accompany the body to the grave.

Honorary pallbearers, all men prominent in public and business life, included Prime Minister King, Mr. St. Laurent, Chief Justice R. S. Robertson of Ontario and D. L. McCarthy, former secretary of the Law Society of Upper Canada. Postmaster General Mulock, a grandson, was one of the eight active pallbearers.

Stiff Fighting And Race Against Weather Foreseen

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the 1st Canadian Army, Oct. 4 (CP Cable))—It not only will be a htiff fight to destroy the enemy legions rushed into the Netherlands to block British and Canadian forces from breaching the barrier of the Rhine, but it also will be a neck-and-neck race against the weather.

Iff there is a good stretch of weather for only a few weeks to give the vast Allied air forces a real opoprtunity to pummel the Germans and their communications the battle of Holland could reach a climax rapidly.

From this Netherlands springboard Field Marshal Montgomery's forces could drive into Germany in mighty strength. The campaign, and the war, against Germany may then be over by year'h end.

But if the weather turns bad—and it has been patchy and unfavorable recently—the campaign could drag on into the winter.

October will be the vital month. In Brussels and at various formation headquarters you hear many staff officers say: "Give us clear weather in October and we have it in the bag; a clear-cut decision would be reached before Christmas."

Send Overseas Parcels Soon

Christmas parcels are a taste of home and the thought of food and other gifts being from home seems to be a special boost to the morale. This was the remark of a saleslady and serves to give relatives and friends of service folk overseas a true idea of the influence of the arrival of the home parcel across the seas.

This year the military and postal authorities are desirous that parcels be sent early to make certain that they reach their destination. For many thousands this year the ultimate destination will be in France or Belgium or perhaps The Netherlands and elsewhere and of course Italy. So the dates are set forth that no one may neglect to take time by the forelock and get busy with the Christmas boxes. For the Middle East area, Egypt, Iran, Iraq, Syria and other countries, they should be on their way by Thursday of this week, October 5th. For the Central Mediterranean theatre the date set is October 10th, and for Britain and France October 25th is the date. Many are already on their way and the senders in so doing are performing a great service.

Everyone knows what the soldier's, airman's, sailor's needs and wishes are and has the opportunity in the shops of making selections from many lines which will make apt gifts.

For the sake of the sender's peace of mind after the parcel has been sent and also for the delight and enjoyment of the serviceman or woman overseas a few things should be remembered in its preparation.

Matches should not be included, nor should any inflammable substances such as lighting fluids, or foodstuffs or materials contained in glass jars which are heavy and which may break in shipping. It is well to remember to use strong paper with stout string or gummed paper for wrapping. The address of the serviceman or woman should be put not only on the wrapper but also on the box itself in case the package cover be damaged or torn. A customs declaration has to be made out and placed upon the parcel.

Quick dispatch of parcels for Yuletide is now urgent. Preparation of these will bring pleasure to the boy abroad and to the sender if the parcel is properly addressed and bound.

Dunkerque 1940 and 1944

Dunkerque is the next and last of the ports of France to be taken by the Allies. The Hun has clung tenaciously to the great ports on the Channel coast of France only to lose them at the last. The persistence of their defence manifests what importance the enemy attached to them.

Now Dunkerque's turn is to come. The very name is one of inspiration to the Allied world. The port became famous for the historic withdrawal of an Allied army of 335,000 men through this port in late May, 1940, when the onrush of the Hitler blitzkrieg had swept down from the Netherlands, through Belgium and out upon France.

Those were dark days, before and after Dunkerque, and the great light of that time was the almost superhuman effort on Dunkerque beaches. This was the greatest feat of its kind in all history, "a miracle of deliverance" as Mr. Winston Churchill who on June 4th., 1940, became Prime Minister, announced. According to reports at the time about 1700 Allied vessels were engaged in the narrowest part of the Channel by day and night carrying out the most dangerous operation known in warfare, evacuation by water. The volunteer fleet and the undaunted courage of the troops struck the imagination of the free world. Craft of all kinds dotted the Channel waters from coast to coast and off the port of Dunkerque were often clustered in hundreds at a time. Fishermen, yachtsmen, yacht clubs, boat builders, longshore and pleasure-craft owners from seaside resorts far and near, and boatbuilding and hiring firms, even the crews of the London fire boats manned their craft and rushed them to the assembly point even before they learned for what purpose they were needed. And as soon as the truth was out, the press of volunteers was so great that it began to embarrass the officials. Even women tried to take part with their own yachts and motor boats. These gallant men plied the Straits of Dover night and day, often in the hail of machine gun fire. They took off wounded soldiers from the beaches. Scenes of those days are indelibly filmed on the minds of the Allied peoples.

At that time the New York Times said, "So long as the English tongue survives, the word Dunkerque will be spoken with reverence. In that harbor—such a hell as never blazed on earth before—at the end of a lost battle, the rags and blemishes that had hidden the soul of democracy fell away. There, beaten, but unconquered, in shining splendor, she faced the enemy, this shining thing in the souls of free men which Hitler cannot command. It is the great tradition of democracy. It is the future. It is victory."

Here the Hun was frustrated by deeds of men like of which the world never before witnessed. That was four years ago. In the interim the world has passed through many grave dangers and trials, but it was from this time and the following months that the Allied star began to rise. It was in September 1940 that Hitler and Goering failed in the air attempts over Britain and recognized the impossibility of ever dominating the air over that free land. Now after years Dunkerque is again in the world's eye, but it is an Allied drive against the Hun garrison, after the cleanup of the enemy in all the other French ports on the coast of the Channel. Canadians are destined to play in the recovery of historic Dunkerque an important role.

Did Not Fail

Field Marshal Montgomery, whose appraisal of events is so markedly true in his message to the British First Airborne Army, praising its gallantry in the battle of Arnhem said it "did not fail and all is well elsewhere." He expressed his admiration and the admiration of all in the 21st Army Group "for the magnificent fighting spirit your division displayed in battle against great odds on the north bank of the Lower Rhine in Holland. There is no shadow of a doubt that had you failed, operations elsewhere would have been gravely compromised." Again the Marshal said "All Britain will say to you 'You did your best and all did your duty and we are proud of you'.". There could be few episodes more glorious than the epic of Arnhem, he said and "in years to come it will be a great thing for a man to be able to say 'I fought at Arnhem'."

These are the words of one whose judgment has been proven sound and who knows.

Steal Ration Cards To Trick Nazis

(News of Norway)

It has been confirmed that the daylight theft of some 75,000 newly printed ration cards from a truck in an Oslo street on August 9 was the work of patriots.

The plan is to distribute these cards among the young men who are at present hiding out in the forests or in rural areas in order to evade conscription for the Nazi labor service.

By denying these young men ration cards the Germans had hoped to starve them into submission.

Shaven and Shorn

(Montreal Herald)

The Nazi government has ordered all ablebodied male barbers and hairdressers to the front and has turned over domestic shaves and haircuts to women. The Nazis have reason to believe, from recent happenings in France, that several battalions of Delilahs must have been snipping away at the locks of the once-mighty Wehrmacht.

LOSER

Of ways to lose money we all have a few;
Some bet on the horses, but I never do.
I thought it much better to purchase a lot,
I could sell for a profit, but somehow have not.

I'm not one for dicing; too careful am I
To risk what I have on the roll of a die.
I thought it much wiser to venture in stock
Which plummeted downward as though 'twere a rock.

I never have gambled away at the wheel
Or ventured my cash on the cards men may deal.
I have always insisted much nicer it looks,
And more dignified seems, to go broke buying books.

That life is a gamble is plain as can be;
What form you prefer may not fascinate me.
You bet on the races; to strangers I lend,
The result? It amounts to the same in the end.

FREE VERSE

A recent news dispatch from Chicago says, "Poetess Tietjens Head, 60, a leader in the free verse movement, died last night."

Just what is free verse?

The term itself is a literal translation of French "vers libre" and is the name given to a form of poetry written without regular metre or rhyme and generally without regular stanzas.

Sir Robert Bridges, poet laureate of England from 1913 to 1930, defined free verse as "cadenced prose arranged in sections resembling stanzas or verses."

In his "Modern English Usage" H. W. Fowler defined free verse as, "Versification or verses in which different metres are mingled, or prosodical restrictions disregarded, or variable rhythm substituted for definite metre."

Free verse is based on the assumption that true poetry depends on the substance rather than the form, and the free-verse writer deliberately discards customary metre and rhyme, attempting to isolate his essential thought and convey it to the reader unhampered by form.

Although free verse did not become common in any country until about the time of the First World War, and it is popularly associated with Amy Lawrence Lowell and other writers of her time, it was not an entirely new form of poetry.

Walt Whitman in America and Matthew Arnold in England had written such poetry, and "The Song of Solomon" in the Bible, whether intentionally or accidentally, meets the essential requirements of free verse.

The writer of free verse is an imagist; he claims absolute liberty in choosing his subject matter and attempts to express his ideas and emotions through a unified series of precise images.

Liberal Leader Praises Statement Of M. F. Hepburn

Toronto, Oct. 4—(CP)—Harry C. Nixon, Ontario Liberal Leader, said last night he was "very pleased" with the statement Mitchell F. Hepburn issued at St. Thomas yesterday criticizing Premier Drew's Progressive Conservative Government.

"I am in accord with what he said," Mr. Nixon told The Canadian Press in a telephone interview from his farm home at St. George, Ont., near Brantford.

"We've always been in agreement except on one issue—Canada's war effort," said Mr. Nixon. "Except for that we've seen eye to eye."

The Liberal Leader said he welcomed Mr. Hepburn's announcement that he would attend the caucus of Liberal members of the legislature in Toronto next Tuesday, recalling that the Elgin member attended several conferences — "I don't know whether you would call them caucuses or not"—which the Liberals held during the last session of the legislature.

Mr Nixon said he and Mrs. Nixon would be in Toronto today to attend the funeral of Sir William Mulock, former chief justice of Ontario, who died Sunday.

No Suggestion Of Political Motive Says Maj. Smythe

Toronto, Oct. 4 — (CP) — Maj. Connie Smythe of Toronto, who returned recently to Canada to recuperate from wounds suffered in France, Tuesday night reiterated his charges that Canadian reinforcements in France were untrained.

Maj. Smythe's statement follows:

To suggest there are political motives in my statement is untrue. My statement of Sept. 19 is correct.

To make up the pool of reinforcements prior to and after D-Day required for the infantry thousands of men were needed. These were practically all obtained from two sources:

(1) Large numbers of young lads just overseas who a few months ago were civilians, and.

(2) Thousands of men from other arms such as the artillery, armored corps, etc., with varying lengths of service.

Anyone anywhere in Canada checking the casualty lists and noting dates of enlistment can prove for themselves the truth of item 1. Col. Ralston (Defence Minister), by releasing the figures showing the numbers of other arms transferred to the infantry in the last few months will prove item 2.

The officers who stated to me that the reinforcements were untrained were all of a company commander level or lower—the officers who actually lead the men into battle. They came from the following battalions:

North Nova Scotias, 3rd division; North Shore Regiment, N. B., 3rd division; Regiment de Maisoneuve, Que., 2nd division; Regiment de Chaudiere, Que., 3rd division; Royal Regiment of Canada, Ontario, 3rd division; Queen's Own Rifles, Ont., 3rd division; Essex Scottish, Ont., 2nd division; Royal Winnipeg Rifles, Manitoba, 3rd division; South Saskatchewan Rifles, Sask., 2nd division; Calgary Highlanders, Alberta, 2nd division, and the Canadian Scottish, B. C., 3rd division.

AN EXCELLENT ANTISEPTIC DRESSING

In my opinion a large wet dressing of plain soap and water—any laundry or toilet soap, with a slight margin in favor of yellow laundry soap—is at least equal to any other antiseptic treatment or dressing one can apply to an infected wound, sore, hangnail, boil, carbuncle, inflamed varicose ulcer or other break in the skin where "blood poisoning" is to be prevented.

Such a dressing should be voluminous, yards and yards of washed cheesecloth (surgeon's gauze) applied loosely and thickly over the wound or sore, held in place with a loosely applied bandage, and kept moist with soapy boiled water — pour additional soapy boiled water on the dressing every hour or two, and keep the moist or wet dressing undisturbed for twenty-four hours.

By actual bateriological tests, as reported here in talks on soap as an antiseptic, we know this treatment is at least as efficacious as the most "powerful" and malodorous stuff the little tin doctor is so fond of using—and incidentally the soap poultice is non-poisonous.

Soapy water acts by forming a microscopic film around the germs and causes their death by excluding them from their nutritive medium. Likewise soap forms a film around germ toxins—such as the toxin of diphtheria and the toxin of tetanus (lockjaw) and so prevents or retards its aborption and action on the body cells. This is proved by (lethal to guinea pig) with a little lethal to guinea pig) with a little soapy water—then the guinea pig can survive a dose 100 times as large.

The young man on the bowling green was born in 1859 according to the Blue Book, and I have been trying for years to persuade him to tell us all his secret of youth. At last he consented to let me in on part of it. "For one thing," he said, "smoking never did me any harm" —you see, he has never smoked. I'm afraid I had my pipe with me that day.

The only harm too much bathing, too hot water, excessive use of soap or too strong soap is likely to do any one is to cause a comparatively trifling dryness irritation and pruritus or burning and itching of the skin—and even this seldom occurs in young persons, usually in people whose skin is old to begin with. Even they can prevent it by using a suitable skin oil to replace the natural sebum or skin oil removed by hot water and soap.

Brushing the teeth and bathing will never do you any harm no matter whether you brush 'em and bathe twice a day or twice a season.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Rules for Recovery From Tuberculosis

Please tell me who published "Rules for Recovery from Tuberculosis," which you recommended so highly. You said it was by Lawrason Brown, M.D., but I have been unable to find it at bookstores.

(B.I.H.)

Answer—I intended to mention that it was published 25 years ago, by Lea and Febiger, New York and Philadelphia. It should be available in your public library. Similar books for patients and their friends have been published since, but I have not seen any as good as Lawrason Brown's.

Sore Tongue

Have been going to doctor a year now. He says I have glossitis, inflammation of the tongue.

(Mrs. P. E. B.)

Answer—Some causes of obstinate sore tongue are (1) Galvanic burn from the miniature battery set up by presence of two dissimilar metals in the fillings or other dentures. (2) Hypochromic anemia—if you are anemic send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope and ask (do not send clipping) for booklet Blood and Health. (3) Prolonged moderate vitamin B-complex particularly riboflavin deficiency—daily consumption of not less than three pints of milk is best source of riboflavin. (4) If soreness is localized to one or two spots, trench mouth, leucoplakia (smoker's patch and mucous patches or the primary syphilitic sore must be kept in mind. Incidentally at least half of the victims of syphilis are infected innocently, so no moral stigma necessarily attaches.

LONDON LETTER

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 4 — (CP Cable) — September was a big month for the people of Britain, so accustomed after five years of war to appeals for further self-sacrifice that news of immediate and prospective benefits for themselves came as a welcome surprise they cannot yet fully digest.

In the immediate category were the relaxation of civil defence and home guard duties and the substitution in many parts of the country of dimout for blackout.

For future reference were the government's proposals for demobilization and social security and the promise of higher pay for servicemen of long standing.

These happy announcements, which followed one another in quick succession, brought with them the realization that the end of the war could come sooner than was expected six months ago.

More cautious in their optimism than the people of Canada and the United States, Britons have not often rejoiced too soon. They have waited for government guidance, and hitherto that guidance has been to expect no early nor easy end. Now, if the government was beginning to relax, people thought there must be something to it.

The biggest news of the month, for the average Briton, was the lifting of the blackout. True, in many parts of the country—London especially—too much was expected of the new regulations, but in districts which have endured darkness for years without having known the sorrows of air attack, the return of lights was a cheering moment.

The home guard lost some of its more than 1,000,000 men when compulsory service ended but many of these stout-hearted civilian soldiers continued to parade. The camaraderie that sprang up among them was not easily broken, though humorists suggested they remained in service so they could have ready excuses for their "nights out" — should their wives become inquisitive.

Relaxation of civil defence duties was as welcome as the lifting of the blackout. The tedium of the night fire-watching duty was accepted as something which had to be but this did not make it any less miserable. Herbert Morrison, minister of Home Security, told firemen he sometimes almost wished there had been more blazes so their patience might have been rewarded by action.

The government's proposals for the future did not touch such an immediate spark as the relaxations. The Beveridge report prepared the way for the government's own social security plan, so there was little novelty in the new plan. It was welcome, though, if only because it was a government plan.

Demobilization details and plans for soldiers' pay increases concerned servicemen rather than the general public, but they too were good news, for there are few families in Britain without at least one member directly affected.

Child Born as Mother, Husband, Dog, Turkey Marooned on Rooftop

Mexico City, Oct. 3 —(AP)— Flood workers related today that a woman gave birth to a child while marooned with her husband, their dog and their turkey gobbler atop the roof of their farm home 25 miles from Vera Cruz.

The workers, who did not give the couple's name, said that when rescuers reached the roof the dog leaped with joy, the gobbler flapped its wings, and the woman said: "Be careful. There is a coral snake up here with us, also a flood victim." All left by canoe except the snake.

Sea Wall on West Blasted by R.A.F.

London, Oct. 3 (AP).—A strong force of R.A.F. heavy bombers today blasted the sea wall on the west side of Wacheren Island, a Netherlands position in the Schelde Estuary denying the allies use of the great Belgian port of Antwerp.

The attack followed by a day Gen. Eisenhower's warning to civilians to evacuate that area.

Returning bomber crews reported the sea was pouring through huge gaps torn in the dike by 12,000-pound "earthquake bombs". The Germans have been using the island to harbor heavy guns which could fire as far as Antwerp, 35 miles southeast.

Some classes of the Cornwall collegiate, also damaged by the quake, opened yesterday for the first time.

The resolution was moved during discussion of incidents at the fertilizer plant on Sept. 24 when a crowd of 300 persons attempted to storm the living quarters of the Japanese on the company premises. Three Ingersoll men subsequently were convicted of illegal assembly.

Groenstratt, Holland, Oct. 3—(AP)—German troops holding the Siegfried Line have been told by their commanders that any man who retreats will be shot, and if an entire company should fall back, one man in every 10 will be shot, United States officers said today.

"They're doing everything they can to hang onto the defences, and these threats are necessary to keep many troops in line," said Lt.-Col. Harold Hassenfelt of Oconto, Wis.

Heavy fighting raged for the second day as 1st ary troops battered deeper into the Siegfried defences." .

Eventually, she says, she persuaded an American colonel and a major to hide her in a coffin and transport her from Belfast to Scotland in an army plane. MODELS IN PARIS TRIFLE SLIMMER

Fashion Show in French Capital Little Changed by Nazi Occupation

By ADA De KOFOED
(AP Staff Writer)

Paris, Oct. 4 — (AP) — Four years of German occupation have changed little in Paris fashion shows.

Despite occupation restrictions, extremely hard working conditions, absence of electricity and scarcity of transport and material, the second day of Paris' first liberation style showing brought the same elegant crowds yesterday. Beautiful mannequins were — if possible — a trifle slimmer.

However, a wartime note crept into showing at the aristocratic house of Bruyere on Place Vendome. There were no evening dresses.

Keynote of the Madam Bruyere show was fluted skirts, frocks with narrow belting and swing coats. Her colors are autumn shades; dark red, gray, all brown shades and a few greens. Military influence is evident in a smart pleated green silk dress with cap to match, inspired by a Scottish uniform. There was a Russian note in the style of coats and trimmings of black Persian lamb.

Sporting costumes have three-quarter long swagger coats and pleated skirts just covering the knees — a trifle longer than summer skirts.

Afternoon gowns appeared very discreet in materials such as black velvet and crepe maroquain. Bruyere showed becomingly comfortable long teagowns in soft, warm materials.

Wife Preservers

Old safety razor blades, broken needles, etc., never should be thrown carelessly away. Keep them in a paper box with a cover and keep until the box is full, and they may then be thrown out without danger to those handling them.

Noreen Frederick New President Holloway St. YPU

Holloway Street Y.P.U. resumed its activities after the summer recess on Sept 25 when the members enjoyed a wiener roast which, owing to inclement weather, was held in the church. Games and a sing song, led by the Rev. J. A. Dilts with Lois Harper at the piano, were entered into enthusiastically. Don McAllister entertained with several numbers on his guitar.

A nominating committee to draw up a slate of officers was appointed, following which a short worship service in which Noreen Frederick, Maude Burke and Ray Gunsolus took part, brought the evening to a close.

On the evening of Oct. 2 the initial meeting of the Y.P.U. was held with a good attendance.

Rev. J. A. Dilts led in a devotional period, of which the theme was "Praise."

Highlighting the evening were two vocal solos by Ronald Elmy, accompanied by Kathyrn Hogle, and a piano solo by Dorothy Dobbs who played in her usual finished manner "The Wedding of the Painted Doll."

Maude Burke then brought in the report of the nominating committee.

President: Noreen Frederick. Fellowship Convener, Dorothy Mitts; Missions Convener, Isobel Richardson; Citizenship Convener, Shirley Hitchon; Culture Convener, Roselyn Robertson; Secretary, Pat Thurston; Treasurer, Max Maguire; Pianist, Lois Harper; Asst. Pianist, Ana English; Missionary Treasurer, Marion Allin; Press Reporter, Maude Burke.

These officers were inducted by Mr. Dilts who reminded each of the privileges and responsibilities of his or her office. The new president, Noreen Frederick, then made a short speech thanking the members for the honor bestowed upon her and asking their co-operation throughout the coming year.

The meeting closed with the Mispah Benediction.

Total cash raised by the district was $4788.54.

A fully equipped mobile canteen was ordered in June and money cabled to Hon. Vincent Massey for the same. A cable was received from him in return. This makes a total of four fully equipped mobile canteens supplied by the district in the last three years.

An appeal was received from Hon. Massey for funds for "Boots for evacuated children of Britain." In trying to fulfill this request, books of tickets were sold throughout the province and the sum of $12,007 was raised. No one in this district received any of the prizes allotted for the same.

A very splendid report of knitted articles was sent from this district and many wonderful boxes for Russian Relief. Besides this there were 119 quilts and afghans and 27 complete layettes. There were 182 boxes packed for the boys overseas.

Pte. Clayton Stark Reported Missing Now in Hospital

Picton, Oct. 4 — Word was received yesterday by Mrs. Calvin Stark that her grandson, Pte. Clayton Stark, reported missing in action Aug. 29, is alive. He is a patient in a hospital in Holland, having suffered shrapnel wounds in the back and legs. The glad news was conveyed in letters received from both Clayton and his father, Pte. Floyd Stark, who is in England. Clayton is a paratrooper.

Fears that Capt. William Graydon would lose his left foot had been entertained but his wife, Mrs. Mary Graydon, Kingston, received a letter from him stating that it was not now planned to operate. The bone in the left ankle was shattered by gun fire. In spite of this wound he continued to direct men and tanks until the feature, at Rimini, in Italy, was won. He is the son of Mrs. J. L. Graydon, Picton, and his brother, Lieut. John Graydon, is serving in France.

Must Pay $5,000 For Property

Picton, Oct. 4 — At Town Council meeting last night, a letter from a Toronto Trust Co., advised that they had secured legal advice that the property of the late Mrs. Anna B. Owens would be offered to the town for $5,000., as divided in her will. The fact that the estate had already received $4,000 insurance on the property, as a result of the fire which claimed the lives of Mrs. Owens and her companion, will not affect the sale price to the town, the Toronto Co. said.

Town Solicitor F. L. Ward, K.C., said the town could not secure the property at less than $5,000. without a law suit.

Council decided to lay the matter over until next meeting as they have until Nov. 10 to take advantage of the offer. This is a palatial brick residence with beautiful grounds and has been suggested as a community centre.

Compulsory Voting Asked by Council

A letter from the Secretary of the Naval Board stated that Prince Edward County sailors would be posted to the locally adopted frigate Hallowell in-so-far as the exigencies of the service permit.

Relief report showed 33 persons aided last month at a cost of $318.

The town will aid the salvage drive Oct. 16 by providing men and trucks. Purchase of another town truck is to be investigated.

ARTICLES WANTED FOR PACKAGES FOR TRENTONIAN

Cpl. Colin Smith Arrives Home After Four and Half Years Overseas

Trenton, Oct. 4 (Special) An urgent appeal was made at Red Cross headquarters here on Tuesday for articles which could be included in the Christmas packages being prepared for the "Trentonian", the Corvette adopted by Trenton when it was launched more than a year ago. Games, cards, cigarettes, candy, soap, tooth paste, brushes, knitted articles, in short anything useful to the boys is needed and "AT ONCE". It is hoped the shipment may be made within the next week or ten days.

Articles may be sent to the Red Cross work rooms over Shurie's Drug Store on Tuesday afternoon or given any member of the Society who will in turn see that they are brought in for shipment.

It is hoped the rural sections will help in this work as well as the townspeople.

Help is urgently required too at Red Cross for those willing to sew or knit as the current quotas are falling behind greatly because of the scarcity of help at the work rooms and in the homes. A great deal of both the sewing and knitting may be taken home and done during the leisure hours.

Now that the children are back at school donations of money to help along the good work are coming in and Tuesday's included $3.00 from Miss Walker class at College St. School.

Soldier Back Home

Corporal Colin Smith, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Smith, Lock No. 4 Trent Canal has been returned to Canada after four and one-half years overseas.

Enlisting with the armament section of the R. C. A. F. he went overseas in February 1940 and spent four years in England where he narrowly escaped injury at one time when the club in London where he was staying at the time was bombed and damaged.

Entering France he and two comrades donned khaki and went with Allied soldiers to Carpiquette airdrome in Normandy three days before it was taken by the Allied forces.

Corporal Smith was much impressed with the French inhabitants of Caen and says they were particularly friendly towards the Allies. Though sorry to leave his pals behind, he is delighted at being back in Canada and expects a posting somewhere in the Dominion.

Corporal Smith is a former graduate of Trenton High School and later was a valued employee of the Downs-Coulter Co., however, he says he hopes to stay in the service even after hostilities have finished.

He thinks all young men should join the service not only because they are urgently needed to help their fellow men at the front but also because of the great experience gained.

Gen. Sir Oliver Leese Praises Hasty P's for Helping To Break The Gothic Line in Italy

Ed. Note: The fighting Hasty P's who have had a prominent part in driving the Germans out of Italy are the subject of a recent article by Toronto Telegram's correspondent, Major Bert S. Wemp, D.F.C. The news story follows:

With the Canadian Corps, Italy, Sept. 29 — "My congratulations to you and all ranks of your battalion on your hard fighting at the San Maria Ridge and at Fortunato. The regiment may be proud of its part in a great and hard fought victory. With my thanks and best wishes to you all, well done Canada!"

Thus reads a congratulatory message from General Sir Oliver Leese, commander of the famous British 8th Army, to the commanding officers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

And the praise was well earned by this crack Ontario fighting unit, for victory at both places mentioned helped break and clear the Gothic Line, as well as slice through the Rimini Gap to the Lombardy Plain.

In advancing eight miles from the Matauro river to the Gothic Line along the Foglia river, the Hasty P's went through a famous Highland regiment. Just before the river they hit stiff fighting with the suicidal paratroopers.

In the evening two companies went forward under Captain William Graydon, Picton; Lt. C.B. Bird, Picton, and Hamilton; Major Allen Ross, Montreal; Lt. Don Kennedy, Sherbrooke, and Lt. C. E. Welbanks, Picton. The Hasty P's inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy, taking 17 prisoners amongst the lads who usually don't surrender.

Gaining the Foglia river's banks, the regiment lost no time in probing the much touted Gothic Line. Under Sergeant Eugene Leroux, Cornwall, a patrol negotiated the river one night, gained the lateral road running from Pesaro to the Gothic Line defences. They had a good look-see, returning with much valuable information for the general push that followed.

In this heroic patrol were L.-Sergeant Robert Wigmore, Montreal; Corporals James Barclay, Galt; George C. Smith, Frankford; and Privates Arnold Riddell, Annan, Ont.; Harold Barlow, Pickering; John Brown, Oakville; Paul Labonte Calgary; Douglas Fothergill, Hamilton; John White, Peterboro; William Hamilton, Toronto, and Clifford Tretheway, New Liskeard.

San Maria Battle

In the attack on San Maria Ridge, 5 miles south of Rimini, the Hasty P's passed through another Canadian regiment and found the first mile easy going but that was short-lived.

The company under Capt. Fred Lazier, of Belleville, moved forward under cover of darkness, bumping into the enemy at the edge of the village at daybreak. The Krauts were in fortifications and stone houses. Two platoons charged with bayonets, hand grenades, Tommy guns and rifles. The enemy replied with everything, including bazookas, firing at our lads as if they were tanks.

Another company, under Major Allen Ross, also moved into battle with Capt. Graydon slipping over on the right to protect the flank. Rifle fire, bursting bombs, grenades, mortars, shells and whatnot rent the air. Capt. Graydon was wounded, but kept on fighting. Capt. Max Porritt, of Belleville, with the company, went to Capt. Graydon's assistance.

It was free for all at close range, but the Hasty P's gained their objective, inflicting heavy casualties and taking 20 of Hitler's fanatical Nazis, who had to be pounded into submission.

Small arms fire and sniping continued all night, but the Huns pulled out before daybreak. They had had enough.

Fortunato Stiff Fight

In attacking on the right of the Fortunato feature, the last blocking the way to the Po valley, the Hasty P's kicked-off at 3 a.m. and took the first objective at six. Capt. O. Stockdale, Toronto, advanced to the right with Capt. Dean Seaton, Brockville, on the left. They overcame stiff resistance on the flats before the feature and then Major Ross' company passed through carrying the battle of the enemy, and they, in turn, were followed by Major Thomas Beauclerk, Montreal.

"It was sticky fighting on the slopes, but the boys inflicted heavvy casulaties and took 112 prisoners including paratroopers, German airforce, Turcomen and Panzer Grenadiers," said the Hasty P's commanding officer, who comes from Cornwall.

"Gaining the crest the regiment consolidated, hung on all day and then the Western Canadian regiments went through. One Western battalion took their six-pound anti-tank guns with them, cutting through and getting behind. That was the write-off."

The Fortunato feature was littered with enemy dead as it fell into our hands. Over 700 prisoners were taken, Major Lyall Carr, Port Hope, offered a German officer a lift in his jeep back to the prisoners' cage, but he preferred to walk with his men.

Private F. D. O'Neill, Triller ave., Toronto, has been highly commended for his Bren gun work. He took on three enemy posts, giving his platoon successful covering fire.

Get a Meal Through

The Hasty P's say no praise is too high for C.Q.M.S. Alfred J. Corson, 49 Bernice cres., Toronto. When the fighting was toughest and the Huns using over 300 guns, plus hundreds of mortars, anti-tank and self-propelled, in an effort to stop the 8th Army steam roller, the boys hadn't eaten a meal for 36 hours. Despite everybody saying it was impossible, Corson took a meal through. It gave the lads renewed spirit.

Pte. C. J. Hildreith, 263 Gowan ave., Toronto, a platoon runner who always volunteers first for every dangerous job, even stepped up his reputation in both engagements. His name is written in the regimental history for extreme heroism.

L.-Sergt. M. O. Van Hende, Aylmer, wiped out five machine-gun posts, killed eight and took 30 prisoners in the Fortunato feature attack. His company gained their objective.

Pte. Max G. Crowe, Frankford, is stret-ner-bearer with the regiment and here since the invasion of Sicily, has been highly commended for outstanding and heroic work in rescuing the wounded under heavy enemy fire.

Well done Canada, says Leese, and the Hasty P's have certainly done their part.

SUBMIT QUESTION

C., of Kingston Community Memorial Recreation Centre Committee, have been asked to draft a by-law calling for expenditure of $100,000 for a recreation centre to be erected on fairgrounds here. It likely will be submitted to ratepayers at the next municipal election.

48-Hour Truce At Dunkerque

London, Oct. 4 —(CP)— A 48-hour truce in fighting for the besieged German-held port of Dunkerque started at 6 a.m. today, Reuter News Agency reported in a frontline dispatch.

The dispatch, from the Allied 21st Army Group Headquarters, confirmed an earlier German radio report which said the truce had been arranged between the German garrison and the commander of the attacking Canadians to allow evacuation of civilians from the city.

A similar truce was arranged between the 1st Canadian Army and the German defenders of Calais last weekend, before the fall of that port.

Smaller and More Concentrated Raids Damage Huns More

London, Oct. 4—(CP)— The R. A. F. abandoned saturation night bombing during September in favor of smaller and more concentrated attacks, the Air Ministry said last night in a statistical review of air operations in September.

"The range of destruction of targets in Germany was increased by the use of comparatively small forces bombing with such accuracy that as much damage was done as in much heavier attacks of the past," the Air Ministry said.

An outstanding example of this is the case of the city of Darmstadt, centre of Germany's chemical industry and base for German armies defending the upper Rhineland, bombed the night of Sept. 12.

"Almost the whole of Darmstadt was destroyed by a force of a little more than 200 Lancasters," the report said.

Denny Galehouse, Mort Cooper Rival Moundsmen as Browns And Cards Square Off for Series

Galehouse Did Not Win First Game This Season Until July 20

EDGE GIVEN CARDS

By JACK HAND
(AP Sport Writer)

St. Louis, Oct. 4 — (AP) — Luke Sewell's St. Louis Browns, the boys from the other side of the tracks, dared to match Mort Cooper, the Cardinals' ace, with Denny Galehouse, a veteran curve ball artist who didn't win his first game until July 20, in today's opener of the first all-St. Louis world series.

Despite the record books and the season averages which gave the National Leaguers the "paper" edge, the pendulum of popular support appeared to be swinging toward the underdog Brownies who have been picking up such fancy titles as "the team of destiny" and "the Cinderella kids."

The odds-makers, however, still followed the figures for the price on today's game was 1 to 2 and on the series 2 to 5 with the Redbirds favored.

Selection of Galehouse upset the dopesters who had expected Sewell to lead with Nels Potter, but the skipper said, 'Galehouse is my man' and offered no explanation after he watched Potter warm up with coach Zack Taylor for 30 minutes yesterday. It was a certainty the Cards would see plenty of low-breaking stuff backed up by excellent control and cunning pitching equipment.

Cloudy skies and a continual threat of rain hovered over the final dress rehearsals at Sportsmans Park but the weather man promised improved conditions for today's event. Bleacher fans started a line before noon yesterday and club officials, with all reserves sold, counted on 35,000 for the first game, scheduled for 3 p. m. E.D.T.

Stick with Lineups

Arguments raged on the intriguing question of whether the Browns' "hot" streak would lift them past Billy Southworth's gang or whether the Cardinals would be able to regain the edge they lost in late season.

Both Sewell and Southworth said they would stick with their regular lineups, although the Browns' boss reserved the right to change his mind in right field where he has named Gene Moore over Milt Byrnes. Billy the Kid said he would insert Augie Bergamo in left if Danny Litwhiler wasn't ready.

Pitching plans past today were strictly a jumble. An infected tooth forced Sig Jakucki to miss the final tuneup and may alter turns on the Brownie staff.

Cooper hasn't pitched since Sept. 24 but worked in hitting practice on the road and was reported ready. Big Mort, who won 22 and lost 7, was no surprise choice as he had been a standout all season after finally breaking the American League jinx and winning an inter-league tilt in the 1943 series. As usual, brother Walker will do the catching.

In War Plant

Galehouse almost didn't play this year but the peculiar twists of a wartime season combined to give him his first chance in the fall classic, when it was least expected.

Deciding to stay at his war plant job in Cleveland in the spring Denny finally caught the "fever" and told the Browns he would join them Sundays only. The experiment was not successful as he lost three in a row and was being pointed out as the horrible example of how baseball is a full time job.

The righthander became a full-time performer July 20 and celebrated with the first of a five-game victory march. Although his season's record tells a deceiving 9-10 tale. Galehouse twice shut out New York Yankees, the last time Saturday afternoon in the heat of the closing drive. Myron (Red) Hayworth was named by Sewell as his opening catcher.

New Westminster Wins Exhibition Game at Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Oct. 4 (CP)—New Westminster Salmonbellies, western Canada champions, defeated Winnipeg No. 8 Repair Depot (R.C.A.F.) 20-4 last night in an exhibition box lacrosse game.

Salmonbellies are en route to Toronto where they meet St. Catharines Athletics in a series for the Mann Cup and Dominion championship starting Saturday.

Veteran Bill Dickinson and 17-year-old Ike Hildebrand starred for the coast club, scoring three goals apiece.

Salmonbellies outclassed their opponents in every department of the game and impressed a crowd of 2,000 with some brilliant passing.

MEETS RUFFIAN

One of the more popular wrestlers to appear at the Hume Arena is Pierre DeGlane, nephew of the great Henri DeGlane, who meets Dr. Len Hall, the Hollywood ring ruffian in the semi-final of tonight's all-star wrestling show at the Hume Arena. DeGlane is a quiet methodical grappler who always pleases the patrons. The feature bout, however, sees Ivan Rasputin, the mad Russian, meet "Whipper Billie" Watson, Canada's No. 1 wrestler and also claimant to the world's championship.

Joey Peralta Yet To Take Count in Ring

Toronto, Oct. 4 — (CP) — Joey Peralta, the Mexican who tangles with Canadian welter and lightweight champion Dave Castilloux in Maple Leaf Gardens on Friday night, has yet to take a count in the ring — all of which dispels any doubts as to the ruggedness of the scrapper from south of the border.

A fast-hook artist, Peralta comes in swinging left and right hooks that are not the easiest thing to stop. It is the opinion of most of the gymnasium-goers that Peralta has the style suited to overcome Castilloux's clever boxing.

Each of Dave's four ring losses have been to fighters who kept him from setting his own pace by boring in and bullying the Canadian champ.

Meanwhile Ontario Athletic Commission Chairman Lionel Conacher has ruled that promoter-manager Jack Allen must either give up managing Castilloux or give up fight promotion. Conacher's ruling has brought word from Allen that he will keep Castilloux as his fighter and break all promotional connection with the Toronto Boxing Club, which is financing Friday's fight.

Both Peralta and Castilloux are natural 135-pounders and neither has been down for the 10-count. Each has been boxing professionally for 10 years and each has lost four bouts in the last seven years.

HAMILTON WINS TWICE

Hamilton, Oct. 4 (CP)—Hamilton players made it two straight over Toronto Peoples in the final series for the Ontario Senior Softball crown here last night when they handed the Queen City champions a 14-3 trouncing. Russell Johnson, hurling for Beavers allowed only six hits and was never in trouble after the second frame. In addition he fanned an even dozen, disposing of three straight men via the strikeout route in two frames.

Toronto, Oct. 4 — (CP)—Duffers of the golf course aren't going to be happy when they hear the suggestion that cups should be made smaller, with the avowed object of cutting down on the number of "gift" putts sunk by lucky players. Somebody is always taking the joy out of life.

The Vancouver Province golf expert, Bill Forst, advances the idea because he thinks it would help the careful player and cut down on the careless individual who bangs his shots any old way, just as he lands on the green in par strokes with a chance to loop a long putt into the present large-size cup.

The element of luck would be reduced and golf would become the science of skill itself, the western strategist adds. He really has something there, but it certainly would be painful for the garden variety of divot-diggers, who would be lucky to break 100 then.

Former Olympic sprint star Percy Williams of Vancouver says that track and field sports won't get anywhere in Canada until indoor tracks are built and some effort is made to interest the public more than the present day version does. Something should be done to speed up the programs too. If there were no betting at the race tracks, people would not exert themselves over-much to see the gee-gees run, and track events are reeled off at a slower clip, if anything. Not that we're suggesting betting, but a bit of glamor should be inserted some other way . . . JOE. LEGAULT CLUB CHAMPION

Joe Legault won the club championship of the Belleville Golf Club once again. Actually Champion Joe wins this crown quite frequently and over a period of the past few years has annexed this honor more often than all others collectively.

The annual club championship was played last Sunday morning when Mr. Legault posted an 87, two strokes under that of Ralph Ketcheson, who was second with an 89. In the afternoon a two ball foursome was played with an exceptionally fine turnout of club members. This tournament was won by Mrs. Fozard and Mr. R. Brown. The annual banquet and distribution of club prizes will be held in the Belleville Golf Club clubhouse on Oct. 19th.

The individual scores of the club championship match held last Sunday were:—

J. Legault	87
R. Ketcheson	89
N. Brown	93

O. Waldorf	96
B. Brown	99

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Welland Combines now lead London Majors 3-0 in their series for what they call "the real senior baseball championship of Ontario." In the second game at London last night the Combines won 4-2, largely aided by eight errors on the part of the Majors.

The series is being played in defiance of the O.B.A. which last week ruled out the London-Windsor semi-final play-off and ordered those two teams to replay the series for the right to meet Welland in the finals. The O.B.A.'s dates for the London-Windsor series were the same as the present London-Welland playoff.

Four of the Majors' errors last night came in the fifth inning when Welland scored two runs on no hits.

The third and deciding game of the O.B.A. juvenile finals between Sarnia and Toronto-Trinity-Kiwanis will be played at Woodstock on Monday, Thanksgiving Day. Leslie Pockett, O.B.A. convener at Woodstock, is making arrangements for a big holiday crowd.

San Francisco defeated Los Angeles 4-2 last night to win the final play-off in the Pacific Coast League four games to three. Frisco scored 3 runs in the seventh after Stan Gray, Los Angeles third baseman, fell down and allowed a fielder's throw on a bunt to go to the far corner of the field. Ben Quintini, who laid down the bunt, scored on the freak play.

After a two-week rest, Yankee Maid returned to the races yesterday to win the $8,831 American Stake for three-year-old trotters at the Lexington, Ky., trots and at the same time lower the season's record for three-year-old trotters to 2:01 3/4 in the first heat.

Four hockey players left Niagara Falls yesterday for the Providence Reds' training camp. The contingent included Frank and Pete Long and Mickey Phillips, last season's high-scoring line for St. Catharines' Falcons, and Boy Roy, who played juvenile hockey for Niagara Falls. Buster Pugliano, another Falls juvenile, was also sought by the American Hockey League team but being of draft age was prevented by local selective service officials from making the trip.

An official of Montreal Canadiens of the N.H.L. said last night that Toronto Maple Leafs had made a "big cash offer" for goalie Paul Bibeault, but that Canadiens rejected it because they want players, not cash. Bibeault, property of Canadiens, played with the Leafs last season.

New York, Oct. 4 — (AP) — Columbia's Lou Little explains that he adopted the "T" formation this year because he has a light backfield and no good blockers . . . He also maintains that lateral passing never can become an integral part of American football because it seldom is possible to work the ball downfield into the open where laterals do some good . . . Andy Kerr of Colgate, long a staunch upholder of the double-wing system, now is using what he calls a "T-Z" formation, which mixes up several styles . . . All of which is just further evidence to show that grid coaches in these wartime seasons are doing a lot of experimenting and may come up with some fancy new doings for the post-war "boom" times.

Local sock experts claim that Sailor Tommy Altieri, a New England heavyweight who is stationed here, is about the best looking fight prospect they've seen in a long time . . . One of pro hockey's big name guys is ready to take over the Baltimore amateur club. Look for an announcement soon . . . The Browns have invited Pete Gray, the one-armed outfielder they recently bought, to see the world series "on the club."

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Cautious

The cautious player had been in for nearly half an hour without scoring a run, and the fielders were beginning to get annoyed. His gentle play at last grew so pronounced that they closed within a few feet of him, waiting eagerly for the catch.

The light began to fail. It was essential that his wicket should fall before the time came to draw stumps. Closer and closer came the fielders until there was barely room for the batsman to raise his bat.

Suddenly a thin, piping voice was heard from amongst the spectators.

"Look out, Bill," it said. "Mind you don't get your pocket picked."

Off to Windsor.

The Columbian Squires agreed to play the entire Junior O.A.S.A. final series in Windsor, after being guaranteed expenses. Convener Harry Rollins announced today the Squires would leave here Saturday to play one game at Windsor on Sunday and the second game at two o'clock Monday afternoon. In the event the final championship series is tied at one game each at the end of two games, the third and final will be played as part of a double-header on Thanksgiving Day. The only objection to the latter move is the fact Don Boyle would have to hurl two games in one afternoon if the series goes to three games. However, the Squires could save the trouble of a third game by winning in two straight. The only trouble coaches Jack Doran and Johnny Boyle will be confronted with is rounding the Squires up on Sunday night while they'll be doing Detroit and the night spots. Once the Squires hit some of those Detroit night spots Skippers Doran and Boyle will need a lasso to round 'em up for a night's rest prior to Monday's game. However, it will all be good fun and they're young and full of energy.

Play-Off Dates.

The dates for the Intermediate O.A.S.A. finals between Fort Erie and the local SACO "Marines" were announced today by Harry Rollins, vice president of the O.A.S.A. The first game of this series will be played Saturday afternoon at Fort Erie with the second game scheduled to be played at the Exhibition Park here on Monday (Thanksgiving Day) commencing at two o'clock. In the event of a third game it will be played directly after the second tilt as part of a double-header, which shouldn't rub any to well with Jim Hunter, who hasn't pitched in a fortnight and if the series goes the limit "Elongated Jim" will be called up to hurl one game on Saturday and perhaps both ends of a twin bill on Monday. At Fort Erie, St. Catharines umpires will be employed as arbiters, while in the return game here two Oshawa umpires, Reg. Fair and another Motor City arbiter, will call 'em.

Take a bow, kids.

After viewing last Saturday's Toronto-Belleville Junior O.A.S.A. saw-off at Peterborough. Scribe Fred Craig had the following complimentary remarks to make about our Columbian Squires. Said Fred: "The exhibition of softball staged here by the Belleville and Toronto junior teams, in a battle between the Belleville Irish and a team of young Ukrainians from the Toronto playgrounds, impressed the fans with the class shown by many of the young players. Belleville has nothing to worry about in the matter of material for future senior outfits if they can keep on developing pitchers like this Don Boyle, or outfielders like Red Calkin or infielders like a couple of the other boys on the line up. The Quinte team, down 3 to 0 deserve credit for their gallant fight in coming from behind and finally winning out in the tenth and while the Toronto kids were eventually beaten, their sportsmanship was a pleasing feature. As soon as the game ended the Queen City players rushed over to shake hands with the victorious Belleville outfit, wishing them luck in the finals. The two teams staged a real ball game and the fans who went home after the Soldier battle missed a nice argument. We heard one enthusiast say that the Belleville kids could have taken either of the Soldier outfits. That would be asking a lot of a junior team but at that the Quinte kids would make quite a showing on the form they revealed here Saturday."

Around Our Town.

Jack Doran, football convener for the Bay of Quinte Interscholastic group, announced today the opening games of the district Interscholastic football season....One week from today the Picton Collegiate juniors pry off the lid when they meet "Red" Townsend's B.C.I. & V.S. juniors at the Collegiate campus....On Oct. 12th the senior series opens with the champion St. Mike's journeying up to Albert College to open the season....In the Junior and Senior series together there are a total of 18 interscholastic football games, six in the senior series and 12 in the junior loop.... Tonight all roads lead to the Hume area where Ivan Rasputin, the Mad Russian, will try to dissect Whipper Watson to see what keeps "The Whip" in the upper wrestling bracket.. This Russian bear-like pachyderm knows no scruples, as a matter of fact he would prefer chewing an opponent's ear off to that of shaking hands with a long lost friend, if he had a long lost friend ....At any rate Promoter Frank Tunney apparently gave the patrons something to think about when he signed Watson and Rasputin as headliners for tonight.

Remember When.

"The Big Train" of baseball, Walter Johnson, was "fired" at the expiration of his four-year managerial contract with the Washington Senators, he led the American League twirlers before signing as manager in the twilight of his career. There are many who refer to Walter Johnson as the greatest pitcher of all time.

Our Loss.

It was with profound regret we learned of the untimely death of George "Bubby" Gaulin yesterday. A gentleman and a sportsman at all times, "Bubby" Gaulin's friends were counted in legions and sport can ill afford to lose such a fine man. As a player, manager and citizen the late "Bubby" Gaulin commanded the respect of all with whom he came in contact. He was a credit to the various clubs he became associated with, his native Point Anne and perhaps Canada as a whole. A quiet-spoken young man whose friends were innumerable. The sympathy of the entire district is extended his bereaved family.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 497

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Each opening bid in bridge has two immediate purposes. First, it reveals the least that hand contains. Second, it asks partner to give the special information that fits the opening.

An opening of one in a suit shows a hand with at least a suit that is biddable; at least five tricks; at least four high cards; at least two sure tricks.

It asks partner to pass with not more than two tricks to bid with more than two tricks; to show if he has enough help for a game; to show if he has help for a slam.

An opening of two in a suit shows a hand with at least a suit that is biddable; at least nine tricks to expect a game even if no tricks are in partner's hand.

It asks partner not to pass under any circumstances; to bid two no-trump unless he has a sure trick; to bid anything but two no-trump if he has a sure trick and thus show help for a slam.

An opening of three in a major suit shows a hand with a suit that needs no support; at least one outside sure trick; at least seven tricks and no more than eight tricks.

It asks partner to pass if he has no trick; to assist to game if he has a trick or more but not two sure tricks; to bid anything but an assist to game if he has two sure tricks for slam help.

Your opening is three spades with this hand:

♠A Q J 10 9 7 2
♥A Q
♦5
♣K 4 3

If partner passes, he says his hand is trickless. So, you must expect there is no game in your pair. Be content to take nine tricks.

If his response is four spades, he shows at least a trick or more but not two sure tricks. All you can expect is a game in spades.

If his response is anything else, he shows two sure tricks. You can then bid four no-trump to ask for further slam information.

A bad bid usually backfires.

German Officer Deserts Company in Tight Corner

By BILL BOSS
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Corps on the Adriatic Front, Oct. 3 —(CP)— "It was a hot little action," commented the officer commanding the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, "and the enemy not only resisted strongly, but once we'd licked him, he launched a determined counter-attack."

The place was Monte Santa Maria, between the Metauro and the Foglia rivers, and the encounter occurred during the 8th Army's approach to the Gothic Line. A company under Major Colin McDougall of Montreal had already taken Monte Croce. But the position was untenable because Germans on Monte Santa Maria, a high hill just ahead, governed it. The place, obviously, had to be taken.

Supported by Lieut. John Keensgen's (Winnipeg) machine-gun platoon, which devoted 9,000 rounds of Vicker's ammunition to their support, Maj. McDougall's men went on to storm the hilltop village.

The position was finally taken when Lieut. Egan Chambers of Montreal led a platoon attack against the house of hottest resistance, which turned out to be headquarters of the German company defending.

The Nazi company commander beat a speedy retreat leaving his paratroopers to face Chambers' men, approaching three sections under Cpl. Stewart Carpenter, Warner, Alta.; L/Cpl. Charles Ross, former fishing and hunting guide from Black Hawk, Ont., and L/Cpl. Ray Gavin, Toronto.

Sniper Caught Napping.

While clearing one house, Lieut. Chambers, Carpenter and Pte. Duncan Balmer, Calgary, Alta., came upon a German sniper who, oblivious to the noise with which they'd gone about the job, was taking aim through the window when they threw open the door of his room. A shot from Balmer's rifle accounted for him.

The 12 prisoners who were eventually taken with all the company records and the unit radio set expressed considerable annoyance over their leader's desertion.

That night Monte Santa Maria was counter-attacked. At 4.45 in the morning Pte. H. C. Weidenhammer, Deloraina, Man., doing sentry-go saw three Germans approaching stealthily. He retired into shadow, the night was brilliantly monlit, and let them come closer. When they were within two or three yards he cut them down with a burst from his tommy-gun, at the same time precipitating a confused action which lasted an hour, during the remaining darkness.

There were more than 40 Germans, all heavily armed. The fight was bitter, mostly hand-to-hand. When the Germans chucked hand grenades into a room, fellows in it got out but watched for the Nazis to follow them up.

As the Germans tried to clamber over the window sills they were mown down by Cpl. Bert Ferguson, Falkland, B.C., and Pte. Bob Bird, Toronto. What finally broke up the "do" was some grenades dropped by Pte. Fred G. Stephenson, Souris, Man., from an upstairs window onto a group of Jerries standing together outside the house. Those not wounded from his shower "stood not upon the order of their going."

Lieut. Chambers, with a section under Lieut. Carpenter, on their way up to lend a hand, killed two of the counter-attackers, the rest of whom, as they retired at dawn, came under heavy fire from platoons under Lieut. Jim Bird, Boissevain, Man., and Lieut. Chambers' own platoon, then under Sgt. A. Harry Browne, of Victoria.

Canadians Win Stern Battle at Montecchio

By DOUG HOW
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians on the Adriatic Front, Oct. 3—(CP)—The Italians had built Montecchio at the foot of a sheer slope overlooking the main road running inland from Pesaro near the northern banks of the Foglia river.

The Germans had built their Gothic Line positions on the slopes behind the Foglia and the feature behind Mintecchio was a natural for defence. It had a broad field of fire dominating the whole valley, a sheer slope, good earth for digging, everything.

The Germans dug trenches, put up wire, tunnelled beneath the hill and turned it into a small fortress. They made the trenches part of one big defence system. They stored ammunition, brought in bags of cement, gave this key position all the attention it deserved.

For days before the Canadian soldiers came the air force had been bombing the Gothic Line. They hit Montecchio so often and so accurately it tumbled into chaotic nothingness and became another Cassino. As the Canadians came closer the Germans fell back and manned the hill behind the village and got ready.

Everytime the air force came over they ran beneath the hill through their tunnels and were safe. Canadian patrols forded the Foglia and came right into Montecchio but the Germans lay quiet and let them go. Why should they reveal their positions for patrols? They would save them for the real thing.

Another patrol came over in broad daylight, found nothing, met no opposition, reported back. Shortly after two battalions crossed the river, one heading for Montecchio, the other for Point 111, a dominating feature to the right of it. This was no patrol. This was the final assault on the Gothic Line.

A German Trap.

On the left the Cape Breton Highlanders passed through rubbled Montecchio, began to ascend the slope behind it. The Germans waited, watched, let them come so far, then opened up. The Highlanders' losses were severe, they hung on, but were finally forced back.

Darkness came and hundreds of guns pounded the hill. They sent the Highlanders back in again early in the morning but this was no place to be taken by frontal assault. They were hurled back again.

On the right an Ontario battalion crossed the river, reached the road, came under withering fire, withdrew. When darkness came fresh infantrymen and tanks crossed, stormed the slope, seized Point 111 and the broken white house on the top of it.

The new morning came. Montecchio's hill had been taken. They sent another Ontario battalion around its right flank with tanks and guns and small arms fire to support them from several sides. Slowly, methodically the infantrymen worked around. Some were killed and others wounded but they went on.

And at last they were in position to take the hill itself. They went in and when they came out they had 117 prisoners. There was heavy fighting ahead but the Gothic Line itself was breached.

LARGE STOCKS OF LIQUOR IN BOND IN ALL PROVINCES

Order-in-Council Restricts Release of Imported Spirits

Ottawa, Oct. 4 —(CP)— Every province has large stocks of liquor in bond, it was disclosed here today by an official of the Federal Excise Department.

Commenting on a Vancouver dispatch that the British Columbia Liquor Control Board owns 100,000 gallons of Demarara run which is unavailable because of federal restrictions, the official said that every province is in "a similar situation."

He referred to the order-in-council which restricted the release of imported spirits held in bond to 70 per cent of the amount released in the 12 months ended Oct. 31, 1942. When the restriction was imposed a large quantity of liquor was being held in bond and in the period since publication of the order-in-council stocks have accumulated.

"All the provinces have quite a big stock of liquor on hand—perhaps enough to slightly increase their monthly rations—but there is no indication that the order will be lifted in the near future,' the official added.

Regina Roughriders Disband for Duration

Regina, Oct. 4 —(CP)— Regina Roughriders, winners of the Western Canada Rugby Football title eight times since 1921, have disbanded for the duration of the war officials announced today.

Decision to withdraw from competition was reached at a meeting here last night. Inability to secure permission to use armed service personnel was the reason given.

The team had been practicing for some time under the direction of Al Ritchie, long-time mentor, and had hoped to challenge for the Dominion Senior title this fall.

Last week the club lost the services of Dean Griffing, ace snap, now a member of Toronto Balmy Beach in the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

U.K., Dominions In Consultation On Migration

London, Oct. 4 —(CP-Reuter)— W. J. Brown, independent, asked today in the House of Commons whether the under-secretary of State for Dominions Affairs, Emrys Evans, could make any statement "as to government policy for increasing the British population in the Dominions."

Mr. Evans replied: "I am not clear what Mr. Brown had in mind. If he refers to such measures as encouraging and increasing the birth rate, that is a matter for the Dominions themselves. If he refers to migration from this country,, the policy of His Majesty's government in the United Kingdom has been stated on various occasions, last in a statement by the secretary for the Dominions in the House of Lords on May 24.

"I cannot add anything to this statement except to say that the government is at present in consultation with the Dominion governments on the subject."

Mr. Brown asked when the Minister would be likely to make a statement. Mr. Evans replied: "I am afraid I am not able to do so. This is a matter which depends on the result of our conversations with the Dominions."

Replying to further questions, Mr. Evans said: "Of course the British government are in favor of migration, and of course it must be carried out in close contact with immigrants."

Mr. Evans said that all official and unofficial reports presented to the government before the war were being re-examined and conversations were taking place between the governments of the Dominions.

By HYE BOSSIN

Dewey is getting plenty of Hollywood support in his fight for the presidency. Lionel Barrymore is president and Ginger Rogers vice-president of the "Hollywood for Dewey" movement. Among those supporting it are Mary Pickford, Raymond Massey, Don Ameche, Bing Crosby, Cary Grant, Walt Disney, Fred McMurray, Joel McCrea, Ray Milland and dozens of others. No doubt much of the Roosevelt opposition comes from the president's attempt to limit wartime incomes to $25,000.

Sweep-nosed Bob Hope swept through Toronto and is back helping the USA war effort now.

I got some idea of how Hope is regarded while waiting for him outside his dressing-room. One of the kids that sells soft drinks was waiting with an autograph book for an hour before Hope showed up.

"You won't do much business this way," I ventured.

"Who wants to do business," he exploded, "at a time like this!"

Autograph seekers are an unusual crowd. Having missed Hope, one shoved his book at me. I wrote "Bob Hope's brother — Lost Hope." He dashed away without even reading it.

New York's famous Little Church Around the Corner, actor's haven, will be the subject of a motion picture ... Canada has contributed actors, directors, writers and technicians to Hollywood but no composers until recently. Now Louis Applebaum of Toronto, on leave from the National Film Board, will help provide the musical score of "G.I. Joe." He recently worked on "Tomorrow the World." Percy Faith, ex-CBC conductor who is now in the USA, has turned down several Hollywood offers ... Reporters are trying to find out the identity of the film star who bought a $200 pair of shoes in a Chicago store. They are reported to have gold slugs in the heels, gold eyelets and gold-tipped laces.

Edward G. Robinson was born in Romania and besides that language and English he speaks French, Italian, Spanish, German, Hebrew and Yiddish.

One day Director Fritz Lang asked him how many languages he spoke. Robinson named them and said "nine."

"But you only mentioned eight," said Lang.

"I'm a student of music," said Robinson smiling. "That's a universal language, isn't it?"

Rosalind Russell, who is taking to career women roles, will play a lady psychiatrist in "Some Call It Love." ... One of our cherished democratic rights is the privilege of snoozing at a movie but a Montreal patron abused it by snoring. They woke him but he protested so violently that he was arrested and charged with disturbing the peace. The judge, an understanding soul, fined him costs only ... A young autograph hunter was caught trying to cut out one of those concrete footprints of the stars with a hammer and chisel in Hollywood.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and the telephone rang and it was my sister Gladdis to talk to ma, ma saying, Hello Gladdis, how are you? I hope your appointment came off all right without any disappointing results. What? Why the idea, I never heard of such a thing, to cancel an important appointment like that at the eleventh hour and practically the last minute. Yes, of course I understand how busy he is, but he kept you waiting an entire week for your appointment in the first place although he knew how worried you were about your condition. It's a sheer case of criminal negligence and I think you ought to report him. Well no, I dont know who you could report him to but there must be some way of reporting such a flagrant breetch of etics, ma said.

Tell her to report the skunk to the County Medical Sissiety, pop said, and ma held up her hand for him to keep quiet, saying, What was that, Gladdis? Yes, I think you're quite right, I dont think you should ever go see him again, even if he is the leading man in his line and the only one who really understands your particular complications. There are other good men in the profession. What? Of course you were perfectly right in refusing to see his assistant, a man who knows nothing about your case. There ought to be some organization you could report him to ma sad, and pop called out, The County Medical Sissiety for Peet sake.

Well goodbye, Gladdis, and I hope you take my advice, ma said. And she hung up, saying to pop, What on earth has a medical sissiety got to do with a hairdresser? I never heard anything so silly. That poor girl had to go to her class reunion without a new permanent all on account of that undependable man, she said.

Help aid sucker, pop said.

Saying it in back of the sporting page.

Local Boxers Break Even At Oshawa

Belleville boxers broke even in five fights held at the Oshawa arena last night, winning two, gaining a draw and losing a brace of decisions to Motor City boxers.

Ted Stevens, Belleville, pounded out a three-round victory over a Japanese lad from Oshawa, while Rans Bush flattened Buddy O'Brien, Oshawa, for the count of seven in the third round to gain the unanimous decision of the judges.

George Palmateer, Belleville, who lost to "Dynamite" Wheeler at the Hume Arena last week, boxed the Oshawa champ to a draw last night. Palmateer looked much better in Oshawa and gained a split decision by boxing Wheeler and tagging him frequently with rapier lefts to the head.

Joey McPhee, Oshawa, who lost a decision to Jerry Downs, Belleville, here last week, reversed matters over the local leather-puncher to beat Downs on points, while Dick Rosatti, Belleville, dropped a decision to Al Smith.

Matchmaker Bill Crawford made arrangements with several outstanding Oshawa and Toronto fighters for his second boxing show at the Hume Arena next week. Some of the best boxers in Eastern Ontario will be included on the card.

CHAPTER 13.

He smiled, "That's nothing; some of best people are snoopers."

"Not the way I snooped. First I pumped your kennel man and Johnson. I even pumped Mrs. Johnson. Then I called up Paul Freund—he wasn't there, he was on his way over here, incidently—and while I was phoning in the library, I looked at the letter paper on your desk. A lawyer with an office in Wall Street—Tiffany stationery—Harvard, that was your year-book on the shelf—played football—handsomest man in your class—also the greatest heartbreaker."

He fussed like a boy. "Say, listen, don't hold that against me; that was just kid stuff."

"And then your sailboat," she continued relentlessly. "The Calypso. The little brass plates on the model told me its name. And there was a picture of that," she pointed toward the car, "taken as it left the shops with its hundred thousand horse-power."

"Four hundred and twenty-five" he corrected.

"Yes and you let me think it was just a second-hand old rattletrap," she swept on in mounting fury. "The best you could scrape together."

"That's true," he injected mildly. "It was the best I could scrape together."

She stamped her foot. "Oh, I'm boiling all over again at the way you made a fool of me!"

"Now look here," he protested. "That's unfair, you know. You jumped to your own conclusions."

"But you knew perfectly well that I thought you were just another edition of Paul Freund—a poor devil trying to make a precarious living out of raising Great Danes. Otherwise, do you think I'd have let you have this place at fifty dollars a month? Why, I've been robbed!"

He burst out laughing, and she had to laugh, too. Then she pulled herself up sharply. For it was an awkward situation. She should not have glanced at the letter that had lain open on his desk. She hadn't told him about that part of her snooping, because she'd been ashamed; but a glance (or two, or three) informed her that his wife was in love with him and that she had planned to lunch with him at the Colony that day. The words, written in young, forceful backhand, seared in her memory. "I'm looking forward to it, Sweet, as if I'd never been married to you, and I've something important to discuss with you, about the sweepstakes. Don't let anything come up to disappoint me.

"Brenda."

Ann couldn't help wondering whether Johnson's telephone call had interfered. It must have, for Christopher had arrived too early to have accomplished the slow ritual of a Colony luncheon.

"Sorry, darling," he'd probably told Brenda, "the dame that owns the place just blew in at Myles. I'll have to dash up and smooth her down." Where did Brenda fit into this farm scheme, anyway? She didn't seem to have much say in his decisions, one way or another; but she apparently was as much interested in the dogs as he was—one of those undomestic, horsey women, very likely; a little blowzy, but attractive to certain types of men. Christopher Wain might well be that type of man. Indeed it was more than probable that he had bought Mad Anthony for her. Yes, from all circumstantial evidence, Brenda and Christpher Wain were an idyllic couple, with that easy attunement that would make them lovers to the rest of the world... These thoughts had raced through Ann's mind with the velocity of incidents in a dream.

After seconds of mutual laughter, she declared, "I'm not jesting," and added in a curt voice "This whole arrangement is most unbusinesslike."

"I know that," he admitted soberly. "What I've spent on the place hardly makes up for the rental I ought to be paying."

"Don't be absurd. What I mean is, you have no lease. I could put you out tomorrow, don't you realize that?"

"I realize it. But do you want to?"

She stamped her foot again. "Of course I do. But in all decency, I can't. You practically own the place. Look here," she broke off. "Are you listening to me?"

"No, I was watching Rowdy. Say that pup's improved, do you know it?"

"Why shouldn't I know it?"

"She's almost as big as Gretel."

"It must hurt you to own up to it." She heard the note of pettiness in her voice and she didn't like it. Her head was throbbing, and her chest had tightened anew in a spasm of pain.

She saw him look at her questioningly. "It's getting raw. Let's get indoors," he urged.

She shook her head. "I'm going home. Here, Rowdy!"

"I'll drive you into town."

"You'll do nothing of the sort." She stalked ahead of him. He caught up with her in two long strides. She felt his hand on her arm. "You're being unreasonable," he chided her. "It isn't as if I didn't love the place; it isn't as if I'd desecrated anything—Or have I?" He stood still in dismay. "I say, have I done things to it that you don't like? Is that it?"

"Oh, how wrong you are." Gratitude welled up in her. "You've done a beautiful job! I'll never be able to thank you for what you've done. The meadows especially. When I saw the lime-spreader and the sacks of super-phosphates in the barn, it made me want to get down on my knees—"

"Hey, there—"

"I know. I'm silly about those meadows. I think that freshly ploughed land is—"

"It's holy" he finished gravely.

"Exactly." She felt choked, all at once, with a choking that had nothing to do with the tightness in her chest. Not since her father's death had she spoken this language of the land. It brought back all that Broadfields stood for, all the enduring hopes that had gone into its making. She felt a sudden emptiness in realizing that she was no longer part of it. A new person had come to take it over but it was good that the way of his living and the quality of his being were no violation of spirit.

"You're going to let me know where you live, aren't you?" he asked her.

"Why not? You must have thought me very childish in trying to elude you."

"I thought that something must have hurt you," he said gently. "I wish I knew what it was."

She could think of no answer to give him. She couldn't say 'I'm hurt because you're married and haven't said so.' If she told him that, he'd know the rest of it. He'd know that she was trying, with all the strength that she possessed, to keep from falling in love with him. "Here comes your kennel man," she said instead, as she saw the stocky figure approach.

"Yes, Hans?" saluted Wain.

Hans looked worried. "It's the Baron, Mr. Wain. I don't like the way he's acting."

A swift change came over Wain's face. "What's wrong with him?"

"I don't know, Mr. Wain. He wasn't good all day, but I didn't think it was anything serious because he wasn't running any temperature. I thought maybe he was just tired. But now, all of a sudden, he's very weak."

"I'll go to him."

"I'll go with you," Ann offered.

The Baron wasn't in the kennels; he was bedded down in one of the horse stalls. He raised his head listlessly as they came in, but when he recognized Christopher, he got to his feet and came toward him. Ann felt as if she were in the presence of royalty. Th dog had majesty, and sick though he was, he reared his proud head and tried to stand.

Christopher knelt before him. "What's bothering you, old fellow?"

Ann felt a lump come into her throat. The Baron wasn't just another dog; he wasn't merely a great stud and the head of Christopher Wain's kennels. The same relationship existed between him and his master as existed between her and Rowdy. It was a relationship that filled some gap that life hadn't filled.

"Call the vet, Hans," Christopher ordered. "And let's get him into the tack-room where it's warm."

The Baron couldn't make the the stalls, and Christopher picked distance down the alleyway behind up his two hundred pounds and carried him. He placed him on the couch.

"Didn't I hear you say something about Paul Freund being on his way here?" he asked Ann.

"Yes. His mother said he'd just left."

"Good! Freund knows more about dogs than any vet alive."

He busied himself lighting the stove while the Baron seemed to doze off into restless sleep.

"He's a pretty sick pup," Christopher vouchsafed shortly.

Ann made no repy. She was thinking the same thing. It occurred to her that she ought to be on her way—she'd promised to be ready to dine with Tom at seven-thirty—but somehow it didn't seem as if she could leave without knowing what was wrong. She glanced at her watch. There was time.

Paul Freund arrived before the veterinarian came. His round face fell when he seated himself beside the great body of the dog. The Baron's ears twitched. He opened his eyes for an instant and then closed them again.

"Have you any idea what it can be?" Christopher asked.

"Heart," said Paul briefly.

"That's what I was afraid of. Is there anything we can do?"

"Sure." His voice was falsely cheerul. The vet'll give him a shot of digitalis. That'll pull him out of it."

Christopher rose. "I'll tell Hans to get some down at the druggist's in case Dr. Perry hasn't any with him."

"That's a good idea," said Paul.

When they were alone, Ann said, "You don't really think the digitalis will help, do you?"

Paul shook his head. "I wouldn't want to tell Wain, though; he's nuts about this dog, and I'm afraid the poor devil's done for. I saw this happen twice in my life. It's tough."

"How long?" Ann's lips moved woodenly.

Paul shrugged. "Hours, days. No telling. No, I'd like to stay, but Carol's in the car. She enjoys the ride. I just came over to ask Wain if I could get the job of cropping the ears of his new litter but I can't bother him about it now."

"I didn't know you cropped ears."

"I don't. Except my own pups. But gosh, I got a family to feed now! And Carol's not been so hot since the baby was born. I'd like to get her away for a week or two. Atlantic City, maybe."

"I'm so sorry."

"Great set-up you got here," he digressed, and grinned a little. "Things have a funny way of working out, all right. You meet Wain and almost run him off my place, and then rent him your place. Well anyway, it's great having you two in my neck of the woods, raising Danes. Maybe we can go places!"

Ann wanted to tell him that he was on the wrong track, that she and Christopher Wain were two different and widely separated entities. But there was no time for explanations, for Christopher came back with the veterinarian in tow. After a time, Paul took his leave, and the veterinarian closed his black bag and went away too, leaving a flat envelope filled with heavy pink pills. He was a little man with a big head and horn-rimmed glasses, and ugly hands.

"I'll be around in the morning," he said.

Mrs. Johnson sent two trays to the tack-room—crisp broilers and rice and string beans. Christopher tried to tempt the Baron with some of the white meat but he turned his head away. Christopher didn't eat either—just coffee, strong and hot. "What's the matter? You ought to eat," he frowned at Ann.

"I ought to go home," Ann said, without moving. She thought vaguely of her appointment with Tom but it didn't seem to matter. Tom seemed far away. Everything seemed far away. She pulled her top-coat closer. The coat was warm but it didn't keep the chill out. She shivered and the pain in her chest drove through her body.

"It's too late for you to even think of driving back tonight," said Christopher firmly. "You sleep in your old room, and I'll use the guest cottage."

One part of her wanted to take violent issue with him, but another part of her—the feverish, aching part of her—relaxed against the luxury of having someone tell her what to do.

"Too bad you never saw the Baron in the ring," Christopher said after a long silence. "No judge ever put him down. But it wasn't only his show record; there was some other quality he had. I've seen snarling, mean dogs come up to him, and he'd scarcely lower his head to them, but their tails would drop between their legs and they'd slink away. He had a quality of spirit that dwarfed even his physical power."

He's talking as if the Baron were already gone, Ann thought. She shook herself a little dizzily The room was hot and made her head feel heavy.

"I wouldn't be alive today if it weren't for the Baron," Christopher's voice went on. "There was a stable on the Westchester place that caught fire. I was nearest at hand and I went in to get a horse out. A beam fell and knocked me unconscious. When I came to, I was in the paddock. The Baron had gone into that fire and pulled me out."

"I thought all animals were afraid of fire," Ann said.

"They are," said Christopher.

There was a stir on the couch. The Baron raised his head. The glow from the stove played across it like a halo. Slowly, he started to rise from the blankets which swathed him. Ann moved as if to stop him, but Christopher held her back. "Let him alone," he said in a low voice.

The Baron sprang from the couch and stood staring intently into the dark corner of the room. Ann followed his gaze, but saw nothing.

The Baron raised his head and barked, but it was such a bark as she had never heard; it was an explosion of deep bass sound, like the chalenge of a Norse hero meeting Wierd, the captain of his fate. And then he slumped and fell.

Ann looked up into Christopher's face. She could see his mouth work against the stricture of grief in his throat.

From the kennels a long low wail broke forth. Hans padded to the door in slippers and bathrobe. "What is it?" he cried. "All the dogs are barking and I thought I heard the Baron bark—"

"The Baron has gone on to wherever great hearts go." Christopher gently laid a hand on the man's shoulder. "See to him."

In the darkness of the passageway, Ann stumbled giddily. Christopher caught her. Her hands cupped her face. For an instant, she thought he was going to kiss her.

"Poor child!" he mumbled. "You've got a chill; you're burning with fever." She felt herself being swooped into his arms.

"Put me down! Where are you taking me?"

"Be quiet. Never mind where I'm taking you."

Freeing a hand, he pulled her coat closer about her. The wind was blowing, and it cut through her like a knife's edge. He quickened his pace. She saw that he was heading not for the car but for the house.

"I won't stay here!" she protested vehemently. "I'm going back to New York. If I'm going to be sick—"

"You're not going to be sick, you are sick. And you're being taken exactly where you belong."

Ann closed her eyes. It was hard to tell whether it was moments or hours later when she opened them; time had lost reality. She was on the bed in her own room. For an instant she thought she was alone, but he was still with her, kneeling before the hearth lighting the fire.

"Are you well enough to undress yourself?" he asked without turning.

She sat up, and swung her legs to the floor. "Look here, Mr. Christopher Wain, I've stood just about enough of your masculine efficiency."

"You're being obstinate," he told her brusquely. "Now please get under those covers. I'll give you ten minutes to do so. In the meantime, I'm going to 'phone the doctor, get some hot water bags, and call in Emma Jeeves."

She could hear him clumping about in the hall; then a hand reached through her door, and a pair of pajamas came sailing across the room to fall on the bed beside her.

Ann could hardly manage donning them. It took all the focussing of her will to lift her arms through the jacket sleeves. She was shivering with exhaustion by the time he returned.

"Couldn't find any hot water bags," Christopher explained, pretending not to notice that her teeth were chattering. He unburdened himsef of three corked bottles, and put a steaming drink on the table beside her. "These go down to your feet," he told her as he slipped the bottles under the covers. "And this goes inside of you." He held the glass to her lips.

Ann felt as if she were in a swing making great swoops out into nowhere. She clutched at his hand, and it clasped firmly about hers. A heavy blanket of oblivion seemed to be drawn over her, until nothing existed save the hand she held to; and then even that became indistinct, a sensation felt through numbed fingers.

The telephone blared, and Christopher hurried to answer it. He knew it was long-distance by the peculiar urgency and excitement that country operators manage, remarkably, to inject into the bell.

New York, Oct. 4 —(AP)— Distillery shares and a few specialties held the spotlight in today's stock market with gains ranging from fractions to around three points.

Hiram Walker paced the move in the liquors with a three-point jump. Moderate gains went to Distillers Corp., Schenely, National Distillers, Webster Eisenlohr, Texas Pacific Land Trust, Pepsi-Cola, and Oliver Farm.

Firmest of the key issues were Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler and Westinghouse. Allied Chemical moved up about 2 on small transactions. Union Pacific improved but other leading rails were sluggish. Except for the advance by Walkers and a gain of ¾ by Seagrams, Canadian issues were unchanged.

Bonds were steady and commodities higher.

DOG ACTS AS AIRCRAFT DETECTOR

New York, Oct. 4 —(AP)— Crewmen of a naval vessel docked here claim their ship might do without its aircraft detection equipment because their mascot, Black Beauty, barks a warning upon hearing plane motors long before they are audible to the human ear. The dog, a veteran of 27 convoy trips, has been awarded campaign ribbons and rated as "Airplane Detector, First Class."

Effort To Destroy Nijmegen Bridge Ends in Disaster

With the British 2nd Army, Holland, Oct. 4 — (CP Reuter) — The latest and most daring attempt to destroy the vital Nijmegen bridge by 12 suicidal German swimmer-divers has ended in disaster for the Germans.

The bridge had been unsuccessfully attacked by glide-bombs, ordinary bombs, shells, mortars and machine-gun fire. So German demolition specialists took to the river about two miles east of the bridge. In rubber suits, they swam downstream, pushing rafts loaded with explosives.

Under cover of darkness they reached the piers and placed explosives into the bridge. Then they swam on another eight miles.

All 12 reached a stretch of the bank which seemed to be free of British troops and clambered ashore. But the Tommies were there. Two Germans were killed and 10 taken prisoner.

The bridge remains intact.

NINE-MILE WEDGE DRIVEN IN HUN DEFENCES

Battle Through Formidable Line Pill-Box Defences

Antwerp-Turnhout Canal Crossed by Canadians

By JAMES M. LONG
(AP War Correspondent)

London, Oct. 3 —(AP)— U. S. 1st Army troops have broken through the Siegfried Line north of Aachen, capturing Ubach and threatening Aachen with complete encirclement.

London, Oct. 3 —(AP)— U. S. 1st Army infantry striking into the formidable Siegfried Line eight miles north of Aachen battled today through pill-box defences curtained with artillery and mortar fire, and Berlin declared the Americans had forged a wedge 11 miles wide and nine miles deep.

No Details of Gains.

Allied Supreme Headquarters gave no details of second-day gains in the assault that hit across the Wurm river and ripped a chunk of from three to five miles from the Westwall's staggered line.

It was disclosed today that Polish infantry and armor under 1st Canadian Army command have reached Dutch-Belgium border at least two places east and slightly north of Antwerp, in the area between the villages of Merxplas in Belgium and Baarle Nassau in Holland.

Meanwhile sizeable elements of Canadian infantry which crossed the Antwerp-Turnhout canal at St. Leonard have pushed west in the direction of the port city while at the same time Germans who have been holding out in the north-northeastern outskirts reported pulling out. They had drawn back from Merxem and were also withdrawing to the north.

Prisoner Toll Now 69,000.

With more than 7,000 prisoners taken at Calais, the Canadians now have taken a total of about 69,000, of whom 28,000 came out of three isolated ports—Le Havre, Boulogne and Calais.

To the north of the U. S. 1st Army wedge, Allied soldiers all along the Meuse river line applied supporting pressure to keep the enemy from shifting reserves.

British 2nd Army Forces drove eight miles from Deuze to Neijel and flung the Germans from Overloon, their last strong Holland pocket west of the Meuse 17 miles southeast of Nijmegen.

In Close Contact

All along that line and north along the Nijmegen-Arnhem corridor they were in close contact with strong German forces as the Nazis poured reserves across the Rhine to hold the Allied tide back from the vital Ruhr area.

On the western flank of the corridor, past 'S Hertogenbosch to the Dutch border north of Antwerp, no progress was reported.

The Germans' prepared line runs back as deep as three miles on the sector where American troops are attacking. Berlin asserted that "so far the Allies have nowhere pierced really deep into Germany."

American mobile artillery drummed out so heavily that in many places Germans fled their suicide pill-boxes and centred their defence in thicker-walled concrete field forts.

Spotty clouds scudded low over the battlefront, and there was no immediate indication whether Allied planes were able to continue Monday's pin-point smashing of enemy strongpoints.

Stop Counter Attack

Fifteen miles to the south of the Aachen combat zone, the Germans tried to divert strength from the assault by counter-attacking west from Hurtgen, but they were stopped.

A front dispatch said house-to-house fighting developed for the town of Ubach, two miles from the Dutch border, against Germans ordered to hold or be shot.

American infantry won half of the moated castle fortress at Rimberg, just inside the German border and blazed away at the enemy across the courtyard.

Far to the south in France, U.S. 3rd. Army infantry renewed an assault on Fort Driant, key Metz fortress on the west bank of the Moselle, after an all-night artillery barrage. Planes today bombed other forts in the Metz chain.

Chinese Protest Churchill's Use Of Term 'Lavish'

Chungking, Oct. 3 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill's recent use of the term "lavish" to describe American help to China drew an editorial protest in the Chinese press today.

Ta Kung Pao, China's most influential newspaper, said the world should realize that Britain and the United States were not entirely free from responsibility, at least morally, for China's military weakness, and that American lend-lease help to China amounted only to one or two per cent of the total given the allies.

For four years before the United States entered the war China fought single-handed, receiving only "rather limited" help from Russia, America and Britain, the newspaper said. Meanwhile she suffered great hardships through closure of the Burma Road and "Japanese air bombings with American-made bombs and American-supplied gasoline."

When both the United States and Britain became her allies she was entitled legitimately to ask assistance from them, the publication continued, adding that in the battle for Burma China sacrificed some 50,000 or 60,000 of her best troops, sustaining a loss much greater than that of Britain.

It added that the "Hitler first" strategy of the war left China to prosecute a war against Japan alone. Britain and America could not entirely be relieved of the responsibility now that China felt the military strain so heavily, Ta Kung Pao said.

JACKIE COOPER ACQUITTED

South Bend, Ind., Oct 3 (AP)—Jackie Cooper, 22, the former motion picture star, and three co-defendants were acquitted today by Juvenile Referee Albert L. Doyle of charges of contributing to the delinquency of two teen-aged South Bend girls.

Those accused with Cooper were George Bender, 24, of Sheffield, Ill.; Pauline Frederick, 19, of South Bend, and Olie Lowery, a waiter at a South Bend hotel.

The charges grew out of police investigation of a party at a South Bend hotel the night of last July 22.

The trial was held last week and Judge Doyle took the evidence under advisement during the weekend.

Cooper and Bender are naval training students at the University of Notre Dame.

NAZIS FLEEING REICH

New York, Oct. 3 — (AP) — In a broadcast from Moscow, a spokesman for the Soviet-sponsored Free German National Committee, said last night Nazi leaders were fleeing to Spain and South America by submarine on the pretext of "secret missions."

Jet-Plane Combat Tests Foreshadow Post-War Aviation Developments

By CHAS. CHAMBERLAIN
(A. P. Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 3 (AP) — Opportunities for exhaustive tests under combat conditions may well prepare the revolutionary jet-propelled plane for an immediate place in peacetime aviation, in the opinion of many air experts.

The Allies and Axis powers now have jet planes in operation. Before the war with Germany ends it is conceivable that great dogfights may take place between these propellorless ships, driven at incredible speeds.

British jet-planes already have been in action against the German flying bombs and have proved highly effective. There has been no official announcement, however, that the Allies have been using jet planes on escort duty with their heavy bombers.

Germany's use of the jet principle in the robot bombs and in some types of fighters now on combat service indicates her development of jet propulsion.

The first such engine produced in Britain was in 1937. The United States has been experimenting with jet planes for at least a year and now is reported ready for mass production of the comparatively simple engines.

Allied fighter and bomber pilots tell of encountering two types of German jet planes. They are meeting them in increasing numbers — in groups as large as 20 and 30.

There is a single-engined type described as almost all wing and resembling a huge bat. There also is a twin-engined fighter bomber reported being used to attack ground forces. It carries two 500-pound bombs. Both types have estimated level speeds of between 500 and 600 miles an hour, but are most noted for their amazing rate of climb.

The German craft so far have not been too successful against Allied bomber formations and fighters, but The Times of London warns that their "lack of success is due almost entirely to the German pilots' lack of experience in handling an aircraft which can travel at almost the speed of sound."

Polish Resistance Forces Give Up Struggle in Warsaw

ALLIED FORCES LANDED ON CRETE RADIO REPORT

No Details Given But Nazis Believed To Be in Hopeless Position

PORTS BLOCKADED

London, Oct. 3 — (CP) — Strong Allied forces have landed in the northwest part of Crete, the Morocco radio asserted today.

The brief announcement gave no details.

The German garrison at Crete, however, appeared in a "hopeless position in view of the Allied occupation earlier of the island of Kythera, between Crete and the mainland of Greece.

The Germans have been reported to be withdrawing their forces from islands ringing the southern tip of Greece, but there have been no indications that they had evacuated Crete — symbol of one of the Germans' greatest triumphs in this war.

Allied headquarters in Rome recently announced that Crete had been blockaded by Allied naval forces and reported continuing air attacks on Nazi installations on the island.

Unmolested in waters where many of her sister warships fought a losing battle with the German air force more than three years ago, the British cruiser Black Prince shelled the Maleme airdrome on Crete last Saturday night.

The shelling was intended to knock out the field from which big Junkers-52 transports have been evacuating Nazi personnel.

Despite bad weather, Balkan Air Force planes attacked Nazi troop concentrations, gun positions and shipping in the port of Zara on the Dalmatian coast. Allied headquarters remained silent, however, on the activity of Allied forces in the Adriatic, Albania and other Balkan areas.

A dispatch last night said British commandos landed unopposed on the island of Kythera the night of Sept. 15. A week before a garrison of 150 Germans had fled after destroying a wireless station they maintained there.

British and Canadian naval units carried the Commandos to the tiny island from Italy. Located 120 miles south of Athens and six miles from the southernmost tip of the Peleponnesus, it was the first Greek territory liberated by the British.

They were given a joyful welcome by the island's 9,000 inhabitants.

TRY TO BLOCK CANALS

Cairo, Oct. 3 — (CP-Reuters) — Reliable reports from inside Greece today said that the Germans are trying to block the Corinth Canal to make it unusable for the Allies.

The Corinth Canal cuts through the narrow isthmus linking the big Peloponnesus Peninsula to the Greek mainland near Athens.

51 Freights, 9 Barges Destroyed by R.A.F., All Mosquitos Return

London, Oct. 3 (CP).—More than 1,000 American heavy bombers with more than 700 escorting fighters attacked war industries and airfields today at the southern German cities of Nurnberg, Gaggenau and Giebelstadt.

Objectives included:

The Nurnberg tank works.

The Daimler-Benz truck factory at Gaggenau, 40 miles south of Karlsruhe.

A big German air force base at Giebelstadt, 53 miles west of Nurnberg.

The allied air offensive rolled on after R.A.F. Mosquitos last night carried out one of their best moonlight train-busting forays in Germany and Holland.

Besides shooting up 51 freight trains, nine barges and five motor transport the Mosquitos also ran a Nazi trawler ashore off the Dutch coast and bombed a small factory in western Germany. None of the fleet bombers was lost.

Other small forces of Mosquitos attacked Brunswick and Nazi air fields in western Germany, following up the daylight attack in which more than 2,500 allied planes roamed the sky over the Reich virtually unchallenged.

Most of the train-smashing was in the Ruhr valley, through which the bulk of supplies is fed to the German army at the front. Eight trains were caught on the main line between Emmerich and Gladbach, four north of Coblenz and seven near Osnabruch.

Ninth Air Force medium bombers and fighters, which staggered German defences along the Siegfried line yesterday as a curtain-raiser to the 1st Army drive near Aachen, continued their close-support activities today.

HARD FIGHTING TAKING PLACE IN MUDDY ITALY

British Attack on the Adriatic Sector Brought to Standstill

STRONG RESISTANCE

By NOLAND NORGAARD
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, Oct. 3 — (AP) — The British 8th Army's attack on the Adriatic sector was brought to a complete standstill by the flooded Fiumicino River behind which the Germans are strongly entrenched, it was announced today.

American infantry captured Monghidoro, an important road junction 18 miles due south of Bologna, as the Allied 5th Army plowed slowly northward yesterday through the Apennines in a drive still handicapped by a deep mud.

The Germans counter-attacked Americans on the dominant heights of Monte Battaglia and Monte Cahpella which command a road joining the important Bologna-Rimini highway at Imola, 11 miles away.

On the road to Imola itself enemy resistance remained strong. The farthest point of advance was Carseggio, roughly a mile behind the strongholds on the two peaks.

Nearing Main Highway

In addition to capturing Monghidoro, toward Bologna along highway 65 (the Florence-Bologna highway) 5th Army troops took Cedrechia, 3 miles west of the highway and 18½ miles south of Bologna.

On the Italian west coast the Brazilian Expeditionary Force which has been slugging steadily forward took Monte Nona.

Units moving north in the Serchio river valley have gained in the vicinity of Pian Della Rocca and Fornoli. On their immediate right, Negro troops of the American 92nd Infantry Division driving up the Pisa-Modena road reached a point 15 miles northwest of Pistoia.

Heavy rains and heavy traffic made many by-passes on the 5th Army front unusable, thus limiting advances in all sectors.

Await Receding Flood

While 5th Army assault forces were compelled to await the receding Fiumicino's flood, New Zealand anti-aircraft gunners on the Adriatic coast achieved one of the war's rarest victories by engaging a light German vessel and sinking it with three shots from a Bofors gun.

Gen. Alexander's headquarters announced that the total number of prisoners taken by the 8th Army in its current Adriatic offensive had risen to 9,300.

In the mountain sector British troops and one Indian division captured Monte Reggiano and the town of Borghi, both 11 miles west of Rimini near the Fiumcino river.

The return of bad weather cancelled air operations yesterday but the preceding night R.A.F. light bombers hit railyards and other targets in the Po Valley.

LEOPOLD CANAL BIG OBSTACLE IN CANADIANS' PATH

Strange Things Happening Inside the German Lines

MUST CLEAR ESTUARY

By ROSS MUNRO
(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the Canadians on the Leopold Canal, Belgium, Oct. 3 (CP Cable)—North of Ghent and along the Leopold Canal Canadian infantry and tanks are holding a front whose principal features are its mysteries and its paradoxes.

They have cooped up at least 5,000 Germans in a pocket south of the mouth of the Schelde, but the Leopold Canal bounding this pocket is a big obstacle in the Canadians' path. Now as they face the enemy across this waterway strange things are happening inside the German lines.

The Canadians have seen long streaks of flame shoot high in the air from positions behind the German front. It looks as if some projectile is being fired, but nothing but ordinary shells and mortars from normal weapons has fallen in the Canadian area.

Capt. A. M. James, of Brantford, Ont., said he saw six of these streaks of flame in two hours and said they "shot skywards like a meteor."

Nobody has figured out what this battleline phenomena is, although James said "there's a theory that they have something important located there at the mouth of the Schelde and possibly it is one reason they are resisting so strongly here."

Another good reason the Germans are hanging on to the mouth of the Schelde is that they want to deny the great port of Antwerp to the Allies as long as possible.

Until the estuary is cleared the port, which has the same capacity as Liverpool, is useless to the Allies.

Several raids have been carried out by Canadian infantry over the canal and two nights ago an Ontario unit got troops across and took 15 prisoners—the exact number requested—shot up German positions and withdrew at the cost of two casualties.

Men and women go around in the villages as if the fight were not on their doorstep. The Canadians have their guns parked in the gardens and there are bloody skirmishes in the fields when they catch German patrols on their side of the canal.

HUNS PULL OUT OF ANTWERP SALIENT IN FEAR OF TRAP

Abandon N. Suburb Town as Canadian Infantry Storms Through Outskirts

CANUCKS MAKE GAINS

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army, Oct. 3 (CP).—Faced with the threat of being trapped by the 1st Canadian Army, the Germans today were pulling out of their salient north of Antwerp, abandoning the port's northern suburb town of Merxem as Canadian infantry stormed through its outskirts.

According to civilian reports, the Germans also were withdrawing from areas farther north and may be falling back to a line running inside the Dutch frontier from Flushing Spit east to Tilburg, 15 miles north of Eindhoven.

Northeast of Antwerp good progress was being made by Canadian infantry who were widening their bridgehead over the Antwerp-Turnhout canal near St. Leonard. These troops swung west and southwest from their bridgehead and it was their threat to the flank of the enemy salient which forced the Germans to clear out of Merxem and move north over wooded, marshy dike-land.

Bridgehead Firmly Established.

The canal bridgehead now is firmly established and although the Germans have strong forces confronting the Canadian army on this sector gains are being made.

Polish forces in the Canadian army now can be identified as operating east of the Canadian bridgehead at St. Leonard. The Poles are on the Netherlands frontier north of Merxplas and are meeting strong opposition from good German infantry and gunners.

On the Leopold canal front, south of the Schelde, there was no change and this also was the situation at the channel port of Dunkerque, where the garrison is closely contained.

First Big Minelayer Launched by R.C.N.

A British Port, Oct. 3 — (CP) — The Royal Canadian Navy's first big ship built specifically for minelaying was launched recently after being christened H.M.C.S. Whitethroat by Lieut. Margaret MacKie of Victoria, B.C., unit officer for W.R.C.N.S. personnel in the United Kingdom.

Lieut. MacKie was accompanied by Wrens Lorna Green of Vancouver and Norma Moffatt of Caledonia, Ont.

When completed the new Canadian minelayer will be used for the laying and maintenance of mine fields off Canada and Newfoundland, and will replace an old trawler now being used in those waters.

Accomplishments of N.A. People Give Hope for New World Spirit

Montreal, Oct. 3 — (CP) — The accomplishments of the North American people in creating, rather not that we never misunderstood true brotherhood gives hope for a new world spirit, Ray Atherton, United States Ambassador to Canada, said today.

In an address prepared for delivery to a Montreal service (Rotary) Club, Mr. Atherton reviewed his travels across Canada during the past year and his contacts with the Canadian people.

"They (the Canadian people) have taught me to look into the future with greater courage than ever before, because, if there can be this great North American brotherhood can there not ultimately be a world brotherhood?" he said.

"The difficulties in the way are immense, let us grant that. But we in North America did not inherit our brotherhood perfect and full blown. We built it, piece by piece, slowly and surely over the long decades and centuries. Along the border between Canada and the United States were scattered ruins of forts.

"The glory of North America is not that we never misunderstand each other, not that we never built forts against one another, but that the common people of Canada and the United States have torn those forts down, stone by stone, with their own hands. Those forts will never rise again. That is the glory.

"The world is torn by misunderstandings, but so was North America once. What we have done the world can do. It will be long and hard, the path to brotherhood, but North America has won through to the end of it, and the world can follow."

63-Day Battle Ends When Nazis Overcome Patriots

Those Repudiating Surrender Trying to Escape to Red Lines

By ALEX. H. SINGLETON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 3 (AP) — Polish patriots gave up their 63-day battle to wrest battered and besieged Warsaw from the Germans last night, and an escaped Polish officer told Moscow newspapers that thousands of insurgents had crossed the Vistula to Russian lines, defying surrender orders.

"Warsaw is as greatly destroyed as Stalingrad," the officer was quoted as saying, "there is no longer any resistance in any part of Warsaw."

Polish army headquarters in London confirmed earlier Moscow and Berlin dispatches saying that Lt.-Gen. Tadeusz (Bor) Komorowski, new exiled Polish commander-in-chief, had given up the fight.

Terse Communique

A terse communique from Gen. Tadeusz (Bor) Komorowski, new Polish commander-in-chief, said:

"Warsaw has fallen."

This confirmed earlier reports from both Berlin and Moscow that fighting inside the capital has ended. Russian forces are in Praga, the industrial eastern suburb of Warsaw, separated from the main city by the broad and swift Vistula River.

Earlier, Polish sources in London insisted that only a "mercy truce" had been ordered to remove civilians from the city of 1,265,000.

A Polish military spokesman in London asserted that Gen. Tadeusz Komorowski, Poland's new commander-in-chief also known as Gen. Bor, was inside Warsaw with his troops "contrary to all other reports," and that he would resume the fight as soon as the evacuation was completed.

But, from Moscow, Associated Press War Correspondent Daniel De Luce wrote that an "official" Polish report—presumably from the Soviet-sponsored National Liberation Committee — had announced that Warsaw's resistance had collapsed.

Capitulation Arranged

That report said the capitulation had been arranged by Col. Monter, acting on behalf of Komorowski, and said those who repudiated the surrender were fighting to escape to the Soviet-held bank of the Vistula.

The confusion after two months of desperate street-by-street fighting was reflected by German radio reports which first announced that resistance had ceased and then later reported the fighting had been resumed.

While even Polish military men acknowledged the struggle in Warsaw could not continue much longer, the dispute between the London government and the Polish committee in Moscow over internal affairs increased in intensity.

War-Production Program for 1945 Not Yet Finalized

By JACK WILLIAMS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 3 (CP).—Final decision on Canada's 1945 war production program has not yet been reached, but informed sources consider reduction in some lines inevitable.

Presuming that the war in Europe continues until the end of this year, however, the overall production for the last quarter of 1944 will be only the barest shade below the third quarter, which means drastic cuts are not forthcoming immediately.

With more than 75 per cent of Canada's war output being made on order from other United Nation countries — and particularly the United Kingdom, the extent to which plants are to be kept busy on war materials next year is naturally dependent on the requirements of other nations.

Recent unofficial estimates have placed the extent of the approaching cut-back as high as 50 per cent but at the moment it appears at least possible that continuation of the war in Europe until some time next year may reduce that figure.

It is expected to be at least another two weeks before requirements on which 1945 schedules can be drafted will be known to Canadian authorities.

There now are between 725,000 and 750,000 Canadian workers engaged in direct or indirect war work. The number who would be released should a 50-percent cut be made would depend on the types of material in which reductions were made, but it is considered likely it would be approximately 300,000 and that they would be let out of war plants gradually over a 12-month period.

Meantime, labor demands of war industry continue high. Labor Minister Mitchell has called for 100,000 farm workers to take other essential jobs during the agricultural off-season. Most of them—about 60,000—will be needed for lumbering and wood cutting.

FIRE EXTINGUISHERS DUMPED IN HALLWAY

When employees at the Bank of Montreal here reported for duty this morning they were surprised to find the contents of three liquid fire extinguishers flooding the floor in the hallway leading to the apartments above the bank, where employees reside. City police were notified of the incident and the matter is under investigation.

The contents of the three liquid fire extinguishers had been emptied with abandon against the walls and floorof the bank hallway, causing extensive damage to the premises. Bank officials could see no sense of comedy in such wilful practice of the destruction of property.

MOTOR CAR COLLIDES WITH PARKED TRUCK

Damage resulted to the front end of a motor car, driven by James Mulvihill, Frankford, as the result of a collision with a parked truck on the fourth concession of Sidney Township Monday afternoon. James Rivers, Tweed, had parked his truck over the brow of a hill on the concession road in order to enquire as to directions. Suddenly Mr. Mulvihill's motor car broke over the hill and with the driver looking directly into a setting sun, he told police he did not see the parked truck before crashing into the rear of the Stationdry vehicle. Rotary Speaker Pictures Rise Of British Business

Eric Taylor Tells How His Firm Was Completely Wiped Out in 1940

MAKE FLYING SUITS

British business rising from the ashes of the 1940 Nazi blitzkrieg was graphically pictured by Mr. Eric Taylor, of Manchester, England, in an address to the Rotary Club here on Monday.

Associated in a business way with the Deacon Brothers, Ltd., of this city, Mr. Taylor has gained an international reputation since the war as a designer and producer of electrically equipped flying suits.

German incendiary bombs that ravaged England's business destroyed the Taylor factories at Manchester. All the company records were destroyed and the clerical staff had the unique job of trying to reconstruct them from memory. "Even the office boy did his bit in this respect."

British stoicism and coolheadedness was pictured by Mr. Taylor in a story of a Manchester bank manager calmly offering clients cigarettes in his office and asking "How much?" while a city was blazing outside.

Hardships Met.

In the cotton manufacturing business prior to the war his company had turned to the work of designing and providing equipment for out-of-the-way places, Mr. Taylor said. They had furnished equipment for Mount Everest expeditions while the Mollisons wore Taylor flying kits on their several flights.

Britain performed a miracle of organization out of the chaos of the first days of the war. British business rose from its ashes rubble-coated but going on to bigger and better production.

Hardships were created and met. Shortages of raw materials, tools, machines, engines, constituted obstacles that were overcome by a people who knew not the word "defeat."

Telephone calls were limited to six minutes. Houses and hotels were commandeered for governmental servants. Billeting fees were one guinea (about five dollars) per week. Supplies of stable industries were cut off. There was an acute shortage of cotton in the Old Land and Canadian supplies were required in their own country.

Acceptance of flying suit design sent twenty-four firms into production almost overnight. The suits were tested by picked crews of the Bomber Command. Production was maintained until the demand was met.

Blessing in Disguise.

The blitz actually was a blessing in disguise for British business. New and up-to-date ideas were used in the reconstruction periods. His own firm was aided by a government man and it started anew in an old warehouse. Even new pencils and rubbers were supplied to the one desk that marked the advent of the new era in the Taylor business.

An electrically equipped casualty bag designed in Canada and manufactured by the Taylor firm has been accepted by the United States, the speaker declared.

He was introduced by Rotarian Fred Deacon. Rotarian Bill Turner, who thanked the speaker, told the clubmen that Mr. Taylor had personally sold His Majesty the King a golf jacket, which is a story in itself.

The Rotary Club will journey to Plainfield on Oct. 13, President O. Pinkston announced, where a supper will be held. The greater majority of the club expressed their intention of attending.

Plans Are Laid For Salvage Drive Of Waste Paper

Truly cognizant of the fact that more and more waste paper is being utilized in the nation's war effort, the local paper salvage committee under the chairmanship of Alderman Clarence Clapp is preparing for a monster drive which will culminate on October 16th, when members of the three local service clubs will combine forces to assist in collection.

Full advance publicity will be given to the paper drive in order that city householders may have their waste paper ready for collection by service club members. The campaign will be advertised in the newspaper, folder publicity will be delivered at the householders' doors and movie trailers will be shown in all three local theatres in order that city residents may become truly paper-salvage conscious.

In preparation for the collection, representatives of the three local service clubs and the paper salvage committee will meet in the city hall on Friday evening when final plans will be made. City Engineer Mott has been asked to zone the city while between eight and ten o'clock on the evening of October 16th. approximately 18 to 20 trucks will make a complete canvass of the city for the collection of paper.

ernment as "criminals", declared that those responsible for the Warsaw uprising began it "without any co-ordination with the command of the Polish army or the Red Army, considered only their own selfish interests.

The official Russian communique meanwhile reported that no noteworthy action took place yesterday anywhere on the eastern front, but Berlin declared this morning that Red Army troops had landed on the island of Dago off the coast of Estonia.

The message from Gen. Komorowski, said a London Polish spokesman, gave no clue to the length of the truce, but said that fighting would be resumed "until the last man is killed."

Army Gathering Strength.

Moscow, Oct. 3 (AP).—The Red army gathered strength like a coiling spring today from the Balkans to the Baltic for new onslaughts which the Russians expect will force Hungary to capitulate and bring about the capture of Riga, the Latvian capital and seaport.

Premier Stalin's supreme command for the first time since the summer offensive opened June 23 said all the eastern front was in a temporary lull yesterday. Soviet press dispatches, however, told of the Germans being squeezed "into the last square kilometres" of the Riga sector. Buildings in the city of 393,000 were declared mined. The dispatches said the harbor was crowded with Russians and Latvians being deported to Germany for forced labor.

Live In Cellars.

But there was no tendency on the part of the London Poles to lighten this dark hour for their country with optimism that the tiny force inside the city can hold on for more than a few days.

As Polish military headquarters pictured the situation, the people of long-suffering Warsaw have been living in cellars, beneath piles of rubble, while the battle roared around the centre of the city.

There, in Warsaw's concentration of office and government buildings, stand the remnants of the resistance forces, probably not more than three divisions at most, they said.

Polish headquarters have acknowledged that resistance in Zoliborz, northern section of the city, ended yesterday while fighting in Mokotow, in the southern area, ceased on Friday.

10,000 Partisans.

Remnants of the division in these sectors pulled back to join the division in the centre. The size of the underground division was estimated originally by the Poles at 10,000.

Conditions necessitating evacuation of the civilian population—in normal times approximately 1,250,000—were described as desperate, with starvation a reality and dysentery, typhoid and scarlet fever sweeping the city.

Meanwhile Polish headquarters refused to disclose the location of Gen. Kimorowski beyond saying that he is in "the battle area".

A dispatch last night from Bari, Italy, said Marshal Tito's headquarters had announced that units of the Yugoslav 14th Partisan Corps teamed with Russian troops in a converging drive on Belgrade.

The combined forces were said to be fighting on the approaches to the German stronghold of Donji Milanovac, Danube river village 80 miles southeast of the Yugoslav capital. Other Partisan units were reported battling German and puppet troops within 18 miles of Belgrade on the south and 55 miles on the southwest.

Napanee Farmer Held on Charge Of Extortion

Held on a charge of extortion, Chauncey Oliver, 27-year-old Napanee farmer, was lodged in the Napanee jail Monday and held without bail. Police officials alleged Oliver sent threatening notes to Geo. J. Tustin, M. P., for Prince Edward-Lennox, demanding sums amounting to over $5,000. Chief Thos. Moore, of Napanee, revealed today. Mr. Tustin had first received extortion notes as early as last March, but it was not until recently any particular attention was paid to the demands.

Provincial Police assisted in the arrest of Oliver when Constables Carruthers of District Headquarters in Belleville and Suggett of Kingston, recently placed a decoy parcel in a clump of bushes west of Napanee, where a recent threatening letter demanding $5,000 in cash suggested the parcel be left. Police say they later found Oliver wandering about in the vicinity of the decoy parcel and immediately placed him under arrest.

Yesterday Oliver appeared before Magistrate J. P. Garvin and was remanded in custody until Oct. 12. Inspector Harry Storey, of District No. 8 O.P.P., headquarters here, assisted Chief Moore of Napanee in the solving of the matter, that had been in the police hands for some weeks during which time the case was thoroughly studied before the decoy parcel was finally placed in the suggested area.

POLICE COURT

Convicted of driving a motor vehicle while his driver's licence was under suspension cost Solomon Loft, Tyendinaga Township, $28.00, including costs, when his name was called before Magistrate A. B. Collins, K.C., here today. Loft pleaded guilty and paid the fine prior to the opening of the court.

A Dear Drink

James Wright, Picton, pleaded guilty to a charge of being found in possession of liquor obtained illegally. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., pointed out to the court the fine ranged from one to five hundred dollars. His Worship assessed the convicted man $150 and costs which amounted to $168.50 in all.

Motorists Pay Fines

A number of inebriates paid the conventional ten and costs before the proceedings opened and therefore did not have to appear in person. The same applied to several motorists, who faced charges of violations of the city parking restrictions in downtinw areas. Here the usual $2.00 was collected as rapidly as the offenders reported to the police station.

Large Crowd Enjoys Many Fine Features of Picton Fair

Picton, Oct. 3 — Given a real break by the weatherman, Picton Fair, Friday and Saturday saw an even larger crowd than last year in attendance, exhibits that have seldom been excelled and almost double those at any fair in this district. At one time considered the best fair between Toronto and Ottawa, the general verdict was that the fair is rapidly regaining this distinction, despite the fact that entries, except horses, are limited to Prince Edward County.

Representatives of other district fairs attending were loud in their praise of the two-day show. A steady downpour of rain until late Thursday night almost dashed all hopes of success or of races being held though 32 horses were on the grounds. Six did not start but one class had nine and a second had seven starters, with thrilling finishes a feature.

The fair was officially opened by Group Captain C. J. Collingwood, D.F.C., C.O. of Picton R.A.F. Station, in the absence of Air Marshal W. A. Bishop, V.C., who was taken ill and unable to attend.

The entry of driving horses was a feature with fine drivers from Collingwood, West Lake, Bridgenorth, Warkworth and Picton, being shown before the grandstand. Teams in harness and ponies from Napanee also added to the track interest.

Success of the fair from every angle is reported by the hard-working little group of men who stage this big show. In addition to supervising all arrangements, every one of them is also an exhibitor.

Colerful Parade.

Taking part in the parade on Friday were airmen from Picton R.A.F., airmen and air women from Mountain View R.C.A.F., several teams in harness, and many hundreds of school children. The latter outdid themselves with their gay decorations and banners. The fine Trenton R.C.A.F. band provided music both days and both nights under Bandmaster Hancock, and were given much applause. Drum Major Sergeant Hart gave a demonstration of wielding the mace.

Scoring a hit were the ponies of Barry Hart of Napanee, the tiny one being driven and ridden by the five-year-old son.

Wins Silver Trophy.

A beautiful silver trophy, donated by Colin Wright, in memory of his mother, Mrs. Arthur Wright, was won by Perry Joplin of Bridgenorth, with a hackney, defeating the entry of Harry Pyne, West Lake, which won its class. Mr. C. Wright presented the cup, this being offered for the best light horse in harness in Ontario.

Mountain View R.C.A.F. provided a sound truck for announcements and Carter Bros. a public address system for the races, both being heard all over the grounds. Phil Dodds announced horse classes and also expressed the thanks of the Fair Board, to all who had co-operated, and for the Kinsmen Club for the support given them on purchase of score cards.

Saturday afternoon, a Great Dane and an English Bull, owned by E. Field, Picton, led by Dorothy and Doreen Nourse, were shown on the track as an added attraction.

Belgians were shown by Murney Ferguson who had an exceptionally fine team in harness, Dunam Foster, Eugene Rabbie and Robert Thompson. Keith Ferguson and E. Rabbie had Clydes; Art Wright and Son an outstanding percheron stallion; H. J. McFarland, percherons, which were also presented in a four-horse hitch; George Atkinson, Robert Stanton and Elmer Valleau, agricultural horses. Harry Faul a general purpose team; Clarence Hicks, G. Atkinson and E. Rabbie, agricultural horses. Spans of roadsters, as well as single drivers, were shown by H. Pyne, West Lake; J. A. Keith, Collingwood; Mr Reycraft, Warkworth; Perry Joplin, Bridgenorth; H. Trumpour, West Lake; Elmer Valleau, Picton. These did the half mile in fine style.

Wood Carving Attracts.

Perhaps the highlight of all exhibits in the Crystal Palace was the display of carving by William Loney, R. 7 Picton. Midway operators were of the opinion that $300 a week could be realized if it were specially exhibited, of the most delicate nature with intricate designs, this work, by one not specially trained, is little less than sensational. Different kinds of wood are used to secure color, no paint being used and many of the exhibits were made of several kinds of wood. Plants of wood in beautifully carved pots, groups of animals, and a circus scene, all complete to the last minute detail, were among those shown.

Special Collections.

A collection of war souvenirs by Willis Metcalfe, Black Creek, was also outstanding. Included was a collection of currency, a pistol taken from a German officer, a dozen ship models, ships in narrow-necked bottles made by Nazi prisoners at Fort Henry, badges and other valuable souvenirs.

Woodwork done by lathe, shown by E. J. Bateson, Picton, including lamp standards of different kinds of wood, tables, smoker's stand, was greatly admired.

The Royal Air Force had some exceptionally fine photographs and art work as well as model planes.

The oddity show brought out huge pumpkins, mangels, squash, 2-pound potatoes, odd-shaped vegetables, freaks in plants, 13-foot corn, 14-foot sun flowers, a dahlia plant 8 feet high, odd-shaped and large eggs.

Display War Work.

Displays of war work by patriotic organizations revealed the wonderful work county women are doing. The Red Cross under Mrs. McGibbon, had a large display. The I.O.D.E., Navy League, Legion Auxiliary, Salvation Army, each had grand displays of quilts, sewing, knitting, children's clothing.

Also in the Crystal Palace were the displays of fruit, vegetables, grain, plants, home cooking, canned goods, and ladies' work, which taxed all possible space. Seldom has there been such an array. There was an exceptionally big entry of quilts and bedspreads.

The St. John Ambulance Brigade occupied a booth and were prepared for all emergencies. Carter Bros. had a commercial display of roofings and livestock products.

The new poultry building was filled to capacity, with many breeds, the Rotary Chicken Club entries being a feature. There were 22 lots of New Hampshire cockerels and pullets shown by members.

Cattle Show

The Black and White show saw the county's finest Holsteins paraded into the ring. In addition, D. N. Foster had an entry of Jerseys.

Sheep classes were filled and competition very keen. The Eaton prize, a large silver tray, for best pen of five lambs, went to Ralph Dodds, Cherry Valley.

Appeals for Recruits

Saturday afternoon, Capt. Brooks of Headquarters, M.D.3, Kingston, appealed for recruits and for reserves to go active. His reference to the Hastings and Prince Edward regiment and their glorious exploits in Sicily and Italy, evoked prolonged applause.

The midway, with good rides, attracted the throngs, and only one game brought complaints, and this was closed.

Coffee and sandwiches were sold by Cherry Valley Blue Bird class and doughnuts and coffee by the Salvation Army and both did good business.

School Work

The display of work by County schools was featured by fine woodwork of many kinds, collections, craft work, art, sewing and knitting, all of which would have done well in open competition.

Bancroft Trucker Held in Custody In Car Accident

Extensive investigations following an alleged hit-and-run motor accident at the intersection of Victoria Ave., and Pinnacle Street on the evening of Sept. 23rd last, resulted in the arrest of John J. Moxam, Bancroft trucker, Monday evening.

Today Moxam appeared before Magistrate A. B. Collins K.C., charged with failing to stop after being in collision with a motor bike and also on a second count of dangerous driving. Police Inspector J. C. Hayes asked the court for a week's enlargement and also that Moxam be remanded in custody. Magistrate Collins suggested to the accused man he consult a lawyer before appearing next week.

Moxam was arrested in connection with an accident in which Murray McIntosh, 175 John Street, sustained serious face and arm abrasions and lacerations, when knocked from a motorcycle driven by Thos. Donnan, 51 Hillcrest Ave. Police allege Moxam's truck collided with a motorcycle, ridden by Donnan and McIntosh, at the Victoria Avenue-Pinnacle Street intersection during which time considerable damage resulted to the bike and extensive injuries to McIntosh, the pilion rider. Police also allege Moxam drove away without identifying himself.

For obvious reasons Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan declined to prosecute the case.

Arthur Duncan Gives Entertaining Talk to Kinsmen

Digressing from the customary serious note ordinarily predominating throughout the address of the guest speaker at service club luncheons, the theme at the regular bi-monthly Kinsmen luncheon meeting Monday evening took on a decided lighter vein with Mr. Arthur Duncan, editor of Batawa publications, figuratively rolling the members in the aisles with a fine turn of rollicking humor.

The popular Batawa entertainer struck a responsive chord among Kinsmen with his telling of typical stories which sparkled with traditional Irish, English and Scotch wit, while demonstrating his ability as an imitator he realistically impersonated principals of a Major Bowes program with their wide variety of talent. Then closing on a more serious note, Mr. Duncan proved himself a lover of philosophy as he recited several of Edgar Guest's poems.

Capt. Yanover Welcomed

Prior to a rather lengthy business agenda a rousing welcome was tendered to Capt. J. N. Yanover upon his return to the club following his three years' absence while overseas. Six Kinsmen members are still overseas, it was stated by President Matt Currie.

Speaking briefly to the club members Kin Yanover told of the appreciation of the boys overseas for the cigarettes sent over through the Kinsmen Fag Fund. "You can't send too many cigarettes overseas," stated Kin. Yanover as he urged the club members to keep up their good work.

That the worth of the Kinsmen Fag Fund is appreciated by others than the boys overseas was indicated when a communication from the local Kiwanis Club was read, enclosed in which was a cheque for $150 to assist in the fund.

$3,400 Raised by Bingo

"Boiler" Lloyd as bingo chairman indicated the season's progress of this project, showing that a total of $3,400 had been realized to date with a season's objective of $4,000. Several of the club's teams have not yet completed their season's run and it was stated by the chairman that with any kind of luck the objective should be far surpassed.

Bob Best was chosen as committee chairman to arrange for the annual children's Christmas party, while plans for the Hallowe'en shell-out party and the forthcoming Milk for Britain tag day were also discussed. The guest entertained was introduced by Kin Art Peacock with Kin Keith Carroll expressing the club appreciation. Phil Huddleston was at the piano with Derby Jeffrey as song leader and Ernie Smith as sergeant at arms.

CONTINUES WORK IN PRESENT POSITION

In Monday's edition of the Ontario Intelligencer concerning the purchase of the Belleville Burial Company business by Mr. Jack Bush, it was stated that Max McGuire had been engaged as apprentice. This was an error as it has since been learned Mr. McGuire is continuing his present position with the Belleville Public Utilities.

Brock's monument on Queenston Heights, from an engraving by W. H. Bartlett in 1840, and now in the John Ross Robertson collection, Toronto Public Libraries. To the right is the Niagara River, now harnessed to Victory and to the glorious future of Canada Unlimited. The collections of houses are now the communities of Queenston and Lewiston.

"PUSH ON!"

"Here lie the earthly remains of a brave and virtuous hero, Major-General Sir Isaac Brock, commander of the British Forces, and President Administering the Government of Upper Canada, who fell when gloriously engaging the enemies of his country, at the head of the flank companies in the Town of Queenston, on the morning of the 13th of October, 1812, aged 42 years."

Thus reads the inscription on the monument at Queenston Heights, raised where died gallant Brock.

With his last breath he cried: "Push on, York Volunteers!"

And then, faintly: "My fall must not be noticed, nor impede my brave companions from advancing to victory."

* * *

"Push on!" Thus the saviour of his country foretold the story of Canada, a story of courageous men and women with faith in their country's future, who sacrificed time and talents, even their lives, to ensure that great future for their children in Canada Unlimited.

History repeats itself. That same faith in Canada is exemplified today by another generation of brave Canadian men and women who have gone to foreign lands to destroy tyranny and secure freedom.

We at home "push on" to Victory, proving our faith in Canada's future, when we buy and hold Victory Bonds.

Sir William Mulock

No citizen in the public life of Canada and Ontario had seen so much progress in the people of the nation and of the world as Sir William Mulock who witnessed the march of development for generations as he moved on to his great age of more than 101 years. With the calm wisdom born of his long years he could look back upon a life worthily spent, a career of service for the Dominion and this Province and for British institutions, the like of which few can ever hope to be privileged to enjoy and to give. Good health and an active interest in life were two assets which he possessed of the greatest importance to a man who had come to know public life as he did and who looked upon it as an avenue of service to his country. He was an honor to Canada and Ontario, to the courts of the land, and to the Canadian people. His death came quietly and peacefully as he lay asleep, a fitting close to so fully spent a life and a life so honored and revered by the people and now rounded with a sleep as he left the earthly scene.

Prime Minister King's tribute to this great Canadian praised him as one "who through his long and vigorous and active life was at all times the friend of the oppressed, a lover of liberty, a champion of freedom, one who held high the standards of right and truth and justice." Others lauded him as a model citizen giving devotedly of his interest and his life as one of the most useful in Canadian history. His career as a member of the House of Commons for twenty-three years was marked, for during that time he served as Postmaster General and was responsible for the adoption of penny postage and of the imperial cable. His first assistant in the Department of Labor which he organized was W. L. M. King, now Prime Minister of Canada. His post as Chief Justice of the Exchequer Division of the High Court of Justice in Ontario was followed by his appointment as Chief Justice of Ontario. In these capacities he was well known all over Ontario. His association with the University of Toronto and University College, Toronto, continued all through the years from the year 1859 when he entered as a student. He was Chancellor of the University at the time of his death.

The recent anniversary of his birthday called forth a wide tribute to the man who had always throughout his long life championed the true ideals of a democratic country, freedom, justice and opportunity for the development of the best. He was all through life one who participated actively in life and did not merely watch it from the sidelines. He saw life pass, he saw Canada develop and he helped Canada and the Empire on the road of development.

Sir William had spoken often in his latter years and his speeches showed he was a sage, one who had seen life and seen it whole, who had striven to improve human conditions and to develop his native land. His devotion to high British ideals stood out in his life and in every utterance of his. His keen interest in life, the product of his birthright, developed by his long years of knowledge of life was recently voiced in words of a kindly philosophy that marks one who loved his fellowmen above all. He had seen much of life and enjoyed it and was able to pass on to the oncoming generations words of great meaning. He revealed himself as a lover of many things, nature, the works of man and human lives. He said, "The shadows of memory lengthen about me, but morning is in my heart . . . I have had varied fields of labor and full contact with men and things. The rich spoils of memory are mine. Mine, too, are the precious things of today—books, flowers, pictures, nature and sport. The first of May is still an enchanted day for me. The best thing of all is friends. The best of my life is yet to come."

He had a unique life and a full life. And this life he owed in part to his heritage and also to his full use of the endowments which nature had bestowed upon him and found him ever grateful. He served mankind best because through the years he carried the high sense of life's true values and ever kept before himself the ideal of service.

Lessons of Dieppe

General McNaughton who had so much to do with the building up of the Canadian army expressed on Monday his opinion on the Canadian landing at Dieppe in August 1942 saying that he doubted whether any other military operation had a more profound influence on the future. No operation in the history of warfare had been studied, he said, with such meticulous care as Dieppe, military authorities drawing every possible lesson and advantage from the big coastal raid. In his opinion without those lessons succeeding combined operations would not have supplied the equipment necessary for the inter-service co-operation so essential to victory.

At the same time the General placed the solution to the prevention of future wars in the moral sphere and said he thought that the United Nations should not be vindictive in their treatment of the vanquished but kindness must not overwhelm good judgment. Finally he said "They must see to it that these nations are never again in the position to take us again by the throat."

The success of the landings which began in Sicily and which followed in Italy and included the great D-Day landing in Normandy on the most gigantic scale in history owes much to the Dieppe landing and the lessons which it gave in modern warfare. History will no doubt give the Battle of Dieppe place as one of the most significent in the results it provided for the study of combined operations in modern conflict. The great landings since August 1942 have borne great fruit, to many beyond expectations, from the standpoint of their speed, their small losses when the importance of the great invasion movements is taken into account.

The men of Dieppe served well the cause of liberation of the world from German thraldom. To those who went through that first encounter toward the freeing of many races and humanity from the iniquity of Nazism the world which moves on to victory owes a debt that cannot be measured and those who there fell or suffered earned the undying tribute of mankind for their sacrifice.

Inspired Paris Black Markets

(By Jack Tait, in New York Herald Tribune)

Hungry Paris paid a high price for living, in the last three years. The black market, usually located in the cafes and restaurants, found the people willing to pay almost any amount for food and luxuries. Here are some of the prices paid to the black market:

Eggs, 24 to 40 cents apiece; butter, $6 to $10 a pound; potatoes, about 30 cents a pound; bread, about 32 cents a pound; sugar, $1.20 to $2 a pound; canned milk, $2 to $4 a can; meat, from $4 to $4.50 a pound.

Stylish women's shoes cost from $40 to $100 a pair; French cigarettes, $3; American cigarettes, $5; Scotch whiskey, one large drink, $2; good silk stockings, $7 to $10 a pair.

Black markets were well stocked and those who had the money could buy most anything there, except fresh milk. The markets themselves were begun by the Germans eager for money to spend in Paris. The Nazis requisitioned food from the rural areas and brought it to the city where they sold it to the black markets.

Despite the comparative abundance of food in the black markets, Parisians almost starved because they could not pay the prices. The minimum war wage of the average worker was about $40 a month and the maximum about $90.

Butter was one of the commodities the Parisians missed the most. The ration amounted to about one-quarter of a pound a month. It was not so bad before the Germans in the last year began manufacturing grease for their motor transports from a butter base. Meat was available in rations in amounts of about one-quarter of a pound a week.

Parisians obtained on rations a pound of potatoes every two or three months.

Patriots had clung to the prospect of the liberation of Paris because they believed it meant more food. It is difficult to imagine how greedily they devoured the U. S. Army C rations, those that have been lucky enough to obtain a few since the Allies arrived. Canned meat and beans and hash is a delicacy to them.

PREJUDICE

There was a little drowning lad
  Whose final scream had caught an ear,
A passer-by in denim clad,
  And one he had been taught to fear.

The skin of him was ebon-hued,
  But brave was he and muscled strong.
Henceforth a mother's gratitude
  To him forever will belong.

God's will? Who knows why men accept
  The risk when others aid implore?
Into the stream the dark man leapt
  And brought the white boy safe to shore.

That evening kneeling by his bed
  When he finished with his prayer
"Mama, the man was black!" he said,
  [illegible] know and do you care?"

NUGGETS OF KNOWLEDGE

South Carolina is the only state in the Union that does not provide a secret ballot in general elections.

The Talmud quotes Rabbi Jose as saying: "I need never look around when speaking of another to see whether he is present, as I never say anything in a man's absence that I would not have said in his presence."

The question is often asked, "What was the good news referred to in Robert Browning's poem entitled "How They Brought the Good News From Ghent to Aix"?

The poet had no particular news or incident in mind when he wrote the poem. On January 23, 1882, Browning published the following letter on the subject in an English newspaper called the "Oracle": "There is no sort of historical foundation for the poem about 'Good News From Ghent to Aix'; I wrote it under the bulwark of a vessel off the African coast, after I had been at sea long enough to appreciate even the fancy gallop on the back of a certain good horse York, then in my stable at home. It was written in pencil on the flyleaf of Bartolio's Simbolid, I remember."

On May 13, 1827, Former President John Quincy Adams wrote in his diary:

"My own career is closed. My hopes, such as are left me, are centered upon my children. The capacity to write fails me from day to day. My duties are to prepare for the end with a grateful heart and unwavering mind."

Twenty years later Adams was a member of the House of Representatives and was carrying on an active crusade against slavery.

Apparently there isn't much to the native son idea when it comes to getting votes. In 1860 Abraham Lincoln, a native of Kentucky, received fewer than 1,000 votes in that state for the presidency.

The father of Madam Chiang Kai-Shek made a fortune publishing and selling Bibles.

Scientists say it is physically possible for two persons to be twins and yet only half brothers or sisters.

Finnish Forces Closing in On Kemi Stronghold

Oulu, Finland, Oct. 3 —(AP)— Finnish troops closed in from two directions on the German stronghold at Kemi at the head of the Gulf of Bothnia today as the Germans retreated along a front of approximately 120 miles in northern Finland.

The drive on Kemi came from Tornio (Tornea), captured by Finnish troops in a surprise landing from the Gulf of Bothnia Saturday, and from Kuivaniemi, which Finnish Arctic units have just reached.

Kemi is 20 miles southeast of Tornio on the Swedish border and approximately the same distance northwest of Kuivaniemi. The capture of Tornio trapped German elements on both sides of the Kemi river.

(Swedish newspaper reports said German troops were fleeing north of Tornio after Finnish troops had captured the enemy garrison in the town. One account estimated that 2,000 Germans were routed by the Finns there.)

German troops, for the most part, appeared to be hurrying to keep out of the way of the Finns.

Coincident with the arrival of correspondents at Oulu, Russian Maj.-Gen. Tokarev and several other officers, all members of the Armistice Control Mission, set up a branch here.

Tokarev formally met the Finnish commander-in-chief yesterday and received Finnish maps and other plans of operations against against the Germans at Kemi and Rovaniemi.

Gunners Help Bomber Pilot Avoid Combat

With the R.C.A.F. Bomber Group in England, Oct. 3 —(CP)— The general impression of an air gunner in a bomber turret as a deadeye dick who spends his time looking for enemy fighters so that he can shoot them down, is about 100 percent wrong, according to "Clarkie."

"Clarkie," Sqdn.-Ldr. John F. Clark, D.F.C., of London, Ont., is number one man in the air gunner business in the Canadian Bomber Group. The lads who aim the turrets in the Canadian Halifaxes and Lancasters look to him for training, instruction and direction and what "Clarkie" says about gunnery is as close to the gospel as they will ever get.

As group gunnery leader, he draws from a solid basis of experience to coach the hundreds of gunners who come under his direction. He was an original member of the first Canadian bomber squadron to be formed and during 45 missions over enemy territory has seen most of Germany's cities reeling under the blows of Bomber Command from the rear turret in Wellingtons, Halifaxes and Lancasters. He's had 10 trips to Berlin.

In the conflict between bombers and night fighters, the 34-year-old gunnery ace figures that the bomber's role is largely defensive.

Not Offensive Weapon.

"Its job it to get to the target, drop its load and get back safely to base. It is not an offensive weapon where fighters are concerned, and never was intended to be one. The good gunner is one who can go through a tour and fire his guns only in an emergency. When his kite is attacked by a fighter, his job is to take control of the aircraft in directing evasive action."

"Clarkie" figures that gunners don't get sufficient kudos for the part they play in helping their skippers avoid combat. When his aircraft is attacked, the pilot must depend upon the instructions which come to him over the intercom from the gunners whose eyes he must depend on, and whose coolness and keen judgment in anticipating fighter manoeuvres is vital in saving the heavy and relatively difficult - to - manoeuvre bomber.

Canadians make good gunners, he says, possibly the best in the world for night operations. "They seem to have better eyesight and better night vision," is the way he sums it up. "In Canada, many people live in the country or in small rural communities which are not brightly lighted. They train themselves to see in the dark."

THE DANGEROUS AGE

Asking for the pamphlet on the Menopause (mailed on request if you inclose stamped envelope bearing your address—do not send a clipping, but ask for what you want) Mrs. H. M. expresses a misapprehension which is far too prevalent and, I fear, causes too much groundless fear or worry and also too much procrastination in getting proper medical advice.

"My sister," says this correspondent, (well, let us say her sister suffered a disaster such as you or I or any one may suffer, regardless of age, sex or present state of health) "during the menopause, and another sister is in a state hospital because of mental derangement following" (never mind just what major operation for just what condition) "during the menopause. Yet you say this period is not one of crisis and danger!"

That period, ma'am, is just as dangerous as any other period or epoch of life or nearly as dangerous and critical as, say, infancy, youth, middle age or old age. All I say is that it is not more dangerous for a woman to be alive at the age of 45 to 55 than it is at the age of 30 to 40 or at the age of 60 to 70.

That tragedy came to your sister when he was around 50. Mental illness to another sister of that age is no more significant so far as cessation of menstruation is concerned than such misfortune or illness is at the age of 20, 40 or 60 years.

I do not mean to imply that women suffer no disturbance of health or comfort attributable to the menopause. A good many women unquestionably experience distress from the hot fashes that often, not aways, occur for a year or more during the menopause. On the other hand, good many women never experience any trouble at all throughout the "change of life".

Normally a woman should suffer no particular trouble when she reaches the menopause. Just cessation of menstruation in the course of a year or less.

My advice to any woman, married or unmarried, who does develop any impairment of health or any disturbance of "nerves" or mind, is this: Never mind what the well meaning but ignorant (health-ignorant, physiology-ignorant) older women may say, but disregard your sex and age and take your complaint to your doctor. It is in fact nobody's business but yours and your doctor's.

Australian Letter

By J. E. HOLDSWORTH
Canadian Press Correspondent

Sydney, Australia, Oct. 3 — (CP Cable) — Final figures for August's referendum on the question whether the Commonwealth government should be accorded increased powers to deal with post-war problems have just been announced. Totals were: No, 2,305,418; Yes, 1,963,400.

The total vote was made up of 2,110,270 civilians voting no and 1,744,948 voting yes. The "yes" vote of the services was 218,452 with 195,148 voting "No." Commentators throughout the Dominion suggested that the small "yes" majority was due chiefly to a belief that the additional powers sought by the Federal government would aid their rehabilitation and repatriation.

Prime Minister Curtin, commenting upon suggestions made that many American servicemen now serving in Australia might like to remain as settlers after the war, said. "I shall be glad to welcome these desirable immigrants. Everything will be done to facilitate their settlement. The government is similarly hopeful that many British servicemen in this theatre will also seek to remain here."

A Labor member from a New South Wales constituency, speaking in the House of Representatives, struck a new Labor note when he declared that Australian trade unions must revise their former attitude to immigration. He advocated an immediate overhaul of Australia's immigration policy and appointment of a director of immigration. He said that in the past there was justification for the trade unions' view that bringing in of migrants would cause unemployment and reduce wages.

He asserted that in the past, immigration had been badly handled and referred to the fact that a commission in 1933 found immigrants had been brought here under false pretences and compensation had been paid. "Australia then received such bad advertisement," he said, "that millions spent now could hardly repair the damage. We should make every newcomer welcome."

Prime Minister Curtin recently told a delegation seeking representation for people living in the Canberra capital city area (who at present are voteless) that he thought the House of Representatives should have more than its present 75 members. Australia's Federal parliament of 75 representatives and 36 Senators is one of the smallest national parliaments in the Empire and Mr. Curtin said that in his view "It is dangerous for good government when policy is decided by too few representatives of the people."

Commentators here pointed out that the population has doubled since the Commonwealth came into being in 1901 and the functions of the government have expanded to an extent never contemplated by those who framed the constitution.

The Morning Herald, supporting the idea of a larger Federal Parliament, said: "With the war still to be won, Australia finds herself in a world already committed to economic and social planning both on an international and national scale. The need and scope for a parliamentary government strong and capable enough to shoulder the responsibilities facing the country have become self-evident.

MRS. F. ANDERSON NAMED PRESIDENT FOR 17TH YEAR

Annual Meeting of St. Michael's Benevolent Society is Held

REVIEW OF YEAR

At the annual meeting of the St. Michael's Benevolent Society on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. S. Anderson, John St., Mrs. Anderson was elected to its presidency for the seventeenth consecutive year. The assemblage was very pleased to hear that the year had been a highly successful one for the society with a good membership recorded. The organization should be commended for its unstinting contribution toward the welfare of the community life. Its purposes are directed towards supplying milk for the undernourished children of the school, to dress the children for Confirmation and First Communion, to look after the supplies for the needy and to pack hampers for the poor families at Christmas.

The meeting opened with the president Mrs. Anderson, in the chair. In her report, she expressed her thanks and appreciation to Monsignor J. F. Nicholson, to the officers and members of the society and to all others who had strived diligently to promote the success of the organization.

Recording Secretary's Report

Mrs. J. A. Hudon giving the recording Secretary's report in the absence of Mrs. H. Barrett, stated that the monthly meetings were held throughout the year with the exception of the months of February and September. She continued in saying that very few cases of want or relief were reported during the year and it was found necessary to make only two or three visits to those in need. Milk was supplied to all under-nourished school children and seven children were outfitted for Confirmation. An appeal was made for food or money for the Christmas baskets and the response was sufficient to supply all those who needed assistance at that time. Ten baskets were sent, mostly to elderly people, and these were very much appreciated. A letter of thanks was received from the Children's Aid Society for the usual treat which was sent to the children at the receiving homes. In conclusion, the secretary expressed thanks to everyone who had assisted with the work of the Benevolent Society during the past year.

Mrs. F. Fitzpatrick as treasurer, reported a very substantial balance in the bank at the end of the year.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Hon. Pres., Mrs. L. P. Hughes; Hon. Sec., Mrs. J. Foltz; Pres. Mrs. F. S. Anderson; Vice Pres., Mrs. J. Fitzgerald; 2nd vice Pres., Mrs. J. A. Hudon; 3rd vice Pres., Mrs. J. Legault; Treas., Mrs. F. Fitzpatrick; Sec., Mrs. H. Barrett.

Councillors:—

Foster Ward, Mrs. R. Dunlop, Mrs. M. J. O'Callaghan; Samson Ward, Mrs. Frechette, Mrs. W. Frawley; Ketcheson Ward, Mrs. J. Legault, Mrs. R. A. Flynn, Mrs. T. Morrell; Baldwin Ward, Mrs. C. Funnell, Mrs. V. P. McIntyre, Mrs. J. Hudon; Bleecker Ward, Mrs. J. Fitzgerald, Mrs. G. E. Wilson; Coleman Ward, Mrs. E. A. Esbaugh, Mrs. J. J. Murphy, Mrs. F. Savage; Murney Ward, Mrs. W. B. Davidson, Miss Margaret Hayes.

Happy Reunion Of Former Class

A happy reunion took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Clare, fifth concession of Thurlow, recently, when members of a former Sunday School Class with their teacher Mrs. Wilfred Clare welcomed back to Canada one of the members of the class, L.A.C. Tom Rosser of Crescent-Grove, London, England.

At noon all sat down to the dinner table.

Many happy incidents were recalled from the past which caused much merriment and many snapshots were taken during the afternoon which will remind all present of the pleasant day spent together.

L.A.C. Tom Rosser came to Canada in July, 1929, living in the community three years. He then returned to England for a year to visit his father and sister. He came to Canada again for one year and then went back to England and remained there.

He served on the police force in London for a number of years, and thinking he was not doing his full patriotic duty he enlisted in the R.A.F. He is now finishing his navigator's course at Malton, Ont.

It was regretted that Mr. Willie Yorke could not be present owing to ill health. Several neighbors called in the afternoon. All wish for Tom the best of luck and "Happy Landings."

Good Taste in Clothes

Janet Blair is both beautiful and well dressed.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Do WOMEN dress to please the men? Certainly they do. They also dress to please themselves. If Daddy says that he doesn't like Mama's nutty hat she may show her devotion by sending it to the rummage sale. She has to love him a lot if she does that. Most wives would just let him rage, knowing that he will soon forget the matter and shut up. Of course, men's taste in dress vary. Some are qualified to pass judgment; others don't know fashions from a hole in the ground, in which event the smart woman realizes that she knows best and wears what she pleases.

The average man has conservative ideas concerning his wife's appearance. He wants her to look nice, never conspicuous. He does not take kindly to radical changes in fashion. Remember how badly he behaved when the bob stood the world on its ear? Men said that when they wanted women to grow long hair again, they would do it. They didn't. They loved being shorn lambs, they still do. Men hate red fingernails, and a lot of good that does them.

Men realise that no woman is smart or clever who pays no attention to how she looks. They appreciate the pleasurable excitement in the home when a new frock is worn. The wise husband will say he likes it, since that makes for peace and happiness in the family circle.

There's a magic sort of aura about a beautifully attired woman; even the dullest of the grouchy sex will sense it. It is often said that women pay too much attention to dress, but your good looks reporter doesn't believe it. If you cultivate good taste, decisions, when shopping, can be made quickly. Every woman whose brain clicks should educate herself along sartorial lines. She must appreciate colors, know what lines suit her figure.

It is a pleasurable moment when one breaks out in something new and gay; it boosts morale. wave!

Alberta Girl Now Paris Model Says the Nazis Are "Monsters"

By MARGARET ECKER
(CP War Correspondent)

Paris, Oct. 3 —(CP)— In the Hollywood setting of Paquins in the Rue de la Paix you'd hardly expect to find a young woman from Alberta.

Reflected in the mirror walls, against a background of black satin furniture and white satin drapes you'd hardly expect to hear the sordid little tale of a mannequin's behind-the-scenes life.

Tony de Cathelineau from Trochu, Alta., was pure gold for a reporter.

The lovely white dinner dress trimmed with jet sequins had come and gone, and we'd been told its price was 27,000 francs, ($540) and we'd admired several cheaper little numbers, pretty, bouffant dresses of gay prints, that we might have marked down to 9,000 francs ($180) since it was the end of the season.

Tony modelled a tight-waisted dress, very full of skirt in red striped linen, and the sleek Russian woman who was acting as commentator said, "Tony's Canadian, too."

So the next time she appeared in a luscious black coat, lined with white satin and made full in the back like a cape, we held up the show to ask her about herself. She'd left Trochu in 1936 she told us to travel with a dance team, chiefly to California.

In 1937 the team was stranded in Paris and Tony ended up as a model, and a lovely one she was with slim petite figure, eyes, large brown, luminous and a face made interesting with hollows.

In Concentration Camp.

Every time she appeared in another of Paquin's dazzling creations she gave us a bit more of the story. In December, 1940, she ended up in a concentration camp where she stayed for seven months.

"It was horrible, we had very little to eat and we slept on straw. It was so bad we all had colic most of the time. It was so cold we had to wear slacks, slacks with French Poilu's overcoats and boots.

"But we kept ourselves clean:—in freezing cold water, and we always made ourselves up. The German soldiers couldn't understand that. And when Christmas came we had a party, some sang, some acted, I danced. The Germans were completely baffled, they all came and watched us and they couldn't understand prisoners being gay. We had them beaten there."

When she was released and came back to Paris to her flat, she discovered the Germans had taken away her radio and her telephone.

"Don't think that I've been gay in Paris these last four years," said Tony in her accent that is still solidly Canadian.

And then she told us about her life as a mannequin. "I earn 5,000 francs a month," she said. "That wasn't bad in peacetime, but now . . . I nearly starved to death. I had to spend every cent for food. In the winter I bought coal for my stove. That cost me 3,000 francs ($60). I paid $7.50 for a pound of butter, $3 for a dozen of eggs, $2.50 for a package of cigarettes. Tea was 2,000 francs a pound—so I didn't see any. The people with money did all right. But then they always do.

Riches to Rags.

"Maybe you think my job is glamorous . . . well it isn't. How would you like to wear beautiful clothes all day, and go home at night, practically in rags because you couldn't buy anything, all your money was going for food and you were still hungry."

Tony was back again in a pink and white striped evening dress, beautifully moulded to her slim figure, with sweeping skirt. She looked very fragile, helpless. But she beat her two small fists together and said:

"Yes, there was a way out and many girls in Paris took it. We saw them in here with their German boy friends, buying clothes. They had money to eat." Tony practically spat.

"Me, I wouldn't do that if I starved to death. Germans are monsters, I couldn't bear to be near one. I had a friend, she was a model. Her father was a De Gaullist, but he hid away from the Gestapo. So they seized her and her brother. They burned her breasts with sulphuric acid, until she died at her brother's feet. But neither of them talked.

"Germans are complete sadists, they'll do anything to make people talk—to get their own way. I could tell you more stories—I never realized how people could suffer as they've suffered here in Paris. I wish I could make people in Canada understand, I wish I could make them know what hate is."

And so the fashion show was over, and Tony, stripped of her glamor clothes went back to her little flat somewhere, a great deal of her story untold.

Russians Prefer Their Own Girls

By EDDIE GILMORE
(Associated Press Writer)

Moscow, Oct. 3—(CP)—The girls the Red army left behind are taking some satisfied peeks in their mirrors these days. For the Red army has met the women of Bucharest, and doesn't think they measure up to the gals back home.

Pravda carried a first-hand account on this vital subject, and if you don't believe it's vital, you don't know Russian women—which of course, is a possibility.

The dispatch told of "women with artificially pale complexions, odd hair dresses and very dark, painted lips."

"You find them pretty?" one fighter asked another.

"Let them take a bath or be doused under a faucet, then we'll see," he replied gruffly.

The Red army is made up of boys from Leningrad and Moscow and also from the steppes of Kirghiz Kazakh, the hot sands of Uzbekstan, from the crab lands of Kamchatka and the Arctic wastes. This is the first time many of them have run up against foreign women.

The women they have encountered are not the run-of-the-mill Romanian women, but some the fighters encountered in cafes.

"We'll cross some more countries," warned writer Leonid Sobolev. "Many glittering trifles will blind your eyes, Red army fighters. Don't believe these deceptive symtoms of false civilization. Look into the heart of a country. Look into the soul of a people. Remember, you are the bearers of real culture."

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Oct. 3 — (AP) — Although there are five two-club cities in the major leagues, St. Louis is only the third to stage a world series entirely within its confines . . . This series also will be the first since 1922 to be played all in one ball park . . . New York had two like that before the Yankees moved into the Stadium, but back in 1906 Chicago's Cubs and White Sox were virtual strangers from opposite ends of town.

One-minute Sports Page

Heavyweight Lee Oma has a pet canary which he has trained to do all sorts of tricks. But you'd better not try to associate "canary" with any of the numerous fights Lee has lost . . . San Francisco is going in for amateur hockey this winter with the idea of losing money, if necessary, to get experience for big-time operation when a new rink is built there after the war . . .

The Atlantic City Country Club, which last spring set aside nine holes of its layout for the exclusive use of service men in that vicinity, now has established a $1,000 fund, which will be kept at that figure and used to buy prizes and stimulate interest in golf among convalescent wounded soldiers.

NEWARK BEARS NEED ONE GAME TO COP SERIES

Take Baltimore Orioles by Winning in the Eleventh Frame

SCORE IS 7-5

Newark, N.J., Oct. 3 — (CP) — Newark Bears are at home to Baltimore Orioles tonight in the sixth instalment of their best-of-seven series for the International League Governor's Cup, and one more victory will send the Bears into the Little World Series against Louisville Colonels of the American Association.

Newark took the fifth game in Baltimore last night, 7-5, when first-baseman Roy Zimmerman slammed a triple in the 11th inning driving in one run, and came home himself on a long fly.

The visitors had come from behind in the eighth when third-baseman Mike Portner belted a three-run homer to erase a 5-2 Baltimore lead.

Johnny Podgajny, who relieved Sam Lowry in the eighth, suffered the loss. Frank Hiller pitched the last five innings for Newark and got credit for the victory. Holcombe and Marletu had appeared on the mound earlier.

Felix Mackiewicz and Howie Moss hit home runs for the Birds.

If the Orioles tie the series again by winning tonight, final game will be played in Baltimore Wednesday night.

TACKLES WATSON

Considerable prestige hangs in the balance as the result of Wednesday night's meeting of Bill Watson and Ivan Rasputin at the Hume Arena. If the exponent of the famed Russian bear hug hold can prove that strength can prevail over science, then "the man that looks like an ape" can establish himself as the No. 1 contender for the world's heavyweight wrestling title. "If all I have to do is beat this Canadian Watson to wrestle for the title, well I'm as good as in right now," growled Rasputin after signing to meet Watson.

To support what Tunney calls his greatest bout of the year, Dr. Len Hall meets Pierre DeGlane and Johnny Gyroffy returns to battle Jim Burke, a newcomer from Buffalo.

CASUAL COMMENT

Be Thankful.

Jill had only been to school for a few days so she was still full of excitement.

"Mummy," she said, "one day, teacher asked me all about you and daddy, and if I had any brothers and sisters."

"That was nice of her. What did you say?"

"I said I was the only one."

"And what did she say to that?"

"Oh, just 'Thank Heaven!'"

Make Your Choice.

In a recent letter Frank Selke, Toronto Maple Leaf Garden general-manager, requested this department to solicit the opinion and co-operation of local sports followers in the naming of a local athletic idol or representative to attend the annual Maple Leaf opening hockey banquet at the Royal York Hotel one week from today noon. Annually the press of Ontario and a few staunch Toronto followers are invited to this post-season banquet, held prior to the conventional autumn training period. However, this year Belleville has been named among the spots to be honored and the invited sports personage named does not principally have to be hockey minded.

"It makes no difference whether the man played hockey, football, baseball, lacrosse or any other team sport, as long as he represents the good will of your community we will make him welcome," wrote Mr. Selke, who suggests a poll be taken through the medium of the sports columns of the provincial dailies. Mr. Selke also stressed the fact they desired representation from a sports celebrity of the respective areas whom the fans have taken to their hearts, regardless as to whether he played two or twenty years ago.

In order that the most popular chap be selected to represent Belleville at this unique banquet, where the Maple Leaf players will be feted and introduced to the guests, we would appreciate every sport follower in the district to participate in the nominating of a local representative. As the name of the selected party has to be in Mr. Selke's hands this week no delay can be experienced in getting your nomination to this desk. Remember, he must have been a person in the community athletic atmosphere of either today or the past. Here's the opportunity for some local athlete to enjoy a real outing where he will meet the present-day N.H.L. stars. Get your vote in early.

Remember When.

Reg Noble, veteran National Hockey League player, was given his unconditional release by the Montreal Maroons eleven years ago today after one season with the Red Shirts. During the 1932 campaign—his 16th year in professional hockey—Noble was also released by the Detroit Red Wings, the club he had joined in 1927. A. R. "Toots" Holway, Belleville's gift to the N.H.L., has every reason to remember Noble, who inflicted an ankle scar "Toots" still carries.

Everything to Lose.

"Whipper Billie" Watson, the pride of East York and Promoter Tunney's chief bread and butter winner, has everything to lose and little to gain if he beats Ivan Rasputin, the Russian exponent of the bear hug here tomorrow night. However, on the other hand Rasputin has everything to gain in beating Watson, as the Russian would establish himself as the No. 1 contender for the world's heavyweight title by beating Watson. It is a delicate situation Watson finds himself in, as Rasputin is no wrestler to trifle with, having established himself as a formidable man of brute strength and little ring scruples.

In the Pay-Dirt.

For the first time in the history of softball Belleville has placed two (count 'em) teams in the O.A.S.A. provincial finals—the SACO "Marines" in the Intermediate series and the Columbian Squires in the Junior ranks. If these two squads happen to be fortunate enough to bring home their respective slices off the O.A.S.A. bacon it would give Eastern Ontario three provincial softball titles, the Bata "Bombers" having already won the Intermediate "C" championship of the province.

Acting as mediator for the two local finalists, Vice President Harry Rollins was in communication with both Fort Erie, the Intermediate finalists, and Windsor, the Junior winners of the west. Fort Erie offered to pay the "Marines" expenses to the border town providing the "Marines" play in Fort Erie on Friday and Saturday. Max Peoples countered with the suggestion that would see the Marines play in Fort Erie on Friday with the return game here on Thanksgiving Day. As for the Junior finals the Squire kids are willing to go to Windsor and play the entire series, providing the Windsor management pays all expenses. It will all be ironed out before sundown tonight.

Cobb Says.

Recovered from a poison oak infection which he suffered at his summer home at Lake Tahoe, Idaho, Ty Cobb, former Detroit Tiger batting star, now is at Menlo Park, Calif. The infection prevented Cobb from taking part in the observance of Connie Mack's fiftieth anniversary as a major league manager at Philadelphia in August.

Ty recalls with satisfaction that he correctly forecast a good season for baseball. "I have said and always thought the charm in baseball comes from the competition and close scores, whether major, minor or semi-pro," he declares.

"Any 1 to 0 or 2 to 1 game, even by amateurs, is a good game to watch. That's what causes the public to come out. A return to the old ball would bring out all the different angles of the game—offense, defence, strategy and team play."

OTTAWA TROJANS MAY GET DUNLAP

Ottawa, Oct. 3 — (CP) — Frankie Dunlap, who played for Ottawa Combines in the Ontario Rugby Football Union last year, last night turned out with Ottawa Trojans and may play with them against Hamilton Wildcats in Hamilton Saturday.

Dunlap, a plunging backfielder, has been on call to the Navy and did not decide to turn out for football until yesterday. He is a brother of Jake Dunlap who has been doing some effective ball carrying for the Trojans this season.

Trojans defeated 6-1 by Hamilton here Saturday, ran through limbering up exercises in preparation for the return O.R.F.U. game with the Wildcats.

Coach Godie Perry said he would hold a heavy scrimmage session today and special drills on pass-defence.

UNEXPECTED GIFT

Philadelphia, Oct. 3 —(AP)— Zoo Curator Roger Conant believed "eye before you buy" was a good policy until he opened a long wooden box that arrived here with a $27.50 delivery charge due. Out rolled a crocodile which threshed loose the rope binding its jaws and tore a chunk of rationed leather from Conant's shoe before it could be subdued. The delivery fee was paid, however. Conant said the crocodile is an almost extinct Cuban specimen, sent by the Havana zoo.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 496

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Bridge bids are not determined by some sort of magic. Nor are they decided by brilliance in the midst of a game. Except by those who expect their partners to guess their meanings.

Each responding bid is a pre-arranged signal in answer to some particular question. That such signals are what instinctive players will often grasp speaks well for both.

An opening three bid (in a major suit) asks partner whether he has (1) an absolutely trickless hand, or (2) a hand with one trick or more but not two sure tricks, or (3) a hand with two sure tricks.

With a trickless hand, how does partner show it? Merely by a pass. Because a pass is the signal for saying that the partner has not a trick; therefore, no hope of help for a game.

With one trick or more, how does partner show it? Merely by an assist to four in the mentioned suit. Such a responder may have many tricks. But he denies having two sure tricks among them.

With a hand that contains at least two sure tricks, how does a partner show it? Merely by making any response other than a pass or an assist in the named suit.

When a responder has two sure tricks, there is a chance that a slam lurks in their pair. So, any response other than a pass or an assist in the named suit is a signal that a slam may be there.

Suppose your partner starts out with an opening bid of three hearts when you have this hand:

♠ A Q 5
♥ 9 6 4 2
♦ K J 9
♣ K 10 8

Your response with that hand is three no-trump. You do not say you want to play the hand in no-trump. The fact that you did not assist in hearts merely signals that you have two sure tricks.

Partner can then determine whether or not he should probe for small or grand slam. Lay the facts in your partner's lap.

St. Louis Cardinals Made 2-1 Favorites on Eve of Opening Of World Series on Wednesday

Nelson Potter of Browns and Mort Cooper of Cards Likely to be Hurlers

TICKETS SCARCE

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

St. Louis, Oct. 3 (AP)—Twenty-five hungry Browns who never cashed a World Series cheque and 22 Cardinals who've won three successive National League pennants today split this bulging city wide open on the eve of the first All-St. Louis World Series.

Street car operators, bell hops and bar-tenders chewed your ear with retakes of Chet Laabs' two pennant-winning homers and Sig Jakucki was boomed for "Mayor" but the boys who say it with cash made the National Leaguers 1-to-2 favorites for the four-of-seven series opening tomorrow at Sportsmans Park.

Rainy weather took away some of the enthusiasm yesterday as Billy Southworth and his boys came home for the first time since clinching the flag to be greeted only by their wives, children and ticket-hunting relatives. The town, however, buzzed with baseball talk and both clubs reported a complete sell-out of reserved seats. The Mayor issued a proclamation designating this as "baseball week".

At least 35,000 fans are expected to turn out for the opener tomorrow with the weatherman promising "fair and cooler."

Luke Sewell had his Brownies out for a short drill between rain drops yesterday and planning a lengthy dress rehearsal this morning with the National Leaguers taking the field in the afternoon.

Cooper Logical Choice.

Neither manager has named his first-game starter but Mort Cooper (22-7) appears to be the natural for the Cardinals. Nelson Potter is the likely Browns opener with his 19-7 record and his highly-trained screwball.

Consistently good pitching was the most important factor in the success of the Sewell crew all season and could be the turning point in this series which will be played on an every-day basis with the only off day between the sixth and seven games.

Southworth can call on Lefty Max Lanier, Harry Breecheen and Ted Wilks to back up Cooper, but Lanier is a doubtful factor because of recent arm trouble. He is said to be ready but only an actual start will give the answer.

Sewell Has Strong Staff.

Sewell can back up Potter with Jack Kramer, Denny Galehouse, Bob Muncrief and Jakucki although Muncrief is also on the sore-arm list. The Browns' staff is in good physical condition despite the grueling stretch drive.

The only ailing Cardinal is left fielder Danny Litwhiler who is bothered by a right knee injury. He told Southworth he was ready but it is possible the skipper might use rookie Augie Bergamo in left to give the club more left-handed hitting power against the American leaguers' right-handers. Sewell's only southpaws are Al Hollingsworth who hasn't started since July 27 and Sam Zoldak, who has never started a game.

Despite talk about St. Louis attendance (the Browns were last and the Cards fifth in the regular season in unofficial figures) tickets are so hard to get that spectators are reported to be asking $60 to $75 for a three-game strip and $30 for a single Wednesday.

Athletics Defeat Mimico Mountaineers in Sixth Game 4-2

MEET SALMONBELLIES

Toronto, Oct. 3 — (CP) — St. Catharines Athletics gained the Canadian lacrosse final bracket last night by beating Mimico Mountaineers 9-8 to win their Ontario title series by four games to two.

The Athletics and New Westminster Salmonbellies will open the series for the Mann Cup and the Dominion title at Maple Leaf Gardens here Saturday evening.

In taking the sixth game of the Ontario final at nearby Mimico last night the Athletics had to come from behind, Mimico leading by 7-4 at one stage of the third quarter. The Garden City club however fought back into the lead and held it to the close.

Both goalies, Bill Whittaker of St. Catharines and Ray Mortimer of Mimico, starred in last night's fast, clean contest which saw only seven penalties, all minor, handed out.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

After leading Detroit Tigers to within one game of the American League pennant, Steve O'Neill yesterday was signed to manage the team for a third year on a one-year contract, it was announced by general manager Jack Zeller. O'Neill succeeded Del Baker as pilot at the close of the 1942 season.

Manager Jack Adams of Detroit Red Wings in the National Hockey League is giving a try-out to Leroy MacDonald, star player last season with St. Francis Xavier College squad at Antigonish, N. S. MacDonald has already reported at Windsor, Ont.

Awaiting a call to the Royal Canadian Navy, Frankie Dunlap, backfielder, turned out last night with the Ottawa Trojans in the Ontario Rugby Football Union. He is a brother of Jake Dunlap, a member of the same team.

Lincolns of St. Catharines, last year's Ontario junior "B" champions, outclassed the Hard Oils 27-1, the return game Saturday of the final series to retain the honors this season. The Niagara district nine had won the first playoff encounter 32-0.

Hard pressed by Phonograph, Blue Boy of the Saunders Mills stable, Toledo, O., required four heats to capture yesterday's $3,000 Transylvania free-for-all trot in the Grand Circuit racing at Lexington, Ky. Prince Yakima accounted for the $1,000 pace in two straight heats.

The H. C. "touch" wood Memorial trophy, donated by W. L. Houck of Niagara Falls for presentation to the outstanding Niagara Peninsula athlete each year, was awarded yesterday to Vince Upper, third baseman-coach of the Port Colborne Victorias of the Niagara Senior Baseball League. The winner is selected by district sport writers.

Belleville, Ont. sport fans are agog over the fact two local teams have qualified for provincial finals in the Ontario Softball Association. The Belleville Marines meet Fort Erie in the intermediate "A" playoffs while Columbian Squires take on Windsor Mic Macs in the junior finals.

GRATTAN LEE PACES 2.10 MILE AT PICTON FAIR

Audrey Scott, Owned in Toronto, Wins Races on Successive Days

EXCELLENT TRACK

Picton, Oct. 3—Though no special attempt was made to lower the track record of 2.08 during Picton Fair races, Grattan Lee, owned and driven by H. Inglis of Brighton came within two seconds of doing so, when this horse won all three heats of the free-for-all. Closest competition was given by Miller Brook, owned by J. W. Shaver, Avonmere, C. Champion up, which was second in all heats.

Lady Harvester, Jack Waples, Victoria Harbour, was 3, 3, 3, and Iola Grattan, owned by D. E. McCool, Pembroke, with A. Switzer, driver, was 4, 4, 4. Times were 2.10, 2.14, 2.16.

All races on the two-day card were exceptionally good, with 27 horses entered. Nine started in the 2.24. The track Friday was a little heavy following the downpour the previous day, but on Saturday was almost ideal. The Picton track is some 60 feet over the mile and accounts for slower times registered here. Starter Jack Climie of Tillsonburg proved popular. Arthur Davis and Harold Herrington were the race committee.

Continuing her winning streak was Audrey Scott, owned by R. Scott, Toronto. In the 2.24 class, this mare beat Herb Payne's Mona Grattan by a length in the first heat and in the third was half a length in front of Patsy Guy in a driving finish. This class had nine starters and like the other races was run without any accidents.

Purses were $250 for each of the four races, entrance added.

Special prizes were $5 for winning driver in each heat and $10 for driver of the fastest heat in each race R. Scott took $45 of this when his Audrey Scott won all three heats of the 2.24 on Friday and came back Saturday to win two heats of the 2.29, with best time in both. H. Inglis collected $25, K. Waples $20, H. Stewart $5, Mr. Balloch $5. These specials were given by H. J. McFarland, $75, and Prince Edward Dairy, and were presented by M. Finnigan and E. Gerow for P E Dairy and Directors S. G. Lockyer and Phil Dodds for Mr. McFarland.

The grandstand was filled to capacity very quickly and the crowd flowed onto the edge of the track.

Score cards were sold by Picton Kinsmen Club to raise funds to send cigarettes overseas and nearly 2,000 were sold.

Race results:

2.24 Class—Purse $250.

NO THOUGHT OF DECREASE

Ottawa, Oct. 3 — (CP) — A Board spokesman said last night that the Prices Board has "no thoughts at the present time" of ordering restaurants to reduce the price of tea and coffee to five cents a cup. The Board's view is that circumstances existing when the increase was allowed still existed when rationing was lifted.

HOW TO COMBAT
Rheumatic Pains
Rheumatic pains are often caused by uric acid in the blood. This blood impurity should be extracted by the kidneys. If kidneys fail, and excess uric acid remains, it irritates the muscles and joints causing excruciating pains. Treat rheumatic pains by keeping your kidneys in good condition. Toronto, Oct. 3 — (CP)—It was probably inevitable, the way wartime hockey has been deteriorating in most parts, but it still comes as quite a shock, podner, to hear that some people would actually rather see the hockeyists shovelling grain than scooping the rubber around the ice with their customary rare abandon.

Old-timers, who have viewed the change from amateurism to the present-day model of more or less openly-paid sport will mutter in their beards and avow that nothing else could be expected under such circumstances. If the puck-chasers were going to take money for their endeavors, there would come a time by cracky when they would have to work for it, snort the greybeards.

Of course, it hasn't come to such a sad state yet, and probably we won't live to see such drastic measures really taken in our day, but that "shovel or git" order to youthful players in Port Arthur had the effect of a none too mild earth tremor.

The attitude of the grain controller there reportedly was that the husky young protegees of the St. Louis Flyers should be helping stow away the huge lots of grain at the lakehead, rather than dashing about the ice lanes, while our men were working at the elevators.

Labor shortage or no labor shortage, however, it seems that most of the boys had the sanction and blessing of selective service to study hockey ways, so the youngsters themselves can't be blamed. After all, hockey still is given more than passing recognition by the services and civilian authorities as a builder of that much talked about thing called morale.

But we have no doubt the hockey players will stick together mightily to prevent any such encroachment of their sovereign rights as would force them into digging and delving in the grain pits.

AMERICAN BRED

CHAPTER 12

Brenda laughed again, this time with less tinkle. "Ann? The dog's name." There were claws in her voice. "Or—?" She let it hang in mid-air.

This was the real Gestapo touch. Christopher felt himself become entangled in a helpless rage. Brenda was no longer his wife, but she possessed some secret power of vexing him; he could cope with her only to a certain point. "Oh, cut it, Brenda!" he implored. "I'm not in love with Mrs. Freund if that's what you're driving at."

Brenda's eyes opened wide. "Darling, I'm talking about the —Ann." She repeated it reflectively. "A rather undistinguished name for show purposes. Or aren't you going to show her? Just breeding, perhaps?"

"Both," said Christopher briefly "And her name's Gretel ,in case you'd like to know.

"Oh, I thought you said 'Ann'." Brenda smiled. "Sorry, my mistake. You know, Chris," she digressed, "if you cared less about dogs and more about other things, we might have made a success of our marriage."

"If you'd given me something to care more about than dogs, you might be right," he flung out impatiently. "Oh, let's not talk about it, what's the sense of raking up what's past and done with?"

"A lot of sense. Babies and a house full of dogs with the upholstery always full of hairs and slobber, could never really satisfy you, Chris."

"It'll come near it."

"All right, Sweet, we won't argue it. Let's be friends. Let's always be friends. There isn't anything I wouldn't do for you. Which reminds me—" she patted his hand. "You're so obvious, darling, the way you're on pins and needles to get away, but it'll only take a minute. What about the puppy sweepstakes?"

"Well, what about them? Yes, I do have to get away. I'm late for an appointment."

"What do you want to know about the sweepstakes?" he demanded. "Stick to one thing, can't you?"

"I am," she assured him. "Look Sweet, don't think that because you were generous enough to give me Crestview, I'm going to be mean and ball things up for you. What I mean to say is, the show has been held at Crestview for so many years ;it would be silly to change all the plans at this late date just because you've bought another place."

"I haven't bought, I've rented," he corrected her shortly.

"Well, bought or rented, what's the difference? I mean to say, Johnson told me you're nowhere near settled over there yet. And so I thought it would be nice if the sweepstakes went on at Crestview just the same."

"It would be a help," he admitted, "what with all the announcements out on it. Sure it won't be an awful bore for you?"

"Not a bit. I'd love it. I'll manage everything for you, and it will be the season's social event."

"Look here, it's a dog show, not a society function," he demurred.

"With clever management it can both. Why does the Morris and Essex show draw such a huge crowd? I'll tell you why. Because it's civilized—canopies, and buffet lunch and all the rest of it."

"Including four thousand of the country's finest dogs," he supplemented dryly.

"If you think the buffet-lunch doesn't help, you're mistaken," she retorted. "Shows that aren't managed properly don't draw as much as shows that are."

He looked at her with a puzzled and not too trustful frown. "How come you're up on all this dog business all at once?

"I'm interested."

"You neved used to be. You weren't even at the sweepstakes last year, although they were held on your own place."

"But I was away, don't you remember? And the year before that—"

"Spare the details," he cut in. "You always had a perfectly good alibi to be absent from the scene, even though you knew it meant a lot to me."

"I was a fool," she confessed humbly. "In the first place, I didn't realize how much fun a dog show could be. I suppose it's a taste you acquire, like olives. And when you know the dogs personally, it must be simply too exciting. I mean, I can perfectly well see how I shall be on pins and needles when your new dane goes in the ring — Ah, Christopher," she broke off, wheedling, "do let the show go on at Crestview just as always. It would be so stupid to change. And when I tell you that it won't be a bore and I shall simply adore it, you can believe me ."

"Well, if you really don't mind—" He paused, uncertain, and eyed her reflectively.

She laughed. "What's the matter, a smudge on my cheek?" She whipped out her handkerchief and compact.

"It's not your cheek," he said. He hesitated. "All right, Brenda, go ahead. And thanks a lot. It'll save quite a bit of changing about."

"I won't even be there if you'd rather not," she offered , a little wistfully.

"That's nonsense. Of course be there, if it'll amuse you. Why not?"

As he said good-bye to her a short while later, she looked up at him. "I almost thought you'd kiss me. But I suppose it wouldn't be right under the circumstances."

His lips set. "Hardly," he told her with finality.

He watched her car go down the street. "This is no big sister act," he mumbled. "I wonder what she's up to?" It wasn't until he was getting into his own car that it occurred to him that she hadn't even mentioned Hemingway's death.

An hour and fifty minutes later, seven minutes less than he'd ever made it before, he nosed his car into the drive at Myles. Johnson was at his side as he swung to the ground.

"She's still here," he announced triumphantly.

"Good. What's she been doing?"

Johnson grinned. "What ain't she been doing? She's been in and out of everything. There wasn't anything she didn't want to know about, and when I was slow in answering she reminded me that she owned the place. She sure seems sore about something — Here she comes now. By golly, if she ain't been over the meadows!"

Christopher walked across the lawn toward the paddock gate to meet her halfway. Rowdy raced forward to investigate a stranger and then recognized a friend. She come, while a frown gathered on cavorted and barked in joyous wel-Ann Rivers' brow. He grinned, knowing that there was nothing so irritating as one's dog's enthusiasm for someone else.

"Here, Rowdy! Come back here!" The command brought the dog to her side, but Rowdy kept looking back at Christopher as if to say, What's the idea? the last time the three of us were together we had lots of fun, fights and everything.

Christopher laughed. "I feel as if I ought to apologize because the pup likes me. There's nothing you can do about it, really." He held out his hand. "How are you, anyway? I was beginning to despair of ever finding you again."

She ignored the outstretched hand. "That makes us even, because I've been in despair ever since I arrived."

"Despair about what? Isn't everything all right?"

"It's too all right, which is another way of saying that it's all wrong. That's why I waited. We've got to settle things."

"Well, let's go in the house where we can talk comfortably," he suggested. "You look as if you could stand a cup of hot tea or something—"

"I don't want a cup of hot tea or something, and if I look that way, it would be more tactful of you if you didn't mention it. Besides what I've got to say can be said right here. But first, I have a few apologies to make before I get really mad."

"You? What have you got to apologize about?"

"I don't like snoopers, and I was a snooper," she informed him bluntly.

THE BUDGETEERS INVITE YOU TO BUDGET YOUR SPENDING FOR VICTORY

Here's a new budget plan to help you—Send for a free copy of the Budget Calendar

YOU can make your wartime dollars do more for your family and for your country if you budget your spending, believe the Budgeteers. They hold that budgeting is now the patriotic as well as the sensible thing for most families to do. Don't you want to join them in their campaign? Don't you want to help keep the home front strong by budgeting your spending for Victory?

A totally new way to budget

Budgeteers use the Budget Calendar—a new and simple budget method supplied by Household Finance without charge. The Calendar is based on a totally new approach to the problem of planning family spending. It doesn't ask you to fit your way of living into a fixed pattern that may or may not suit you. It doesn't ask you to set aside so much for this item and so much for that. It simply starts out with the expenses you now have and helps you to meet them with the money you have to spend. Maybe that's the reason so many users have called the Calendar a "budget plan that really works."

Helps to stretch your dollars

Think how much you are trying to do with your pay cheques these days! Pay for your share of war bonds, keep up with wartime taxes, contribute to service organizations, feed, clothe and house your family so that they can do their part on the home front, on the production lines that keep the battle fronts going. A budget can help you plan your spending to get the most out of every dollar.

Join the Budgeteers

We will gladly send you the Budget Calendar by return mail. You are also invited to join the Budgeteers. Budgeteers receive a new booklet or letter from time to time to encourage them in their efforts and may ask for individual help with their problems at any time. All Budgeteers who complete a full year of budgeting receive special recognition.

The Budget Calendar was published by Household Finance, Canada's oldest and largest Small Loans company, as a service to customers. Other families soon found it helpful in solving their wartime budgeting problems. So we decided to make the Calendar available to everyone who wishes to try this practical way to plan family spending. Why don't you send the coupon for a free copy? We will not annoy you with loan advertising of any kind.

MAKE THINGS LAST!

There is still plenty in Canada—lots of things not rationed. These are the things we should ration ourselves. It's just good sense to do without luxuries—to make things last. Every dollar we save today will buy so much more in peacetime tomorrow. That's the way to protect the price ceiling—to protect our own interests in post-war days.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hemroid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

M. F. HEPBURN CRITICIZES DREW AND HIS GOVT.

Former Premier Says He Will Attend Liberal Caucus Tuesday

NOT IN FEDERAL FIELD

St. Thomas, Ont., Oct. 3—(CP)—Mitchell F. Hepburn, Independent Liberal Member of the Ontario Legislature for Elgin, today broke an almost year-long political silence with a 600-word statement in which he attacked Premier Drew's Progressive Conservative government and asserted his willingness "to take my place in the ranks of reform Liberalism . . . whether it be in the Provincial or Federal field."

The former Ontario Liberal Premier also said in an interview that next Tuesday he will attend his first caucus of Liberal members of the Legislature since the provincial election of August, 1943.

Statement Issued

The statement was issued in reply to a request from the Liberal Association of Elgin that Mr. Hepburn consider nomination for the party in the Federal riding.

It said: "I regret that my replay to this invitation to stand as a Federal candidate must be negative. After due consideration I have come to the conclusion that my main responsibility as a Liberal is to do battle against reactionary Toryism as it rears its ugly head in Ontario."

Not since Confederation has Ontario and the Dominion faced such a serious political crisis as now. The Ontario government "has evaded its responsibilities" in its year in office by "subterfuge in the form of a multiplicity of boards and commissions, with no responsibility to the legislature and certainly no results for old man Ontario."

"In the light of its own record," the Ontario Government "must be considered a failure," said the statement, describing Premier Drew's speech last Aug. 19 criticising Quebec as "the most irresponsible utterance by a Canadian public man within my memory."

Text of Statement.

The speech was a "clear incitement to hatred against a neighboring province, but worse that that, it was an incitement to hatred against one-third of our own Ontario population."

Text of the statement.

While I deeply appreciate the expression of confidence by my Liberal colleagues of many years standing, I regret that my reply to this invitation to stand as a Federal candidate must be negative. After due consideration I have come to the conclusion, that my main responsibility as a Liberal is to do battle against reactionary Toryism as it rears its ugly head in Ontario today.

While I have been for most part politically inactive since resigning the Ontario premiership two years ago, nevertheless I have continued to take a keen interest in public questions and have given a great deal of thought to our turbulent Canadian political scene. Taking a carefully considered view of the situation, it is my opinion that at no time since Confederation have we been faced with such a serious political crisis in both our province and our Dominion.

Multiplicity of Boards.

For more than a year we have had a Tory government office in Ontario—a government which has evaded its responsibilities by subterfuge in the form of a multiplicity of boards and commissions, with no responsibility to the legislature and certainly no results for old man Ontario when the legislature was in session last spring, I, a an Independent Liberal in common with other opposition members, believed that every opportunity should be afforded the government to implement its 22 pre-election pledges and at all costs everything possible should be done to avert another wartime election.

Must Be Considered Failure.

From this perspective and in the light of its own record, the government must be considered a failure. On that I am confident the vast majority of the people of Ontario including those who voted for the Tory party are in complete agreement. We must however also consider the record of the Drew government in relation to the affects of its policies on Canada as a whole. In this connection, we must turn our attention to the radio speech delivered by Col. Drew over a provincial hookup on Aug. 9 last. The speech in my opinion, was the most irresponsible utterance ever made by a Canadian public man within my memory.

It was in the first place, a clear incitement to hatred against the people of a neighboring province, but worse than that it was an incitement to hatred against one third of our own Ontario population. I shall have more to say about the other implication of that infamous speech at a later date.

Outside Jurisdiction.

Furthermore, with the authority of the legislature, Premier Drew during his recent mission to Europe, made commitments clearly outside his jurisdiction, particularly in the field of immigration. At this point I should like to ask the Premier as to what extent he has involved the people of Ontario, in this matter of bringing in new immigrants before adequate provisions have been made for the re-employment of our own servicemen and present war workers.

The Premier's recent statement regarding the opening of an Ontario House in Paris has astounded me. Is this a forerunner of further such announcements of minature duplications of services already being paid for out of federal funds?

Does the Premier propose to Balkanize Canada and give the impression to other countries that they must deal with nine Canadian jurisdictions in the fields of trade, commerce and foreign affairs?

Has Aspirations Claim

It begins to look as though Col. Drew aspires to become the president of a separate republic of Ontario. Just about 14 years ago I was given the signal honor of leading the forces which ultimately drove the Tory cabal from office in Ontario, while I no longer wear the mantle of the leadership, I am satisfied to take my place in the ranks of reform Liberalism to rally the forward-looking people of Ontario against the new Tory menace, whether it be in the Provincial or Federal field.

Canada stands on the threshold of a great future. That future can only be realized if we are a strong and united nation.

Asdic an Instrument That Will Save Many Merchant Seamen

By FRANK LOWE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 3 —(CP)— The instruments that helped the men of the Allied navies win the ocean war will help men of the Allied merchant fleets win the ocean peace.

When peace comes U-boats will disappear from the sea lanes—but that doesn't mean danger has left the ocean routes. Seamen, both in war and peace, are continually in peril, and gadgets evolved under the pressure of wartime necessity will probably be put to good use in lessening this everpresent danger.

Probably the greatest single source of help will be that little-known instrument which now is called asdic. That is the ear of the fighting ship, the miraculous invention that gropes deep under the waves to locate lurking U-boats.

When the U-boat disappears it will have an even bigger job. Groping in widening circles about a ship, asdic will be able to detect rocks, wrecks and other dangerous obstructions.

Some naval experts even foresee the time when asdic will be used extensively by fishing fleets—the beam that can pick up a U-boat pack is capable also of picking up a shoal of fish miles away.

Also of great assistance in the days of peacetime sailing should be radar, another miracle instrument that during war years has been a name only. Now used to detect enemy surface ships in the darkest nights, radar on freighters should materially cut down on the frequency of the most dreaded of marine accidents—collision.

MARMORA

LS. JOHN NAYLER ARRIVES HOME

He Was on First Ship of His Flotilla to Reach Particular Beach on D-Day

Marmora — His oft-repeated promise to come home for the coming hunting season was surprisingly fulfilled for his parents on Sunday when Leading Stoker John (William) Nayler telephoned from Belleville for a car to bring him home. Bill who inherits his father's love for hunting and fishing, expects to spend his furlough with a lot of fishing and hunting thrown in. It was seven weeks ago that Mrs. Harold Nayler, mother of Bill, last heard from him and she confessed to being a little worried. Bill found the navy all he expected it to be and does not regret joining it. He enlisted in Kingston on August 10th, 1942, and went overseas in March, 1943. He said he was in the first boat of his flotilla to land on a particular beach on D-Day. Although eleven soldiers were killed on that venture, only one of his crew was wounded, being hit by a sniper. He had been with landing craft operations since last February. Of Marmora's fighting men he said the last one he had seen was Roy Osborne, who is in the Engineers and has seen four years of overseas service.

Speaking of German prisoners he said, "They still think their country will win the war and were much surprised to find cities on this continent still standing after the stories Hitler and his associates had been telling them.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By ALAN RANDAL
(CP Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. in England, Oct. 3 —(CP)— Flt.-Lt. J. H. Phillips of Toronto, a Mosquito fighter pilot, had his left leg seriously injured by flak off the Danish coast and his plane's "joy stick" was used as a splint to fix the leg, while he was in the air.

Working quickly in the shattered cockpit, the navigator tied Phillip's leg to the head of the control column and also to the trimming control with a tourniquet and so held his foot on the rudder bar and restricted the bleeding. The pilot was numb from the hip down.

They then flew their badly damaged aircraft back 300 miles over the North Sea to base.

Phillips and his 22-year-old English navigator, FO. Bernard Job of Plymouth are members of the R.C.A.F. City of Edmonton squadron.

Canadian "Beaus" of the R.C.A.F. Buffalo squadron swept through curtains of flak from ships and nearby shore batteries to make their third successful anti-shipping strike within a week when they raised two 8,000-ton Nazi anti-aircraft vessels in the Gironde estuary on the southern Brittany coast.

"They are nasty customers but we made a concentrated attack and I believe we succeeded in crippling this pair for some time to come," said Sqdn.-Ldr. A. B. Hanway of Amherst, N.S. "Everybody's fire seemed to hit," said FO. Syd Shulenson, D.S.O., of Montreal, (5150 Devarie Blvd.)

Displaying scant regard for Father Time, two 33-year-old R.C.A.F. fighter pilots are half-way through a tour of operations. They are FO. E. P. E. Piche of New London, Conn., (340 Colman St.) and FO. C. E. Scarlett of Thornhill, Ont. They fly with Sqdn.-Ldr. H. W. McLeod's Normandy-based Canadian Spitfire squadron and they keep right up with many pilots 12 years their junior. Both are married men with families Piche has four children and Scarlett has two.

"You're just as young as you feel," said Piche who was born in Canada and has some relatives in Montreal and St. Hyacinthe, Que.

Scarlett is five months younger than Piche.

"I wanted to go on bombers at first," he said, "but, of course, I wouldn't change now for anything."

A railway tunnel believed to conceal a big German gun on the French coast near Le Havre was attacked by R.A.F. Typhoons carrying 1,000-pound bombs. The formation was led by Wing-Commander "Johnnie" Baldwin, D.S.O., D.F.C. and Bar and as far as could be ascertained the attack was completely successful. Bombs were dropped with precision at both entrances to the tunnel and pilots reported that one side of the tunnel caved in.

Paris Fashion Talk Irks British Women

London, Oct. 3 —(CP)— With the liberation of Paris, London women are wondering whether it was better to have been free and wear utility corsets or to be conquered and dress in silks and laces.

Correspondents loaded the papers with ecstatic descriptions of silks and laces and London's utility-dressed women read and then started writing letters to the Editor.

Mrs. Nora G. Phillips got the opening shot, briefly but succinctly stating in a letter "I am sick of reading how smart and well-coiffured are the women of Paris."

Eileen Evans turned a jaundiced eye on pictures showing Parisian legs and wrote:

"Can we women of Britain sit for two hours each morning in the sun to get our legs (here she quotes from a picture caption which appeared recently) 'Just the right shade of brown to enable us to go stockingless?' Can we contemplate fashion parades when the war is not yet over? It makes you think."

And Harriet Edwards chipped in with:

"Paris hadn't been liberated more than a few hours before we were falling for the blurbs of her fashion publicity experts. Why are women so bewitched?"

Spots Flying Bomb In Air Photograph

London, Oct. 3 —(CP)— Only woman who appeared in the otherwise all-male film of the R.A.F., "Target for Tonight"—Flight Officer Constance Babington-Smith—is the W.A.A.F. photographic expert who spotted the clue which in May, 1943, warned Britain that Germany was trying out flying bombs.

To her the Air Ministry owe their exact knowledge of what was happening at the German experimental station at Poenemunde a "speck" which she identified as a pilotless plane.

Millionth Ton Bombs Dropped by U.S. Army Air Forces

Washington, Oct. 3 —(AP)— The United States Army Air Forces have dropped their 1,000,000th ton of bombs since the U. S. entered the war, it was announced yesterday. This total was reached on Sept. 28 in the attack on the synthetic oil refinery at Merseberg-Leuna, in the centre of Germany.

Almost half the total, 432,000 tons, has been dropped since D-Day on June 6, Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the A.A.F., reported.

BRITISH TROOPS LAND IN WESTERN GREECE ALLIES GAIN GROUND SOUTH OF ARNHEM

Port of Patrai Entered, Several Airfields Seized

Invasion May Swiftly End German Rule in Balkans

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Rome, Oct. 5 (AP)—Striking from the sea and air, British troops have landed in western Greece, entered the port of Patras and seized airfields from which R.A.F. Spitfires already are operating in support of the effort to drive out of destroy German submarines.

The Allied command announced the invasion today, said landing forces had made contact with the enemy both in Greece and neighboring southern Albania, where other units went ashore 10 days ago.

There appeared a strong possibility the operations might swiftly end German rule throughout the Balkans.

There was no immediate report on the extent of German resistance at Patras, Greece's third largest port, or elsewhere, but the Germans recently were said to have three divisions on the Greek mainland as well as other elements evacuated from Crete and the Aegean Islands. Germans Ready to Flee.

All these have been reported ready to flee northward on a moment's notice to escape the jaws of a great trap closing in on the whole Balkans with Russians advancing from the east and Allied forces with Patriot support striking from the west.

The landing forces were believed to be of small size compared with those which carried out the major invasions of Africa, Sicily, Italy and France.

In Albania the Allied forces were attempting to cut enemy communications around the port of Sarande, supply base for the German garrison of the strongly-defended island of Corfu (Kerkra).

British parachute troops struck the first blow in Greece. They quickly seized an airfield on the Peloponnesus from which Spitfires were operating before the landings from the sea began. Air transport planes carried in other troops. By Tuesday night the invaders were entering Patrai, a city of 61,000 on the northern shore of of 61,000 on the northern shore of the Peloponnesus 112 miles west of Athens.

The parachute troops and seaborne units were given a joyful welcome by the Greek natives who in more than two years of stern German rule have suffered severely from food shortages.

The Allies already have promised essential foods and medical supplies to the country, which for six months in 1940-41 fought an attacking Italian army to a standstill and might have pushed it into the sea but for a German drive across the Balkans.

Lending support to the invaders, Mustangs from the U.S. 15th air force swarmed over the Kalamaki, Tatoi and Elevsis airdromes in the Athens area, destroying several grounded enemy planes but meeting no air opposition.

Other planes blasted the threadbare enemy lines of communications through Yugoslavia, on which the Germans must pin their last hope of getting their Balkan garrisons back to the Fatherland.

"The first arrival on the mainland of Greece of our forces, which included British land forces and units of an R.A.F. regiment, met with a wildly enthusiastic welcome from the inhabitants," an official report declared.

Uprising in Warsaw A 'Deathless Memory' Says Churchill

London, Oct. 5—(CP)— Prime minister Churchill paid eloquent tribute in the house of commons today to the patriots of Warsaw, declaring their 63-day uprising would "remain a deathless memory for Poland and for the friends of freedom all over the world."

Those who fought and lived inside the battered Polish capital, he declared, had "undergone suffering unsurpassed even among the miseries of this war."

Canadians Study English Shires

Leeds, York, Oct. 5 (CP — Yorkshire has become a favorite leave resort of Canadian servicemen and women, for whom study courses and tours have been arranged by the British council, co-operating with the Canadian Legion Educational Services.

Nearly 100 Canadians recently spent a week's leave attending British council study courses at Leeds University and Hull University College.

One party at Leeds devoted its study to the west riding of Yorkshire and toured historic and civic centres, including Bolton Abbey, factories and beauty shops. A second party studied life in a northern shire, visiting York, Ampleforth College, Coxwold and Byland Abbey, the Bronte Museum at Haworth, a woollen mill and colliery.

Among Canadians attending the Leeds courses were: FO. C. B. MacConnell, Lindsay, Ont.; PO. A. C. Jay, Peterboro, Ont.; S. Sgt. T. N. Mall, London, Ont.; Sgts. P. Fillion, Aylmer West, Ont.; L. W. German Embassies in Neutral Countries "Loaded" With Gold

Washington, Oct. 5 (AP).—German embassies in neutral countries were reported today to be "loaded down" with gold, securities and currency with large staffs working full time to put the stuff—including loot from occupied countries — under cover.

Some of the tricks being used by German leaders to conceal their financial resources were disclosed after the state department announced that the United States and Britain have asked neutrals to deny the enemy protection for his loot.

Other governments which took part in the United Nation's monetary conference at Bretton Woods, N.H., last July are expected soon to put similar pressure on the neutral group, which includes Switzerland, Argentina, Sweden, Spain and Portugal.

Washington sources said:

1. That the German ruling clique is salting away assets not only for its personal salvation but as a war chest to keep underground organizations going after the war.

2. That in concealing funds, the Germans are extending their power in foreign industry. They are cleverly cloaking this control and it will be hard to trace.

3. That the German leaders may know they are beaten militarily but they have utterly no intention of losing the war economically.

The following examples were given of how the Germans are preparing for their rainy day:

Gold, securities and currency are being stored in safe deposit boxes and vaults, usually under some non-German's name.

A citizen in a neutral country, with no riches and only a small income, suddenly buys a valuable wolfram mine.

A small new company springs up in an occupied land. German-made goods then are shipped into that territory. The purchasers are instructed not to pay the manufacturers directly, but to send their money to the new company. Secretly the firm is German-controlled; therefore funds are built up outside Germany's borders.

This is the first photograph of the British 7.2 howitzer in action against the Germans in France. The gun weighs 10 tons and fires a 200-pound shell for a range of 16,000 yards. It is mounted on a twin-wheel carriage fitted with pneumatic tires. It is fitted with hand-controlled brakes and, often when the gun is fired it runs up the steel ramp (seen above) although the brakes are on.

Recruiting for R.C.A.F Completed, To Demobilize Aircrew Reserve

Formation of Pacific Air Unit Will Be Made Up of Volunteers Says Maj. Power

114,253 AIRCREW HAVE GRADUATED

(By JACK BRAYLEY, CANADIAN PRESS STAFF WRITER)

Ottawa, Oct. 5 —(CP)— The end of recruiting, immediate demobilization of 4,200 potential aircrew, a first-in-first-out general demobilization plan and formation of a Pacific air unit made up of volunteers were announced at a press conference here today by Air Minister Power.

In announcing there would be no more recruiting for his force, which now has a strength of 204,000 men, he answered the question which had been widely asked since Oct. 1, date of the scheduled resumption of recruiting after a summer moratorium.

4,200 In Reserve.

When Major Power recently disclosed curtailment in the Commonwealth Air Training Plan by amalgamating training commands, closing out stations and cutting the size of the air council, it was widely speculated that if recruiting was restarted it would be on a restricted scale.

He said that an aircrew reserve of 4,200 waiting to start training in various schools throughout the country would be given a chance of volunteering for either the army or navy and pointed out that the "mechanics" were already set up for arranging such a transfer.

He added that if the men did not volunteer they would be subject to military call under the National Resources Mobilization Act.

This surplus of trainees was accumulated with the rolling up of the air training plan and the lowering of the incidence of overseas casualties.

Gradual Process.

He gave no indication as to when the general demobilization plan would start but it was suggested this would be a gradual process spread over many months.

He did say that these demobilized men would not be subject to military recall, and referred to military regulations that said men with two years of useful service did not have to respond to new mobilization.

He did not indcate whether the first-in-first-out demobilization plan was to apply only to the air force or to all services.

As for forming a force to fight in the war against Japan, he said this would be done on a voluntary basis and he expected "little trouble" in raising the size of force he wanted. He gave no indication as to the size of the force.

Speaking of his curtailment program, Maj. Power pointed out that plans had to be made far in advance as men went into action as much as 30 months from the time they started training.

Will Receive Credits

Those og the reserve of 4,200 in Canada who transfer to the Army will receive all credits which they have earned by reason of their R.C.A.F. service, such as the $1.50 a day rate of pay which Army personnell normally receive only after six months service."

Maj. Power said the releases followed the same pattern as had already been laid down in Britain and the United States where large num-

NAZI GARRISONS STILL HOLDING FEW FRENCH PORTS

Bordeaux Useless as Long as Germans Dominate Mouth of Garonne River

PORTS BADLY NEEDED

When Gen. De Gaulle said recently that "most, but not all" of France had been liberated he emphasized the fact that far from the headlines battlefronts on the borders of Germany there are areas of France which either are not in Allied hands or where the situation deliberately is allowed to remain obscure.

Most important, from the point of view of Allied strategy, is an imposing list of seaports and coastal positions still held by German garrisons which are blocking their use to the Allies as needed supply points.

Of the channel coast ports, only Dunkerque, threatened by an all-out Canadian assault, holds out. Also in German hands are the Channel Islands, west of the Cherbourg Peninsula, but these possibly are only of nuisance value to the enemy.

The most vital centres of resistance are the Biscay Bay ports of Lorient, St. Nazaire, La Rochelle and two places the Germans call Gironde North and Gironde South. The latter obviously are designed to close off Allied use of Bordeaux.

(Bordeaux has been reported occupied by the F.F.I., but is useless while the Germans dominate the mouth of the Gironde river.)

BOARD CONTROLS MUST BE REMOVED IN SENSIBLE WAY

Prices Board to Remain During Transition Period After the Peace

SOME RELAXATIONS

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 5 (CP). — Donald Gordon, Prices Board chairman said today in an interview that board controls imposed to prevent chaos in prices and supplies must be removed in a sensible way" as war demands lessen or chaos will come with peace.

"We have had the responsibility of imposing controls during the wartime period and we recognize we have a similar responsibility in removing them," he said.

Almost three years ago the far-reaching controls made effective by the board were announced by the Federal government. Although the war is not over, some relaxations have been possible in making supplies available for civilian consumption.

"The board policy is that we shall press for the relaxation of controls as quickly as possible, for from our point of view the soner they can be dispensed with the better," Grdon said.

No Unnecessary Controls.

"We are not trying to retain unnecessary controls. All of us in the prices board are looking forward to the day when we can complete our

Berlin Reports General Bor Prisoner of War

London, Oct. 5 — (CP) — Berlin announced today that Gen. Tadeusz Komorowski (Bor), newly-appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Polish Army, and his entire staff had been taken prisoner.

The German news agency said:

"It has just been learned that the Polish General Bor-Komorowski, who was recently appointed Commander-in-Chief of all Polish forces and up to now was commander of the Warsaw rebels, was made a prisoner of war after the capitulation of Warsaw. The whole of his staff, as well as several other Polish generals, was taken prisoner with him."

There has been an argument in Allied quarters as to whether Komorowski was in Warsaw during the uprising. Polish spokesmen in Moscow declared he was not in the city, but the Polish government here insisted he was.

RUSS SPEARHEADS WITHIN 9 MILES YUGOSLAV CAPITAL

Belgrade May Fall In Matter of Hours, Front Dispatches To Moscow Suggest

REDS CLOSING IN

By DANIEL DE LUCE
(AP War Correspondent)

Moscow, Oct. 5 (AP).—Russian armored spearheads advanced today upon the rail junction of Pancevo, a city of 22,000 less than nine miles northeast of Belgrade, and front dispatches indicated that the Yugoslav capital may fall in a matter of hours.

The German position in all of the Belgrade area was declared untenable. The Russians have a big encircling manoeuvre ready to put into effect if the enemy tries to dig in.

Closing in from the captured towns of Banatska Kraljevicevo, 15 miles northeast of Belgrade, and Debilyacha, 12 miles to the north, Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's forces cleared two rail lines leading to Pancevo and aimed toward cutting the main railway running northwest from the capital—major remaining rail escape route for the bulk of the German forces on the Balkan peninsula.

Led by Yugoslav Partisan scouts, Malinovsky's troops advanced 27 miles in 24 hours in taking Debilyacha. The official Russian communique described it as "a headlong advance".

A companion Russian offensive southwest of Turnu Severin and 100 miles southeast of Belgrade, however, ran into stiffer resistance. This resistance was reported faltering under the blows of Russians in front and Partisan detachments deep in the rear.

Yesterday's Russian communique, making the first official comment on the union of Russian troops with Partisan forces first reported Monday by Marshal Tito, said that in that sector the united forces were fighting "for the annihilation" of the Germans.

Racing to smash the main rail route in that region, the Russians outflanked the three-way rail junction of Zajecar, captured Vratarnica nine miles to the south, and drove to within 40 miles of Nis, key junction on the railway from Bulgaria and Greece.

A total of 13 towns and railway stations fell to this Russian thrust, including Bor, centre of the second-largest copper deposit in Europe.

The Soviet communique announced only patrol activity on other sectors of the eastern front.

Finns Must Form Govt. With More Leftist Tendency

By EDWIN SHANKE

Stockholm, Oct. 5 (AP).—Belief that Finland must eventually form a government with more strongly leftist tendencies if she hopes to live in harmony with Russia was expressed here today as the job of ejecting the Germans from Lapland hampered the Finns' efforts to readjust themselves after a lost war.

"The present government is too rightist for successful collaboration with the Russians, on which Finland's future depends, and therefore a new government eventually must be formed," said informants who have followed Finnish affairs closely in recent months

Men such as Trades Unionist Leader Eero Vuori and Social Minister K A. Fagerholm were said to feel a new cabinet must be built soon, but some other Finns inclined to the belief that this can wait until the general election, now scheduled for January or February after the army is fully demobilized and the evacuees are resettled.

More urgent is the question of disarming and interning Germans in northern Finland, who are beginning to show signs of digging in.

At present, with the population befuddled by years of anti-Russian propaganda, with shortages in rad materials and with food problems expected, much is believed here to depend on the way in which the Russian armistice control commission acts.

Fierce Resistance Limits Advance Toward Frontier

American Forces Continue Attacks on Fort Driant

By JAMES M. LONG
(AP War Correspondent)

London, Oct. 5 — (AP) — Heavy fighting flared along the Nijmegen-Arnhem corridor today as British 2nd Army infantry attacked in several sectors, gaining a mile in one place in an eastward advance toward the German frontier.

To the south United States tanks and infantry, fighting at the edge of the Cologne Plain after tearing a three-mile wide breach in the original Siegfried Line at Ubach, battled forward slowly against hardened German resistance centering on newly-constructed anti-tank ditches and recently-erected pill-boxes.

Infantry beat down an armored counter-attack on the southern flank of their wedge driven into the German line in this sector north of Aachen, and the Germans admitted the Americans had widened their wedge.

Attack on 6-Mile Front

Lt.-Gen. Dempsey's main attack eastward was launched on a six-mile front from south of Arnhem and only about two miles from the famous bridge for which the British 1st Airborne Division had battled in vain. It was aimed in the direction of Pannerdensch, eight miles southeast of Arnhem and the same distance northeast of Nijmegen. Pannerdensch is only about two miles from the German border north of Kleme and is at the fork of the Waal and Neder Ryn rivers. The stiff opposition limited the advance to about a mile.

Farther south, Allied armor attacking from the eastern side of the Nijmegen corridor near Venray advanced several miles from Meijel, established a front along the Nooren calal north of Venloan and fought forward slowly across marshy land from Overloon.

Almost directly east of Nijmegen Allied infantry and artillery broke up a German concentration in the Reichswald, south of Kleve, where the enemy was preparing another counter-attack.

Advance 8 Miles

West of the corridor an advance of eight miles was made in a northwesterly direction by British troops on a 10-mile front south of Tilburg, and troops of the 1st. Canadian Army advancing from the other direction, the southwest, approached to within five miles of Tilburg.

However, the Germans launched a surprise counter attack against Polish troops in the latter area, around Barrle Nassau, eight miles southwest of Tilburg, which forced the Allies to give ground temporarily.

A British attack westward just south of Arnhem reached the area around the village of Elden, about two miles southwest of Arnhem.

Farther west, the Canadians cleaned up the fort area north of Antwerp and ended a weird week's-long battle of the suburbs in which German artillery in northern port districts periodically harassed Allied control of the Belgian port.

"The Germans are pulling out and we are jumping right ahead; it is hard to keep contact with the Jerries for they are moving back mighty fast," said a Canadian headquarters officer on this front.

Drizzling rain and cold marked the fighting on the American front at Ubach.

Strange Battle

To the south one of the strangest battles of the war developed amid gunfire and the smoke of fire grenades and burning crude oil at Fort Driant, key bastion to Metz. American 3rd. Army troops held the surface and the German garrison fought with desperation in the maze of underground defences.

A dispatch from the Metz front said the Americans had made their first penetration last night into the subterranean tunnels of Fort Driant.

Capture of the fort was announced prematurely at Allied supreme headquarters yesterday on the basis of information from frontline headquarters before the full tenacity of the German stand was known.

Now it was a touch-and-go fight, with the Americans holding on grimly under crossfire from the flanking forts and sniping from German trapdoor gun positions.

The Americans smoked some of the enemy out with phosphorus grenades and poured flaming oil down hidden passages, on others, but still had the job of quarrying out the remainder of the German garrison.

War of Antwerp Suburbs Over, Canadians Greeted With Flowers

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Antwerp, Oct. 5 (CP Cable)—The weird war which has been going on for two weeks in the northern suburbs of Antwerp is over and Canadian infantry and tanks are rolling north, close behind the fast-withdrawing Germans.

I saw the finish on this crazy suburban front yesterday, and it ran true to form right to the end.

Civilians stopped by the barricades like spectators at a football game.

Antwerp evening newspapers were sold by the newsboys in streets which had been occupied by the Germans a few hours before.

As each suburb was liberated by the Canadians, Belgians scurried around to get their red, black and yellow flags out. Path of the advance was marked like a paper-chase with clusters of flags and bunting.

Merxem and several other communities on Antwerp's northern outskirts were freed and the Canadians were welcomed as they had been when they raced through town after town in their drive beyond the Seine.

Garlands of flowers bedecked Bren gun carriers and every infantryman swinging north toward the Netherlands—seven miles away—sported a rose on his tunic or helmet.

The break on this sector came suddenly At a forward Canadian headquarters, Maj. Ted Price of Quebec said:—

"The Germans are pulling out and we are jumping right ahead. It is hard to keep contact with Jerry, for he is moving back mighty fast."

We went into Merxem and beyond through territory the Germans have held for several weeks. Belgian children were playing in the old German dug-outs and men of the Belgian white brigade were scouting through the fields and woods in the wake of the Canadians, hopeful of locating some stray Germans.

CHICKENS PURCHASED FOR KIWANIS BINGO

Shades of Joe Penner. George Wallbridge, Kiwanian "purchaser at large," waddled into town yesterday with 220 chickens and 40 ducks hanging at his belt, warbling the line that made the late "duck" comedian famous.

Scouring the district on a club shopping tour, the Kiwanis hen-hunter rounded up a large number of Sunday dinners to be given away at the annual Kiwanis Bingo being held in the Knights of Columbus club rooms on Friday and Saturday.

To paraphrase the Penner line, "If you wanna get a duck" or a chicken, the Kiwanis Club will see that plenty of opportunities are available on the dates mentioned.

Activities in and around local police circles proved ordinary during the past 24 hours. Albert Wright, R. R. No. 5, Belleville, reported the theft of two gasoline ration books to the local authorities yesterday. Mr. Wright stated the ration books disappeared from the glove compartment of his automobile while it was parked on Pinnacle St. Police recorded the report for future reference.

TO DISCUSS FORMATION OF EDUCATIONAL ASSOC.

Formation of an Educational Association for South Hastings will be discussed tonight at Shire Hall, where Mr. R. H. Macklem, newly appointed inspector for the district will meet trustees and school secretaries of the inspectorate with this purpose in mind.

The aims of the proposed association will be to enable trustees and people interested in education to meet and discuss problems once or twice a year; to keep all informed of the developments of education in order that they will be prepared for the post-war period and to make sure that a dollar-for-dollar value in education is being received.

Library Associations in Sidney and Thurlow townships will also be considered at the meeting.

Mr. Macklem, who came here from Haileybury and who succeeded Mr. J. F. Pickering, has assumed duties for 1945 in the southern district of Lennox and Addington counties. This district includes Napanee, Deseronto and Newburgh.

RECENT RAINS ALLEVIATE DROUGHT

Recent rains alleviated a drought that was beginning to loom as a cause for serious concern on the part of North Hastings farmers, Mr. Bill Bronson, of Carlow Township, stated yesterday.

"Small creeks and ponds dried up completely during the two weeks previous to the rain of ten days ago, and farmers were forced to drive cattle for some distance in order to get a supply of water."

Wells also ran dry and farmers, in some cases, were forced to travel long distances to get family needs.

While the rain eased the situation somewhat, more moisture is needed in the immediate future if creeks and other sources of supply are to be available for live stock requirements.

RED CROSS FILM TO BE SHOWN

The film depicts the nursery in Silverwood, England, one of the fourteen maintained by junior members in Britain.

Work of the young "Red Crossers" among the country's children has been one of the outstanding contributions of Britain's young people to the war. The film is highly interesting and informative and no doubt will be seen by Red Cross workers here and those interested in this vital work.

QUINTE SKATING CLUB TO ENGAGE INSTRUCTOR

Sensing the need of an experienced tutor for their junior members at least, the executive of the Quinte Skating Club met Wednesday evening when it was unanimously decided to engage a professional skating instructor for the forthcoming winter season.

"We intend to present our annual ice show and if we expect advancement from our younger skaters, naturally this can only be attained by the employment of an experienced professional skating instructor," commented one skating club official. An extensive membership campaign will precede the opening of the fancy and figure skating season. The annual meeting and election of officers for the Quinte Skating Club will be held later in the year.

TRANSPORT TRAILER JACK-KNIFES ON HILL

When a large transport trailer jack-knifed on West Bridge St. hill early last evening the large vehicle backed over the street curb and sidewalk before being brought under control. Fortunately no person was passing at the time. An emergency transport tractor later towed the truck and trailer away. In the meantime, however, police had to caution motor traffic proceeding up and down West Bridge St. hill. After the tractor trailer jack-knifed traffic caution lights were quickly placed adjacent to the accident to warn oncoming motorists of the danger.

Referee Attacked At Wrestling Bouts

With bedlam breaking loose at the Hume Arena during Wednesday night's professional wrestling bouts, Referee Cliff Fox of this city was set upon by excited patrons and physically attacked. As the result of the pugnacious outbreak a man and a woman were apprehended by police and held in custody at the police station for some hours. Both will be charged with creating a disturbance, police officials announced today. The man gave his name as Frank Carter of this city.

Police say that during the melee the woman removed her shoe and struck Referee Fox over the head with the heavy shoe heel. A three-inch gash was opened across Mr. Fox's forehead, necessitating medical attention. Eye witnesses also contended the woman struck the wrestling official over the head with her handbag. Police not only had to rescue Fox from his assailants, but escorted both the man and the woman from the arena.

Belleville Boy YMCA Supervisor In Iceland Centre

JIM FOLLWELL

A new Royal Canadian Air Force centre, Camp Maple Leaf, was recently opened in Iceland by the Canadian Y.M.C.A. War Services. While the centre is essentially a Canadian enterprise, it is also used by Royal Air Force and United States Air Force personnel. It is under the supervision of Jas. H. Follwell of Belleville, who has been a Canadian Y.M.C.A. Supervisor there for nearly a year.

Several Nissen huts are joined to form the building, which contains a gymnasium, a theatre, a reading room and lounge, a library, and a game room. Most of the equipment and furnishings such as easy chairs, writing tables, projection machines, theatre chairs, ping pong and pool tables, and gymnasium equipment, were supplied by the "Y."

The centre is used daily by about 300 airmen, which includes attendance at movies. Among those assisting Mr. Follwell in running the establishment are L.A.C. Tom Butler of Newcastle, N.B., and L.A.C. Bert Brossard of Montreal. F/S. S. Bolin of Brockville, Ont., and Sgt. C. White of Camrose, Alta., serve as movie operators.

RECRUITING

bers of personnel, designated for aircrew service in the Army Air Force, had been placed at the disposal of other services.

He said the releases and other curtailments would not have any immediate effect on reducing the output of trained men from the plan for there were still "many thousands" in various stages of air training. He added: "This means that schools will continue to graduate full trained aircrew personnel until well into 1945."

60,503 R.C.A.F. Members

The Air Minister also disclosed at his press conference that the plan had up to Aug. 25 graduated 114,253 trained aircrew personnel, of which 60,508 were R.C.A.F. members.

He also said that Canada had laid out $1,631,000,000 of the $2,304,000,000 cost of the plan and there was a total of $442,500,000 recoverable from Britain as her share of the burden. He said negotiations now were under way "to provide the United Kingdom with the means of liquidating this account." He did not elaborate.

He said the peak of the plan was reached last February when 11,000 training planes were in use and 3,899 aircrew graduated for an annual rate of 50,700. The new annual rate objective of the curtailed plan is 20,965.

5TH ARMY TROOPS ONLY 14 MILES FROM BOLOGNA

Poor Weather and Rain-Swollen Rivers Bog Down British Drive

FIERCE RESISTANCE

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK
AP War Correspondent)

Rome, Oct. 5 —(AP)— As poor weather and rain-swollen rivers held British 8th Army positions along the Adriatic sector virtually unchanged, American troops of the Allied 5th Army drove a mile forward against violent fire from reinforced and hastily-entrenched Germans yesterday on the bitterly-contested road to Bologna.

They now were only 14 miles from that great communications centre having seized a ridge just north of La Selva five miles east of Highway 65 at Loiano.

To the east the 8th Army advanced to a point up to two miles northeast of Castagno and South African units entered Lagaro on the Prato-Bologna road. Other South Africans drove to positions on the east slopes of Monte Vigese, 3,500-foot peak which offers a clear field of fire against Highway 64 leading from Pistola to Bologna.

Although positions along the swollen Fiumicino river remained substantially unchanged, Indian units took San Donato, about four miles west of Scorticata, across the Rubicon.

Peured in Fire.

Fifth Army troops gained new positions just short of Monte Morosino on the Imola road, three miles north of Castel del Rio. On their left flank, where the Germans poured in all types of artillery fire, they took the town of Cuviola and Quinzano, east of Loiano, after forcing their way against stiff resistance several hundred yards north of Lagune, which overlooks a secondary road to Bologna.

Yesterday's advances put American forces within 11 miles of the old Roman Aemilia road, running from Bologna to Rimini.

Today's communique said both British and American forces of the 8th Army had made "important gains" in the face of tough enemy opposition.

Rail Bridges Hit.

While strong forces of escorted heavy bombers blasted railyards in Munich and rail communications in northern Italy yesterday, mediums attacked rail bridges in the Po Valley. Light craft bombed and strafed troop concentrations, supply dumps and communications lines in and north of the battle area.

From these and other operations in the Balkans 21 Allied planes failed to return, including 13 heavy bombers.

Last night the 8th Army was reported stalled along the rain-swollen Fiumicino river, on the opposite side of which the enemy is strongly entrenched. Canadian units engaged in sharp patrol activity.

Slight gains were reported by British and Indian units moving on Imola and Faenza, towns astride the Rimini-Bologna highway.

Will Discuss Agreement Of Bretton Woods

London, Oct. 5 — (CP) — Foreign Secretary Eden promised the House of Commons today a full opportunity to debate the Bretton Woods monetary agreement.

A Conservative member had complained that Sir John Anderson, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in a speech at the Lord Mayor's luncheon yesterday, "committed us to every principle underlying the proposals."

Mr. Eden replied with a curt "No, sir" to a question from a Labor member as to whether the debate should be delayed until "after the presidential elections in America."

FIVE GENERALS SUSPENDED

Paris, Oct. 5—(AP)—The War Ministry yesterday announced the suspension of five generals of the French army without giving any reason. They included General of the armies Charles Bregard.

Wife of Winner 'Finishes' Cheese

Mrs. Arthur McCreary, Queensboro, is one of those ladies who believe in the fact that a woman can do anything that the male of the species aspires to. And it did not take a war to make her prove it.

When Mr. McCreary, cheese maker at the Queensboro factory, was awarded the first prize for the seventh consecutive year for the best finished cheese at Madoc Fair, Mrs. McCreary beamed proudly and modestly nodded her head, when a friend informed judges that she did all the "finishing" work on cheese exhibited by her husband.

"Yes," she admitted a little later, "I have been doing this work for years and I am not a little proud of my prize winnings."

Mrs. McCreary, however, was being given plenty of competition at Madoc on Wednesday. The first and second cheese were so similar in quality and finish that the fact that a cotton-covering seam, placed in a straighter line on the McCreary entry, was the margin of victory.

She comes from a "cheese" family. Mr. Bert Jones, well-known Tweed maker, and a consistent prize winner at cheese shows, is a brother.

Urge Same Freedom To Own and Operate Planes in U.S. as Cars

By C. R. Blackburn
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, Oct. 5 (CP)—Freedom for Americans in the post-war era to own and pilot private airplanes with the same freedom from restrictions that motorists enjoy is urged upon Federal aviation authorities by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commecre.

The inherent desire of the American citizen to "go places and do things" by the swiftest and most modern method is reflected in a submission to be presented today by Joseph T. Geuting, chairman of the personal aircraft council section of the Chamber, to William A. Burden, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, L. Welch Pogue, Chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board, and others in the government and Congress interested in aviation control.

Mr. Geuting, who also is Vice-President of the General Aircraft Corporation, pictures a post-war period in which private plane owners will rapidly increase and the skies will be filled with pleasure and business craft.

He urged the revision of regulations, substituting "should" for "must" in a great many of the restrictive orders governing private plane operation and the certification of pilots.

"It should be the right of any American to be able to secure a pilot's certificate with no greater relative difficulty than in securing an automobile driver's licence," the submission declares.

The submission urges relaxation in rules for certifying airworthiness, claiming that present requirements add expenses to private ownership "far out of proportion with actual safety needs."

Brotherhood of Two Nations

In the brotherhood of the nations of the North American Continent, the Hon. Ray Atherton, United States Ambassador to Canada, sees the hope of a world brotherhood that can yet be. He was speaking at Montreal the other day when he said, "The Canadian people have taught me to look into the future with greater courage than ever before." This address came at the conclusion of a four-month tour across Canada. "If there can be this great North American brotherhood —and I have seen it with my own eyes—can there not ultimately be a world brotherhood? The difficulties in the way are immense; let us grant that. But we in North America did not inherit our brotherhood perfect and fullblown. We built it piece by piece, slowly and surely, over the long decades and centuries."

Again he said, "There are ruined forts galore from New Brunswick to British Columbia, from Maine to Washington. The glory of North America is not that we never built forts against one another, but that the common people of Canada and the United States have torn those forts down, stone by stone, with their own hands. Those forts will never rise again. That is the glory."

These are graphic words, words of history and of prophecy. He said that the world is torn by misunderstandings, and so was North America once. "What we have done, the world can do." That is his hope. "It will be long and hard but North America has won through to the end of it and the world can follow." So will it ever be—this is the confidence of the people of these two nations.

The United States Ambassador's speech was one that was rich in the understanding of the two peoples and in the sense of their fraternity. He told of finding the family name of Atherton in many old graveyards in Fredericton and Saint John and of the attraction of the Maritimes for the people of New England. Of the resources of the Dominion he said, "The majesty of the country gave me faith in the people and the people gave me faith in the country. I returned inspired as never before by the unconquerable vitality of this western world, this North America. I returned deeply assured that the North American spirit, which has shaped the West, stands ready today for the service of the whole world."

"Where else in the world is it normal and natural for officials of foreign governments to be so regarded," he asked, as he related how the first U. S. consul was in Winnipeg intimately a part of the life of that city. "The people of Canada have taught me this."

British Rescue Services

British lifeboats have saved three times as many people during the war as in peacetime, says the Empire Information. Since 1939 experienced boatmen of military age have entered the navy, so that the crews who man Britain's lifeboats today are young boys and elderly men. The Royal National Lifeboat Institution is an entirely voluntary organization. It is financed by voluntary contributions and its lifeboat crews are all volunteers.

Britain's Air-Sea Rescue Service saves countless Allied lives. All the United States forces in the United Kingdom, the Mediterranean and India, are serviced free of charge by Britain's Air-Sea Rescue Service —one of the countless incalculable items of British Reverse Lease-Lend. Thousands of Allied lives saved by the service include hundreds of American flyers. On one occasion 101 airmen were rescued from the North Sea in fifty hours. The brilliant standards maintained by the service are due not only to the skill and courage of the British rescue crews. They rest also on the high performance of specially designed high-speed surface craft. Recently one R.A.F. rescue launch raced 150 miles in heavy seas to save the crew of a Flying Fortress which crashed off the coast of occupied Europe. The entire crew of eleven was brought safely back to England. After the war Britain's Air-Sea Rescue Service is to continue as a great peace time life-saving service.

Influence on Post-War Design

The British Sabre engine which powers two of the world's most famous aircraft—the R.A.F. rocket-firing Typhoon and the Tempest, the fastest fighter in the world—is to be used in multiple form in British civil aircraft. The immense strides achieved by Britain's aircraft industry in war-time research and development will have an important bearing on its post-war design and construction.

The Irreplaceable Losses

(Montreal Herald)

So the Bayeux Tapestry, Venus de Vilo and Mona Lisa have survived the war and are safe in Allied hands.

That's fine news, but even art lovers long uneasy as to the fate of these treasures will scarcely feel moved to immoderate jubilation.

Joy over the fact that pictures and statues, however lovely and valuable, had come through unscathed would indicate an inhumanity and heartlessness which we only attribute to the more barbaric of our enemies in view of the millions of human beings who have not. No one who has a soldier son or father or brother overseas would balance the Venus de Milo against his life.

No London family that has lost a child in the air blitz would feel that the recovery of the Bayeux tapestry was adequate compensation.

Many priceless paintings and statues and buildings famed for their beauty have not been so fortunate as those located by an Allied Headquarters commission.

But man is capable of replacing them with cultural works even more beautiful. Towns and cities that have been destroyed will be rebuilt. New homes will rise on the ashes of those levelled by bombs. Countries will be "reconstructed."

But the human lives represent the irreplaceable losses of war.

Preceded Dominions

So distinctive has been the history and political development of the Channel Islands that their non-absorption into the English system of government not only satisfied the islanders' strong attachment to self-rule, but was a logical and convenient administrative arrangement, notes The London Times.

In their virtual independence of the English Parliament and their sole allegiance to the Crown, it may indeed be said that the islands preceded by centuries the evolution which in respect of the Dominions found formal expression in the Statute of Westminster.

Each of the four inhabited islands has its own distinctive political and administrative system. Sark, with only 500 inhabitants, remains almost a museum piece of medieval feudalism shaped to serve the intimate relations of a small, self-centred community.

Alderney's population of 1,500 evacuated their island en bloc in 1940. Their "States," or Parliament, though necessarily dormant, has remained in being during exile in the United Kingdom.

Out of Step

(Minneapolis Star Journal)

No wonder the world is cockeyed. Now they tell us we've been out of step with time—everybody and everything—for 269 years.

They found it out recently when they had to reset their clocks in the London suburb of Greenwich to conform to the dictum of a new quartz crystal timepiece, accurate to one-thousandth of a second.

We have been blundering along with some outmoded old apparatus which only kept time to a hundredth of a second and often was various thousands of a second wrong.

DEAD AS A DODO

"Dead as a dodo" is an old phrase that, like "dead as a doornail," survives largely because of its alliterative qualities.

The dodo was a bird that once inhabited Mauritius, a British island in the Indian Ocean east of Madagascar. It is supposed that the name is a corruption of Portuguese "duodo," meaning silly or foolish.

This bird, although larger than a turkey, was closely related to the pigeons. It was very clumsy and had only rudimentary wings.

Dodoes were very numerous in Mauritius when the island was discovered by the Portuguese in 1507. Several years later a crew of Portuguese sailors touched at the island for provisions and killed a number of dodoes with clubs, but they found the flesh unpalatable.

The dodo was first described in detail in 1598 by a Dutchman named Van Neck. In that year a living dodo was shipped to Holland but died on the voyage. This specimen was long preserved at Leyden and one of its feet is still believed to be in the British Museum.

In 1638 a living dodo was brought to England by Sir Hamon l'Estrange, who described the back of the bird as "dunn or deare colour." This specimen was exhibited in London for a small admission fee in a house bearing a figure of the bird represented on canvas.

When hogs were introduced on Mauritius the dodoes fared ill, for they were very slow on their feet and could not fly. Besides, they laid only one egg for a setting and that was laid on the ground in a nest of grass. Thus this queer bird became totally extinct. There is no record of a live dodo having been seen since 1681. No dodo eggs have been preserved, but there are several skeletons of the birds in museums.

Most people know nothing of this interesting bird except the fact that it is awfully dead. They are continually reminded of this by the frequent use of the phrase "dead as a dodo."

Athletics Entered To Round Out Group

St. Catharines, Ont., Oct. 5 (CP)—St. Catharines Athletics entered the Ontario Lacrosse Association senior series this season just to round out a five-team group and wound up by winning the series title with a display of tremendous scoring punch and now promise to provide stiff opposition for the New Westminster Salmonbellies in the Mann Cup finals opening in Toronto Saturday night.

It is the fifth time in seven years that the Athletics have entered the finals for the Dominion title. They won the championship in 1938, 1940 and 1941 and were runners-up in 1939. They were eliminated in O.A.L.A play in 1942 and 1943.

Boy, Who Refuses To Rob His Mother, Is Beaten, Gagged

Halifax, Oct. 4 — (CP) — Ten-year-old Raymond Herold told Halifax police yesterday he had been stopped on his way home from school on Monday, ordered to steal money from his mother's pocketbook, and left bound and gagged in a deserted dockside area overnight when he refused the demand.

Herold said he had been halted by three youths between 17 and 19. After he refused their order, the youths struck him, bound him, and gagged him with a "piece of potato bag," he said.

His captors freed him Tuesday morning, then ran away when a naval vehicle appeared. The boy's back was bruised and his wrists cut and burned from the ropes.

HIGH PRESSURE AND LOW PRESSURE

A neutral, indeterminate, furtive character writes:

Had all my teeth pulled a year and a half ago by advice of doctor and dentist. The doctor said the poison from them had gone through my system and that I would probably lose my sanity within a year if I didn't. Was very run down and nervous.

Since then have had a number of physical examinations by good physicians and they say they can find nothing organically wrong except that I have very low blood pressure.

I am so weak that it is difficult for me to carry on my work properly, yet the doctors can do nothing to relieve me. I am 29 years of age The fact that they can find "nothing organically wrong" worries me

(Signed) A. Nonentity.

(Impossible to surmise from the typing whether the character is male or female.)

I'm not going to make any comments on the casual way the doctor and dentist deprived the charocter of all his or her teeth. What's the use? People are so lacking in wisdom about the value of teeth.

But I venture to whisper Stt! Stt! Stt! at the high pressure tactics of the doctor, if the character tells the truth—which is always questionable, of course.

In my opinion no physician, specialist or authority can honestly say in any circumstance that a patient will probably lose his sanity within a year if the patient does not submit to this or that treatment or take this or that remedy or follow this or that course.

Mind, please, I believe it is necessary to extract a tooth that is decayed or infected (root abscess) beyond repair, but if it were my tooth I'd consent to extraction only if my physician and my dentist agreed, after consultation, that the tooth should be sacrificed in the best interest of my health.

The Scotch verdict rendered by the "good physicians" who made "a number of physical examinations" of this furtive character is hardly worth the price. One might get as much for less money by applying for a life insurance policy. After all it is late in the day to do anything for the patient if the doctor has to wait until there is something "organically wrong." And telling a patient he or she has "low blood pressure" is pretty quackery unless you explain at the same time what, if anything, you think it means.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Emergency Call

Please send the pamphlet on Ivy Poisoning, and hurry for I'm in torment with it now. (Mrs. M. J. L.)

Answer—I deeply sympathise with anyone afflicted with ivy poisoning —and if you can see your way to provide a stamped self addressed envelope I'll be glad to send the pamphlet. In lieu of that, ask your doctor to give you a dose or two of ivy toxin hypodermically or rather intramuscularly.

Wait Twenty Years

One doctor said I have fibroid tumor and backward displacement and said I should be operated on. Another doctor said I have just tipped uterus, and says nothing of tumor, but says I am in the change and the time to operate is after the change is over. I am 30 years old. How long will that be? (M.A.)

Answer—A long time. If fibroid tumor is present there may be no trouble at all from it. If it causes serious trouble, surgical removal may be advisable—now, not years from now. If surgery is not advisable, X-ray treatments may be sufficient. Send stamped envelope bearing your address, for pamphlet Tumor and Displacement—do not send clipping.

Our son, thirteen, has just gotten over a bad case of flu. He was not very strong to begin with, but he needs building up now. He is always tired and droopy.

Picton and District

ander Speaks H. & S Club

Oct. 5 — Mrs. L. A. ter, Kingston, addressed the Home and School Association here yesterday afternoon. A native of Holland, she wore the national dress of that country and proved a most interesting speaker. Coming to Canada several years ago she knew little of the English language, but by self-study has become very proficient. She has established a little industry in the hand-weaving of textiles, according to the Dutch tradition, and described this work to the large attendance of members.

Inspector and Mrs. F. P. Smith, of Kingston, formerly of Picton, accompanied Mrs. Baumeister here.

Pte. Paul Cole Killed in Action

Picton, Oct. 5 — Pte. Paul Cole has been killed in action, according to official word received yesterday by his mother, Mrs. Harvey Cole, here. No details were given but it is known he was serving in Belgium. His brother, Pte. David Cole, is in France.

The brothers went overseas together last year and went to France shortly after D-Day. He was serving with the A. S. Highlanders of Canada.

Surviving are his mother, several brothers and sisters.

Flt. Sgt. D. East Nominated C.C.F. Candidate

Picton, Oct. 5—Flight Sgt. Donald East, 29, an armament instructor at Mountain View R.C.A.F. station, has been named C.C.F. candidate for Prince Edward-Lennox riding in the next Federal election. A convention attended by 25 members was held here Monday night.

Colin Carter, local business man, was also nominated but withdrew.

Mr. East's home is in the village of Bllimfield where his father, Harry East, conducts a garage.

In accepting the nomination, Mr. East said he elt it was his duty to his fellow servicemen to express their point of view and to help make a better Canada for them.

"The New Zealanders that I have trained at Mountain View also helped be to decide. They have only praise for their government, whereas we only have derotary remarks and wisecracks for ours. The New Zealand program is basically the same as the C.C.F. I have had a lot of Saskatchewan boys in my class and they too have helped strengthen my desire to bring the C.C.F. policy to Canada," Mr. East said.

Flt. Sgt. East was born at Leamington 27 years ago but came to Prince Edward county when three years of age. Four years ago he married Phyllis Lunn of Hillier. He is a member of the United Church, has been active in several sports and in young people's work. He was called for service in the air force in March 1941, being posted to Toronto, Trenton, Kingston and Sydney, N.S., before coming to Mountain View. He has a brother, Sgt. Frank in the R.C.A.F. at Trenton, another brother Hewitt of Wellington, and a sister, Miss Nellie East, Picton.

Mr. East was educated at Bloomfield public school, Picton collegiate and Toronto Normal school.

He studied two terms at Kemptville Agricultural school, and took a course at Hamilton technical school. He taught five years at Demorestville and Cooper's school, near Bloomfield before enlisting.

The Progressive Conservatives have already re-nominated George Tustin, M.P., as their standard bearer The Liberals have as yet made no plans for a nomination.

NAZI GARRISONS

In all these ports the garrisons remain pocketed and apparently are trying to live off the country. German communiques frequently refer to "successful sorties by our Atlantic coast groups for the purpose of replenishing stores of arms and supplies."

In whole areas of southwestern and southeastern France the situation is unclear.

The only definitely known sizeable unliberated area of the republic is a triangle formed by the German upper Rhine border, the northwest frontier of Switzerland, and the battleline of the United States 3rd and 7th armies.

The situation along the Swiss and Italian western frontiers down to the Mediterranean has not been officially reported by either side in weeks. It would seem obvious that the Germans probably are not in a happy position here and the Allied Command presumably has strong reasons for keeping the picture hazy.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Oct. 5 (AP). — A Spanish maquis force of 40,000 men, defiant of Gen. De Gaulle's Paris government, is reported by diplomats here to be in control of a corner of France adjoining the Spanish frontier.

American officials consider that France now is under effective control of the Paris administration and that it is a broadly representative regime rather than a one-man affair. They are reported to be urging its recognition as a government.

(Gen. De Gaulle now is said to be ready to assume full governmental powers with the lifting of Allied controls, although it is not certain here whether the situation in southwestern France may complicate things.)

Reports on the force of irregular fighters say they are centred around Perpignan, France, a town on the Spanish border which had a large part in aiding the flight of Spanish Loyalist refugees from Spain after the civil war.

When the Maquis units were springing up in organized underground resistance to the Germans the one in this area numbered more Spanish than French. The 40,000 Spanish members now dominate the organization, it is said, and all members are well-equipped with small work here and allow prices and trade to resume their normal courses. We are not attempting to organize a planned economy for Canada."

The board will remain in the picture during the transition period after the peace, whenever it comes. It will remain in operation after the end of the war in Europe and while the battle against Japan may be continuing.

Controls Needed.

Relaxations in supplies probably will be possible when the European conflict is over but controls still will be needed, although perhaps in modified form. This will mean that if materials in limited supply are needed for plows and golf clubs, the plow manufacturers will get the nod.

"All the time we will be working towards the objective of having the ordinary business of the country returned to complete freedom," said Gordon.

PARTISANS CAN HELP

London Oct. 5— (CP) — Gen. Alexander told partisans in northern Italy over the Rome radio today "You will soon have the opportunity of striking a mortal blow at the enemy." The broadcast by The broadcast by the Allied commander in Italy instructed the Partisans to prevent the Germans from crossing the Alps and the Po river and outlined other phases of co-operation with Allied troops.

Col. Taylor was awarded the Military Cross in World War 1 for gallantry at the Battle of Amiens, in 1918. He is a member of the Calgary police force in civil life.

SHANNONVILLE

Trinity Church To Observe 90th Anniversary

Shannonville — The congregation and friends of Holy Trinity Anglican Church, Shannonville, will celebrate the ninetieth anniversary with a special service on Thursday evening, October 12th., when the guest preacher will be the Rev. T. D. Proctor of Kootenay, B.C., who will be engaged in deputation work in the Anglican Diocese of Ontario at that time. An interesting feature will be the presence of Christ Church choir and organist of Belleville who will render the musical portions of the service under the direction of Mr. Arthur Simpson, choir director. The first Anglican church in Shannonville was erected in 1854 and was destroyed by fire in 1876. The following year the congregation by generous subscriptions, made possible the erection of the present church; a well known landmark with its fine tower and steeple. Some of the leading artists in Ontario have made both the church and the century-old mill nearby, the subjects of very beautiful paintings. Many old friends and parishioners of bygone days will gather for this 90th anniversary of reunion.

Agreement in principle also has been reached between Britain and the Netherlands government for monetary exchange along similar lines, he said.

WEDDINGS

ODDIE-WRIGHT

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, West Huntingdon, was the scene of a lovely September wedding on Saturday, the thirtieth, at 3 o'clock, when Lorna Virginia, daughter of Mrs John Wright, and the late Mr. Wright became the bride of William Kenneth, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Oddie of Seymour. The Rev. W. H. V. Walker was the officiating minister for the occasion. Autumn flowers and potted plants formed the impressive floral background.

The bride, given in marriage by her mother, entered the church to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin. She was a picture of loveliness in a gown of white moire taffeta, fashioned with sheath-tight bodice and full floor-length skirt. The sweetheart neckline and tight fitting three-quarter length sleeves were trimmed with heirloom lace. The bride's only ornament was a large gold brooch with amethyst setting. An elbow-length veil of silk embroidered net fell in graceful folds from a halo of pleated moire ribbon. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and maidenhair fern tied with blue ribbon.

The bride's sisters were her attendants. The matron of honor was dressed in baby blue taffeta, and Miss Margaret Wright of Ivanhoe, as Bridesmaid in baby pink taffeta. The gowns, fashioned similarly to that worn by the bride were also trimmed with heirloom lace. The matron of honor wore a baby blue shoulder length veil falling gracefully from a cluster of blue flowers. The bridesmaid's headdress was similarly made in baby pink. Corsages of white baby 'mums tied with pink ribbon completed their charming costumes.

Mr. Roy Oddie of Lakefield, brother of the groom acted as best man and the ushers were Mr. Staff Meraw, Tweed, and Mr. Gerald Mitchell, Campbellford.

During the ceremony Mr. John Hassall of West Huntingdon very fittingly sang "O Perfect Love," and during the signing of the register, Mrs. Allan Watson, Campbellford, aunt of the groom, rendered "I Love Thee." Miss Marion Oddie, the groom's sister, played during the ceremony and acted as accompanist for the soloists.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother for the forty guests. The bride's mother received, wearing a Ramada wool crepe dress in hunter green with gold studded shoulder yoke, matching hat and corsage of bronze baby 'mums.

The groom's mother, who assisted chose a black crepe dress trimmed with sequins, black accessories and corsage of bronze baby 'mums.

For the wedding trip to points east the bride selected a two piece imported wool crepe dress in turquoise blue, brown accessories, brown Donegal tweed coat and corsage of roses.

On their return they will resice on the groom's farm in Seymour.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold ring set with a pearl, to the best man and ushers bill folds. The bride's gift to the groom was a wrist watch, to matron of honor silver locket, to pianist and bridesmaid identification bracelets, soloists bill fold and pictures and to the serviteurs Misses Jean and Reta Farrell and Mrs. Wm. Benson, pictures.

Out-of-town guests were present from Montreal, Toronto, Campbellford, Tweed, Thomasburg, Eldorado and Stirling.

CALLAHAN-SHANNON

St. Charles Borromeo Church, Read, was the scene of a very lovely early Autumn wedding on Saturday morning, September 30th, at nine o'clock, when Helen Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Vincent Shannon, Plainfield, became the bride of Adrien Callahan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis J. Callahan, Corbyville. Rev. Father Joseph Shannon, uncle of the bride, celebrated the nuptial mass. Pat Shannon and Gerald Power, cousins of the bride, served it.

Gladioli, 'mums and mixtures of Autumn flowers formed an impressive background for the occasion. Mr. William Hanley presided at the console of the organ. Mr. Arthur Shannon, uncle of the bride, and Gerald and Adrian Shannon, brothers of the bride, rendered solos.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was a picture of loveliness in her wedding model of traditional white slipper satin, fashioned exquisitely with deep yoke of silk marquisette edged with medallions of guipure lace, and waistline made on long torso effect. The softly gathered skirt, accentuated with a panel of guipure lace down the front, fell at the back in a circular train. Her headdress was a hand crochet lace halo misted with a veil of tulle which fell in graceful folds to her fingertips. Her only ornaments were a single strand of pearls and pearl earrings She carried an arm bouquet of Braircliff roses and maidenhair fern.

Miss Irene Shannon, her sister's maid of honor, was wearing charming floor length gown of lavender silk jersey made on torso lines She wore a shoulder length veil in matching shade to her dress and which was caught to her hair with a dainty feather calot. She carried a nosegay of Johanna Hill roses, scabiosa and maidenhair fern.

Miss Helen Callahan, sister of the froom, as bridesmaid, was attractively attired in a floor length frock of gold silk jersey fashioned on similar lines to that of the maid of honor. Her headdress was also like the maid of honor's, only in matching hue to her dress. She carried a nosegay of Johanna Hill roses, baby 'mums and maidenhair fern.

Rosemary Shannon was a winsome little flower girl in turquoise blue tafetta and matching poke bonnet. A nosegay of Autumn blooms in dainty pastel hues completed her ensemble.

Mr. Kenneth Callahan, Tweed, and Mr. Gerald Walsh, Read, were groomsmen, and the ushers were Mr. Joseph Shannon, cousin of the bride and Mr. Leo Quinn, Belleville, brother-in-law of the groom.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents The mother of the bride selected for the occasion a two-tone dress in brown and gold complemented with brown accessories and corsage of Johanna Hill roses and fern. The groom's mother wore a teal blue ensemble with matching accessories and corsage of Briarcliff roses and fern.

On their wedding trip to the United States home via Niagara Falls and London, the bride donned for travelling a brown tailored suit and brown accessories.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Callahan will take up residence on the groom's farm near Read, Ont.

The groom's gift to the bride was a chest of silver.

How British Science Is Helping To Bring Victory Is Told Club By Dr. Winnifred Clara Cullis, C.B.E.

Beginning the thirtieth year of its founding in this city, the Women's Canadian Club had as guest speaker for its meeting on Wednesday evening in Bridge Street Sunday School rooms, Dr. Winnifred Clara Cullis, C.B.E. Befitting such an unique occasion was Dr. Cullis, recently head of the Women's Section of British Information Services in the United States, and who is an outstanding lecturer. She is an English woman, world-travelled, a scientist and for many years a professor of physiology in London University.

In beginning her subject of "British Science in Wartime", Dr. Cullis stated that the English people were keenly aware of the great war effort being made by Canada. "And if we are going to work together" she said, "we must know about one another". Dr. Cullis told of her two years in the United States when everyone was very friendly towards her, but at the same time showed an absence of direct knowledge of what was being done at her home in England.

British Inventions

"There is one field in which we have done very well", she continued. In the history of science, British subjects have done a great deal. An example of this is our inventions. "But at the same time", said Dr. Cullis, "we have not applied our knowledge of such things." The discovery of insulin is a fine illustration of international work, an example that teamwork is successful. The foundation of that work was laid in many different countries and many people worked at it. The actual crowning discovery came to Drs. Banting and Best. Dr. Cullis spoke briefly of Drs. Banting and Best in regards to their work in the field of diabetes.

Seive Nazi Magnetic Mine

"In this war science has done a great deal in bringing victory closer", she said. So many of the scientific things are still secrets, but it is to be hoped that when hostilities cease, we will learn more about them. By our scientists, we have been able to answer a great many serious threats against our country and the outcome of the war. Dr. Cullis first spoke of the magnetic mine, devised by the Germans eight years before the outbreak of war for the purpose of destroying coastal shipping. The Germans thought that if they could blockade Britain, it would in large measure win a victory for them. The Germans sowed the mines in shallow water, and the first one was a great success, blowing up several English vessels. One day, however, when the Germans were sowing mines in the Thames River, one became stranded, and when the tide went out, the Englishmen found it. It was sent to a scientific department where it was studied. Soon the English scientists became masters of its structure and its workings and means was found how the mine could be avoided. That was an exampde of defensive mechanism.

Other Discoveries, Inventions

Dr. Cullis went on to tell of more scientific discoveries made by the English scientists. They developed an explosive with the highest damaging power in the world. They also made the piat gun, carried by one man, the shell of which can penetrate a tank. The rocket is still another discovery which is of great value in attacks. The Bailey Bridge, made by a man named Bailey, is so designed that simplicity is its key word. It can bridge a very large distance, it is very light to carry and in extremely easy to put up. Because of all these factors, it has been a great help to our troops in the present conflict.

Radio Location

Inventor of the radio location was Sir William Watson Watt. This radio location is a means whereby the English can detect when German planes are coming out of their air fields and moving towards Britain. From the radio location, Radar was developed which works rather like television. "Radar was responsible for a great naval victory over the Italian Fleet off the islands of Greece", said Dr. Cullis. It made it possible for the English to locate the enemy ships in the dark, the result of which was a victory for our men.

Dr. Cullis spoke at length of the flying bomb and of the methods taken to overcome it. The R. A. F. went out to wipe out the place where the bombs were being manufactured and the attack was most successful. The building, together with the scientists, were completely destroyed. She spoke in glowing terms of the R.A.F. and of the fine work they are doing towards victory. They have learned to do precise pin-point bombing.

Destroying Flying Bombs

"The first attack on London, England, by the flying bombs was so trying," said Dr. Cullis. Anti aircraft barrage was put into action against them. These bombs travelled at a rate of 300 to 400 miles per hour. The bomb itself was only heard for two minutes. There were spotters on the big buildings, who would give the signals when one was seen. The bombs were responsible for destroying one and a quarter million houses in England, ninety percent of them in London. In order to cope with the situation, the government placed balloons along the line of the hill in "Bomb Alley", the district where most of the bombs fell. The bombs were sure to hit one of these balloons and so could not get through. Eventually, a sight was discovered by the scientists. These sights were put with the anti-aircraft guns. In this way, the guns destroyed bombs as they were nearing the coastal areas.

Saving Life

"In the direction of conserving life, science has also done a great deal in this war," continued Dr. Cullis. With the system of food control at home, we managed amazingly well with the rationing. Infant mortality is recorded as 49 per 1000 against Germany's 72 per 1000. By the direct application of science, much has been done towards the welfare of the communities. The food produce at home has been raised. Certain improvements on diseases have been developed. A drug has now been made by the scientists which is effective in the cure of malaria.

The discovery of Penicillin, a drug which is saving the lives of many of our soldiers, was discussed briefly by Dr. Cullis. She stated that it does not destroy humans, it does not destroy good tissue but does damage to dangerous tissue. She also mentioned the great research that has been done towards blood transfusion service. Machines were invented which dried the plasma so the blood could be carried.

In conclusion, Dr. Cullis said to the assemblage: "Science is a great international leader. The whole essence of science must be based on truth."

Family Bible Is Presented to Chapel At Mountain View

A lovely Autumn meeting of the united Prince Edward-Belleville Women's Club was held on Wednesday when Miss Jones opened her home at 260 E. Dundas Street with about 25 members and visitors present.

A number of crocheted doilies, donated by Mrs. Earle Weese were disposed of and the proceeds from sale of tickets on centrepiece donated by Mrs. E. Weese amounted to $3.95. The two gifts are to be put together and sold and the quilt pieced by Mrs Osborne to be quilted.

Miss Jones gave a most interesting talk carrying everyone's thoughts over to Switzerland, its beautiful scenery and historical cathedrals. She drew everyone's attention to the fact that the Allied soldiers met on a mountain side and with padres of all denominations leading, joined in prayerful reveries for an early peace. Miss Jones closed with a prayer for all nations in these critical times.

Mrs. Ackerman's program consisted of three excellent readings and a contest.

Mrs. Putman president of the Guild of St John's Mission and Mrs. Redher brought greetings from that organization paying tribute to Miss Jones' work on behalf of the parish.

Delicious refreshments were served by Miss Jones, assisted by Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Weese, Mrs. Wardner, Mrs. Lent and Mrs. A. Palmer.

Recently this club presented a large Bible, leather bound to the Protestant Chapel at Mountain View Air Station and in recognition of the gift there was received the following letter addressed to Dr Semple. "Just received the family Bible presented by the United Prince Edward-Belleville Women's Club, I can assure you that we are deeply grateful for this and for many other kindnesses you have shown to us. The commanding officer joins with me in this expression of gratitude. Would you please extend our sincere thanks to the Women's Club.".

"Yours very sincerely,
"Flight Lieut. W E. Anderson,

THE MARRY-GO-ROUND

Wives—Post-War Model

If wishes were horses, every woman would wish for a helicopter. And if wishes were wives, every man would wish for a miracle!

Every man has a vision of that Pin-perfect Being—a beautiful, tender, interesting, but non-interfering wife!

That's what a man subconsciously desires. A wife, like his watch, always handy when she is wanted and never in the way when she isn't wanted.

A wife whose chatter won't interfere with his reading of the newspaper at breakfast—and whose love of an argument won't interfere with his digestion at dinner.

A girl whose sense of humor won't upset his amour propre—and whose Scotch conscience won't interfere with his good times or cast a gloom on his merrier amusements.

A patient Griselda whose strict principles won't interfere with his Sunday golf—and whose suspicions won't interfere with his Saturday night conviviality, whether it's bowling, poker, the flowing bowl, or craps.

A woman whose social ambitions and night-club dates won't spoil his evening's rest—and whose nightly questionnaire won't spoil his sleep.

A wife whose scruples won't put a blight on his little self-indulgences and bachelor hab whose prejudices won't frigh all his bachelor friends an dies.

Whose sensitiveness and won't make him afraid to his honest opinions—and jealousy won't interfere w admiring other women o ally.

WAR TOUCHES THE OLD AND WEAK

During the evacuation of Calais, this old lady had to be carried to safety across the Calais canal. When the Canadians opened a major assault they stopped only long enough to permit the civilians to evacuate the city. With the fall of Calais, the Allies have eliminated all major German strongholds along the Channel coast opposite England, with the exception of Dunkerque. About 4,000 Germans were captured in Calais.

$15,000 IS NEEDED FOR US TO CARRY ON OUR WORK... WON'T YOU HELP?

CAMPAIGN SEPT. 25th to Oct. 7th

We, in Belleville, are an outstanding example of good neighbors. We have an understanding, a mutual confidence, a good fellowship of one another. We speak the same language, enjoy the same jokes, sing the same songs, and work and worship to the same ends. Yes, from the time we're born until we die of old age, we stick together and be kind and thoughtful of one another. To-day, good citizens are working shoulder to shoulder in four different welfare services in Belleville to supply the young and old, the sick and lonely with help. We, in Belleville, are proud of the way all stick together and help in any way they possibly can. We know our objective will be reached because the citizens of Belleville will again, as in the past give generously to a cause they know is necessary.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Sailor Wonders If He Must Marry Girl He No Longer Loves

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I became engaged to a girl before I left for overseas. I wasn't exactly crazy about her, but the going away and the war marriages and all that got me. So I joined the procession and became engaged. Overseas, I was in the hospital and the nurse who took care of me was an angel—just that.

I fell for her to a degree that I never thought possible to a guy like me. Believe it or not she responded. I told her about the girl I'd become engaged to before I went overseas. She declined to go on with our friendship, but said if I were ever free to look her up.

Now, I don't want to be a heel, Miss Fairfax, and if I'm in honor bound to this other girl I want to do the right thing. But it's going to be pretty grim sort of duty.

Just a Sailor Man.

It would be a good deal grimmer for the girl you left behind you, if you went on with this engagement which was ill-considered in the first place and then married her. There was an old Victorian tradition that ruined many lives in our grandfather's day to the effect that a man had to go through with an engagement once he had proposed and been accepted.

But in these days, when women are considered to be people with the same responsibilities as men, that sort of misfortune of going on with a marriage just because you engaged yourself is regarded as absurd. Face your guns, write a letter to the girl and tell her you no longer love her. That's the kindest thing you can do. And who knows perhaps she's managed a second string to her bow while you have been overseas.

Husband Accuses Wife of Giving Money to Her Family When She Pays Old Debts

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband and I are always arguing over money matters. We have three children, and he makes a good salary, but we owe some debts which accumulated when he was out of work for nine months. I'm trying to catch up on these bills, and he asks for an accounting of every penny, and then does not believe me when I say I'm paying up old debts. He accuses me of giving money to my family. My family has a business and can retire on what they've saved, so don't need my money. My husband thinks they should give us money.

He thinks I should be willing to stay home with the children and says I'm selfish because I want to get someone to stay with them so I can go out for a good time occasionally. I've often thought of leaving, but I'd have to go without the children which would break my heart, as I couldn't support myself and three children. Will you advise me what to do, please?

D.

The only way to deal with a situation of this sort is to turn over the old bills to your husband and have him pay them. In this way he'll understand where the money goes.

Can't you reason with your husband and talk him out of his old-fogyism, such as thinking that a woman with three small children doesn't occasionally require a little recreation?

Of course, you're not serious when you say you've thought of leaving home. No decent woman would ever desert her children, I'll agree you've a tough problem on your hands. Still, men of this type have often become more reasonable when they realize their selfishness.

Is Aware She's a Victim of Jealousy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 19, engaged to a grand boy of 22. We are deeply in love and are planning for our future together. There is one thing that I'm sure will stand in the way of our happiness, and that is my insane jealousy. I become jealous of trivial things, such as when he looks at another girl. It seems to me he's comparing me to her and possibly wishing he were engaged to her instead of to me.

He doesn't suspect this as being the reason for my moodiness when we're out together. I love him so much that I want to break myself of this terrible habit. Can you advise me please?

A. C.

There used to be an old copybook maxim to the effect that a knowledge of one's faults is the first step toward a cure. Now you know you're jealous, that it's spoiling your life at present, and is likely to ruin it in the future if you marry this man you love.

Why don't you take yourself in hand. Steel yourself to overcome these pangs. Remember that jealousy is a form of fear. Have you any reason to fear, when your fiance has chosen you in preference to other girls? Have more self-confidence; think better of yourself. Hundreds of my correspondents have told me they have cured themselves of this gnawing canker.

Objects to Parting With His Suspenders

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm an ex-serviceman, honorably discharged from the army. I'm brushing up on my neglected school work before I apply to the Veterans Administration for free college training. I have a comfortable room in a nice clean house. The landlady is not a grouch but seems to me over-particular.

I sat on the front porch in my shirt sleeves and suspenders, and next morning got a sour note from her saying she'd stand the shirt sleeves but not the suspenders. And if I went on her porch like that again I'd have to leave. What's the law in this case?

W. G. H.

The law would probably sustain your constitutional rights to health, wealth and the pursuit of happiness, the latter doubtless including the privilege of wearing suspenders on the front porch. But why make an issue of anything so simple? As long as you've asked me to umpire, I suggest you go to a department store and buy yourself a belt and discard the suspenders. Suspenders have been used by comic supplement artists so long in portraying funny characters that I doubt if Apollo himself would look well in them.

What Becomes of Wedding and Engagement Rings After Divorce?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When a man and woman are divorced from each other, is the woman supposed to return her wedding and engagement ring to the man she divorced?

T. A. P.

The return of a wedding and engagement ring after divorce is optional. It's not considered good taste for a woman to wear her wedding ring after the decree is final. Some women continue to wear their engagement rings after divorce, as there is nothing to tag the ring with a previous matrimonial fiasco.

A Young Marine Suggests All Types of Amusement

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm only 14 years old and have met a sailor who is 18 years of age. He asked me to write to him which I did. In his first letter to me he asked me to go dancing, skating or bowling with him the next time he came home to our town. Shall I go with him?

He also said he was sending me a gift. What it is I don't know, but do you advise me to accept it? My mother is dead, and my father works all day, so I am coming to you for a solution of my problem. I'm not the type of girl who stands on street corners so that the boys can whistle at her.

R. A. R.

If you do go out with this sailor—and fourteen is terribly young to have dates—I hope you won't take a drop of anything to drink. That's where the trouble begins, but unfortunately doesn't end—taking little drinks "just to be sociable."

If the present he has for you is some trifle he's picked up at a souvenir stand, it will be all right for you to accept it. If it's anything expensive like a piece of jewelry, taking it would be in very bad taste.

Having no mother, and a father who is away all day, you must watch your step, and then some.

Stepfather Objects to Wife Keeping House for Daughter Temporarily in Hospital

Dear Miss Fairfax:

While my wife and her two married daughters contribute largely to the maintenance of our home, still I feel a man should be at the head of his household and his wishes observed.

My wife's daughter pleaded with her mother to come to her home and keep things going when her fourth child was born. I didn't favor this arrangement, as I'm not one of those men skillful about a house. I dislike cooking and cleaning. My son-in-law wrote that his allowance to us of $40 a month would be stopped unless my wife would come and help.

Over my protest she left. We would find it difficult to make out, as we have only a small pension. These girls are my step-daughters.

W. P. B.

It seems to me any man having the most casual interest in his own welfare would have raised no objection about his wife going to her daughter's to help out when the baby was born. You tell me your step-daughters make a generous allowance toward the upkeep of your home. Why cut the plank from under your feet?

Besides your wife naturally has some interest in her daughter's welfare at such a time. Your protest strikes me as unreasonable.

When Parents are Opposed to Foreigners — All Foreigners

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 18 very much in love with a boy who is also in love with me. I have known him all my life and we were practically brought up together.

He has been overseas and is now in an Army hospital in this country where I have visited him several times. Before he went into the service we wanted to marry, but my parents disapproved. They think I can do better. My father has even told me I'd have to leave if I marry him.

About the only think he knows against him is that he is of a nationality my father doesn't like, but I think we're all Americans, and I don't understand why my father should hold this against the boy who was really born in this country.

We plan to become engaged on my birthday, which is soon, and want to marry shortly after that. We don't like to marry without my parents' consent but what else can we do?

H. B. A.

For the time being, the majority of people in this country are bitterly opposed to one of the enemy nations, which is understandable. But why your father should be opposed to the nation you mention is a mystery to me. Doesn't he know they have contributed tremendously to the world's civilization and culture? That they are a most gifted people and furthermore, the boy wasn't born and brought up in that country, but is American like yourself.

I believe your parents will see the light and agree to your marrying a young man whom you've known all your life, and who has been wounded in the defense of his country.

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Why Not Consult Him?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Our wedding anniversary and my husband's birthday are the same date the first part of December. As a gift for these two occasions I would like to give him a wedding ring. Would this be proper?

Wondering

Of course there isn't any rule about this, and I think it would be a fine gift for you to give your husband IF you are absolutely positive that he wishes to wear a wedding ring. Some men do, and others strongly object to wearing any kind of ring. Unless you are sure about this, I think it would be a mistake to give him this ring as a "surprise" present. Better talk it over with him, if you haven't already done so. And if he's enthusiastic about your idea, I think it's better, too, to let him choose the style, and particularly the width, he prefers.

No Shepherdess, Please!

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My daughter is being married in church (she is to wear a white satin gown) and has been planning to have only one attendant, a maid of honor. I have an 8-year-old niece who very much wants to be in the bridal party. A friend suggests that she could be a shepherdess (carrying a shepherd crook) wearing a long gown of the same style and color as the maid of honor wears, and walk first in the procession. Would this be proper? Or is there some other part she could take?

N. A.

Please don't let this friend persuade you and your daughter to have any such musical comedy feature in the procession! It's theatrical, bad taste.

In the first place, you don't tell me what your daughter's preference is as to having your niece in her bridal party. Would she prefer to have her original plan stand, to have only one attendant? If, however, she wishes to have your niece in the wedding party, she could be a flower girl, dressed in a simple white or colored party frock (long, if your daughter wishes), perhaps carry a small Colonial bouquet, or similar nosegay, and wear a narrow wreath of small artificial flowers on her head. In the processional, the flower girl walks directly in front of the bride and her father; in the recessional, she walks directly after the bride and bridegroom.

Welcome For a Returning Hero

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My brother is overseas, and has written us that he expects to come home in a few weeks. We are planning to have a Welcome Home party, inviting his friends.

1. Do you think it would be a nice plan to have the living-room decorated with red, white and blue?
2. And for refreshments would it be all right to serve sandwiches, coffee and ice cream?
3. Since we wouldn't know what gift would be appropriate to give him at that time would it be all right to give the party without giving him a gift?

Margaret

1. An excellent plan.
2. Yes. If you want to, add some cookies or small cakes to eat with the ice cream. And if you would like to plan to have the guests drink a toast to his homecoming, serve punch or some other cool drinkable.
3. A gift isn't necessary for this occasion.

Are You Tactful?

If you weren't born tactful, you can train yourself to be tactful. Stop... look... think before you speak. Learn to be aware of the feelings, reactions, sensibilities of other people. Tact is a priceless grace, a priceless asset for every contact you have in your life.

A Change in Wedding Plans

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am the mother of the bride-to-be at a church wedding, the latter part of October. My daughter had planned to be married in the afternoon, and all our "attire plans" had been made. But now the wedding hour has been changed to an evening hour . . . and we are completely disturbed about the proper attire for everyone concerned. I realize that a seven o'clock evening wedding in church should be "formal" for all. However it is difficult to nowadays get formal clothes and in our community one does not use them much these days. I do not wish guests to buy clothes for this wedding, for to me it really seems wrong for people to spend money now on clothes they really do not need and most likely will not wear again, at least for the duration. I feel as if I'd like to add a P.S. on every invitation, saying "Buy War Bonds with the money you would spend on clothes, and wear what you have!" It is indeed unfortunate that we had to change the wedding hour.

Then there is the question of what I should wear. Since the bride is to wear a white satin gown with train, and a short veil, I suppose I should wear a formal evening gown. Should I, or would a dinner gown be acceptable? The saleswoman whom I have consulted assures me the dinner dress is absolutely all right; however, your advice will settle the question.

The bridegroom will be in uniform, and so will the best man. My husband, who will give the bride in marriage, refuses to wear formal evening clothes, and the ushers also hate them. So may all the civilian men in the wedding party wear tuxedos?

H. F.

I beg you, dear lady, not to let your worry about proper attire keep you from enjoying the plans for your daughter's wedding. "Take it easy," as the currently popular song so wisely advises, for in these wartime days one doesn't expect very much formality. It is reasonable for people to "make what they have, do" . . . and this makes sense.

In the first place, for your comfort, let me assure you that you are under a misapprehension in thinking that the seven o'clock evening hour is more "formal" than an afternoon hour. It isn't. The degree of formality, for any hour of the day or evening, is established by the bride's attire. Regard your daughter's wedding as a semi-formal evening wedding, and attire problems will straighten themselves out. Your daughter's gown may then appropriately have a short train, and this, with a short veil and small bouquet, indicates semi-formality. Then the bride's father and the civilian ushers may appropriately wear tuxedos. Then too dinner dresses will be appropriate for you, for the bridegroom's mother, as well as for the bridesmaids. They will be appropriate too for the women guests, but today, if a woman guest finds it inconvenient to wear a dinner dress (perhaps because she hasn't one, perhaps because of travel difficulties, or any other reason), she certainly shouldn't worry about this . . . a dressy afternoon dress, either long or street-length, is permissible, and she can be comforted by the fact that undoubtedly there will be many other guests similarly attired. (If they ask you about this, which they may, graciously assure them about it, adding perhaps, "We want Joan's wedding to be simple and lovely, but in these wartime days, of course we don't want any 'fuss and feathers'.")

BABY'S UPSET STOMACH QUICKLY CORRECTED

BABY'S little "Tummy" is often easily upset. It is easily righted again, too, if you know just how to do it. Let Mrs. M. S. Alsey, of London, Ont., tell you: "Baby's Own Tablets are a great help at the first sign of upset stomach, during teething time or when a cold is coming on. They work quickly yet gently to carry away poisons and promote quiet sleep. Walking floors at night is unknown in our home."

And Mrs. W. R. Sharp says: "I nursed my baby shortly after being alarmed over a motor accident and that upset her almost to the point of convulsions. I gave her Baby's Own Tablets and she soon stopped crying—went to sleep."

Equally effective for teething troubles, constipation, simple fever and diarrhoea. Sweet-tasting, easily crushed to a powder, if desired—prompt in action. No "sleepy" stuff—no dulling effect. Buy a box today for sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Money back if not satisfied.

Watson Falls for Old Ruse And Rasputin Throws Pride Of Fans Clear of the Ring

"Whipper" Looked Down to Watch Mad Russian and That Was End

REFEREE ATTACKED

(By K. J. C.)

Barnum was right—

There is a sucker born every minute—

Wednesday night's sucker at the Hume Arena was none other than "Whipper Billie" Watson, the wrestling pride of Toronto and such environs, who fell for a trick, that is as old as the ring game itself.

By now it is easy to gather "The Whip" lost a wrestling bout in Belleville. And that in itself should be sporting headlines, regardless as to what your opinions are of the grunt and groan business.

Apparently the Hume Arena is getting to be a stumbling block for top-ranking grapplers. It wasn't so long ago Frank Sexton's two-year undefeated term was broken in the midst of local clietele. Now comes one Ivan Rasputin, the Mad Russian and exponent of the Communistic "bear hug" to make the proverbial ring monkey out of Canada's favorite—"Whipper Billie" Watson. Each One a Fall.

It all came about rather simply—each member of the main attraction had gained a fall and the playful (?) principles were well at the business of employing favorite holds when suddenly Ivan (the Russian) Rasputin landed plumply on his rear end, from which he promptly bounced, a la rubber ball. In his best possum-like manner the cagey Russian began a series of Sherlock Holmes antics about the canvas of the ring on bended knee indicating there was a colored article in the family wood yard, now accepted as the Hume Arena canvas. "There tacks stuck up in that thar canvas," whispered Ivan without even the resemblance of a Russian dialect. Being somewhat of a curious nature both Watson and Referee Bert Maxwell approached the indicated spot upon which Ivan (the Rough) still crouched.

Fell For Ruse.

Need we go any further—falling for the "tack gag" Watson gazed upon the mat. The next thing "Whipper Bill" gazed upon were the rafters atop the Hume Arena. Why? Well the Russian merely picked "The hip" up bodily and pitched him far out of the ring. Even farther than McQuinn hit one of Mort Cooper's fast ones in the world series game yesterday. Still bewildered Referee Maxwell counted Watson out, declared Rasputin the winner and both Maxwell and Watson were reported looking for tacks long after the Russian had dissociated himself with the local palace de sport.

Rasputin took the first fall with the application of his famed "bear hug", but the popular Watson bounced back to evade such attacks and in so doing picked the Russian villain up and crashed him for a press to even matters. It was following this Watson fell for the Barnum slogan.

Had to Rescue Referee.

When it comes to wrestling news, last night took the proverbial cake. Not only was the great Watson defeated, but in the semi-final police had to rescue referee Cliff Fox, who was hit over the noggin by a female fan, who removed her shoe for the attack, that left arbiter Fox with a three-inch gash in his forehead. As the result of such antics, however, police removed a civilian from the arena, and later had to caution the excited feminine patron against the practice of removing her "kicks" as a weapon of pugnacious attacks. All of the donnybrook came after Dr. Len Hall, a self-styled ring villain from Hollywood, had all but beaten Pierre DeGlane's ancestry into wishing they could roll over in their graves. However, DeGlane weathered Hall's unorthodox attacks and confidentially got in a few socks himself before the final hand-shaking ended the scrap. That's where Referee Fox came into the picture, and is he sore today, both physically and mentally.

Too Light For Dunlop.

In the curtain-raiser Jim Burke, a Buffalo lad, was too light for Al Dunlop, who used the New York State lad for a human football to win in short order. There is one object in the wrestling business — namely keep your shoulders off the mat. What promoter Tunney proposes in Belleville next week, now that Watson has been counted out, is a problem. After all in such a business, created by Barnum, your guess may be better than even any one of the Ringling Brothers.

New York, Oct. 5 — (AP)—Overseas sports roundup:

Nick of time.

The Yanks won't have the laugh on "Yank" this week and Sgt. Dan Polier, sports editor of the soldier paper, is heaving sighs of relief... the current issue, printed a month ago, carried this sports overline:—"Don't sell Browns short in world series."

New Guinea Gold:

Pte. Woodrow Boone, former Gadsden, Ala., sports scribe, tells of New Guinea's football game, Sept. 10, 1944..."Over 3,000 khaki-clad fans yelled as Sgt. George A. Maye of Greensboro, N.C. (N.S. State) smashed over guard to lead the Engineers to a 6-0 victory over the Quartermasters . . . It was fitting that two hard fighting Negro teams should write the first chapter of New Guinea's football history. They are playing a great part in this theatre . . . to you critical Monday quarterbacks at home I report that the ball-handling was pretty ragged (New Guinea practices are limited to less than an hour in the cooler part of mornings), and the plays weren't any too well executed because G. I. Joe pulls guard nights and hauls grub in the daytime."

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

In charge of the New York Rangers 11th annual hockey school at Winnipeg; coach Frank Boucher declared last night N.H.L. players now in the armed forces should have little difficulty in getting back into their stride after war service. He believed such puck-chasers would be in good physical condition and could round into form after a few games. Now 42 years of age, Boucher said he would not play in any N.H.L. games this season. Last year he participated in 14 matches.

A plebiscite is to be placed before the ratepayers of Hamilton in the December civic election for the proposed construction of a $1,000,000 arena and auditorium and a $500,000 parks plan as postwar undertakings. This was decided at last night's meeting of the city council on a 13-3 vote.

Jimmy Creed, owned by S. C. Thompson, New Ross, Ind., set a world record by 2:00 1½ for two-year-old pacers in the $3,000 Two Gaits Farm Stake, feature of yesterday's Lexington, Ky., trots. Titan Hanover, from Goshen, N.Y., trotted a mile in 2:00 for a new mark for the same age.

Golden Flash swept all three heats of the 2:28 trot or pace which featured the harness card at the Teeswater, Ont., fair yesterday, the J. A. Bannerman entry leading Texas Dawn to the line each time. H. Stewart's Stuart Gratton took all the three heats of the 2:18 event.

The Universal Coolers girls team was charged with 10 errors in the final test of the Brantford softball loop last night, the title going to Waterloo ladies with a 19-1 victory.

The 2:19 feature of the harness meet at the Dorchester, Ont., fall fair yesterday went to Winnie Dolo, owned by P. James, with Pine Ridge Norma second. Laura Belle, from the L. Currie stable, copped the 2:15 event although Babe Grattan Boy took one of the three heats.

St. Louis Browns Cop First Game of World Series 2-1 On Two Hits in Same Inning

Moore Singles and McQuinn Parks One in Bleachers for the Two Counters

CARDS SCORE IN 9TH

By JACK HAND
(AP Sport Writer)

St. Louis, Oct. 5 — (AP) — They are calling St. Louis Browns the hitless wonders today because they copped the opening game of the first all-St. Louis world series, 2-1, on two hits and a team batting average of .069 but manager Luke Sewell will take three more of the same with no squawks.

In an effort to make it two straight over the Cardinals today, Sewell named right-hander Nelson Potter, his top winner with a 19-7 win mark, to oppose Billy Southworth's prize left-hander, Max Lanier, who won 17 and lost 12 this season.

After the Brownies took the opener, the series odds fell to 9 to 10 and take your choice.

When Mort Cooper watched his hopes for a first-game victory go sailing away on the wings of Geo. McQuinn's two-run homer, it was just another link in a chain, that has shackled the Cardinal right-hander in his campaign against American League hitters.

Cooper picked up right where he left off last year in the Cards' losing series with New York Yankees. Bill Dickey's two-run homer brought the Bombers a 2-0 series-winning game and sent Cooper to a sixth-inning shower.

Cooper Just Can't Win

Three times in the big series and twice in the all-star game the Cards' ace fire-baller has bounced too many hits off American League bats. Only once has he gone to the winner's circle — in the second game of the series last year. Maybe it's the big No. 13 on his back.

Potter was expected to be Sewell's first-game choice but he passed him for Denny Galehouse and saw his judgment justified yesterday when the crafty curve-baller sprinkled 7 Red Bird hits and held a shutout up to the ninth inning.

Although Mort Cooper and Blix Donnelly, who teamed up to gain the unenviable distinction of losing the first two-hitter in series history, outshone Galehouse in sheer brilliance, it was the former defence worker, who had it in the pinches. Denny pulled out of tight spots in the second and third with vital strikeouts of Mort Cooper and Whitey Kurowski and bore down to retire the side after Marty Marion had scored the only Red Bird run.

Not Capacity Crowd

A crowd of 33,242 that paid $149,268 into the kitty, thrilled to George (Lefty) McQuinn's fourth-inning home run clout atop the right field pavilion following Gene Moore's single to right. That was all the American League hitting and all the scoring but it was enough.

McQuinn's poke must have been doubly satisfying to a man who spent eight years hanging around the Yankees' farm system, obscured in the shadow of the late Lou Gehrig.

The smooth-fielding Virginian also played for a time with Toronto of the International League.

The first sacker's wallop wouldn't have been enough if Moore hadn't banged a single into right field a few seconds earlier. The veteran of six big league clubs, who was obtained in a trade from Washington during spring training, was another example of Sewell's uncanny ability to pick the right man at the proper minute. The skipper had dabbled with the idea of using Milt Byrnes in right and had Moore in and out of the lineup in the closing drive.

No Hits Till Fourth

Mort Cooper struck out a man in each of the first three frames and didn't allow a hit until Moore punched his single with two out in the fourth.

Galehouse had his troubles in the first three heats, when he yielded five of the seven Card blows but seemed to get a new lease on life when McQuinn hoisted one of Cooper's fast ones out of the playing field.

When the pressure was on, Galehouse was superb. After Marion smacked the first of two doubles in the second and Emil Verban singled, he struck out Mort Cooper. Following safeties by Johnny Hopp and Ray Sanders and a pass to Walker Cooper, which loaded them with one out in the third, Denny whiffed Whitely Kurowski and made Danny Litwhiler force Hopp. Again in the ninth, Marion doubled to lead off but had to move around on an infield out and score on pinch hitter Ken O'Dea's fly to centre.

Sport Shorts From Britain

By ALLAN NICKELSON
((Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 5 —(CP)— Six-year-old Sugar Palm, the most popular horse of Britain's wartime racing, gained the title of 1944 sprint champion by winning the Nunthorpe Stakes over five furlongs at Newmarket in sensational style.

Maj. Alex Bonsor's chestnut gelding was so badly placed a furlong from home he didn't appear to have chance. Then, five lengths behind the leaders, he began a whirlwind dash up the hill and caught Superior, second-place finisher owned by Flour Magnate James Rank, in the last few strides. Turf followers said that rarely has a racer made up such an amount of ground in the final 300 yards of a race.

Forty-year-old Charlie Elliott, who manages weekend leave from the army to participate in meets, rode Sugar Palm, which paid off at 8-1.

The race was a fiasco for supporters of Brunel, a firm 3-1 favorite, and the much-fancied Mehrali. When the starting tape went up they were caught broadside, left standing and did not participate in the actual running. They were considered, however, as having taken part in the race so that backers did not even get a run for their money.

A peacetime provision merchant and a wartime physical training instructor in the army, husky Joe Mercer has been appointed captain of England's international football team.

Joe, who plays halfback for Everton of the Football League North, succeeds Stan Cullis, great centre half of the Wolverhampton Wanderers, who now is in Italy with the British army.

Mercer, whose ever-present smile hides the nervous tension under which he always goes into games, led his side against Wales recently in the season's first international.

Both Mercer and his predecessor, Cullis, come from the Cheshire town of Ellesmere Port and both learned their football at school there.

The English team includes two new "caps" in Jim Flewin, Portsmouth centre half, and Mort Mortensen, Blackpool inside left.

EXPECT BRIGHTER LIGHTS

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

On Him.

During a lull in the conversation at a dinner party the hostess was unfortunate enough to emit a loud, rasping hiccup. A Frenchman, sitting by her, immediately apologized profusely, as if he had committed the faux pas. When the ladies had left the dining-room an American asked the Frenchman why he had acted in this manner.

"As monsieur knows, we are a chivalrous people," was the reply. "I saw that madame was embarrassed, so I tried to throw the blame on myself."

Presently the men joined the ladies upstairs. After a little while the American found himself in conversation with his hostess in the middle of a group of guests.

Suddenly the alarming incident was repeated — the hostess hiccuped again.

The American turned quickly to the assembled guests, and announced with an engaging smile, "Folks, this one is on me!"

Company is Coming.

Provincial softball celebrities from various parts of Ontario will be in Belleville on Thanksgiving Day for the Fort Erie-Belleville "Marines" Intermediate O.A.S.A. championship series, so says Harry Rollins, first vice president of the provincial softball body.

Included in the visiting guests will be George Spooner, president of the O.A.S.A. from Galt, Frank Feaver, secretary of the Association from Hamilton, L. Alguire, O.A.S.A. treasurer, and of course our own Harry Rollins. No doubt Dave Leether of Peterborough and maybe Ernie Simpson of Kingston will also take in the holiday games here.

Skipper Max Peoples announced today the Marines would leave here Friday evening by motor car and drive past Toronto some distance before retiring for a night's rest. On Saturday morning they will continue to Fort Erie and play a late afternoon game. No doubt the boys will try the night spots of Buffalo before commencing the long trek home Sunday.

Signs of Winter.

Although the matter of financing a new arena in Peterborough isn't meeting with the success it should in such a centre, hockey is still utmost in the minds of Liftlock City fans. Here's the latest puck chatter from Br'r. Fred Craig's column . . .

"With no prospects of hockey in Peterborough again this winter some of the local puck chasers have decided to move on to foreign fields for the coming ice campaign. Among them is Johnny Godfrey, star defence player of the Petes who is working out just now with the Detroit Red Wings at Windsor and will probably wind up for the season with the Wings' farm team, the Pittsburg Hornets. Johnnie played a lot of hockey for Peterborough in a comeback after illness had almost ended the sporting career of the former New York Rover. After playing one season here under difficulties the fans knew nothing about he underwent another operation during the following summer in order to fit himself for hockey. There isn't a gamer athlete anywhere than the same Godfrey and few smarter defence men. Another local player who is also likely to be with the Pittsburg Hornets this season is Jack Jopling who leaves today to report to the Red Wings' farm team. Jopling, before enlisting in the R.C.A.F., was one of the stars of the Peterborough team and he played fine hockey while with the Air Force in England. Back now to civilian life he should make a place for himself with the Hornets."

Remember When . . .

Lou Nova of San Pransisco got up off the canvas in the third round to go on and batter Gunnar Barlund, Finnish heavyweight, into submission winning on a technical knockout in the seventh round of their 15-round bout at New York five years ago tonight.

Speaking of boxing, Bill Crawford's local stable of leather-pushers fared quite well at Oshawa Tuesday night in another of those classy inter-city boxing shows. Ted Stevens and Rans Bush won their matches, while George Palmateer looked a lot better against Coy Wheeler and gained a split decision with the Motor City battler. Joey Downs, who beat Joey McPhee here last week, dropped the return decision and here should be a natural for Matchmaker Bill Crawford to line up for his next show in a third and decided meeting between these two crowd-pleasing boxers. Dick Rosatti, who hadn't trained for the Oshawa show, substituted for a missing Toronto scrapper and lost a close decision. Incidentally, we forgot to mention the fine work of Announcer Maurice Callaghan at the last boxing show here.

Home to Roost.

It took the American League ever since 1906 to get even with the immortal Chicago "hitless wonders" Cubs, but yesterday the St. Louis Browns proved a ball game can be won on two hits. Manager Billie Southworth used Cardinal pinch hitters lavishly, after Gene Moore singled in the fourth and McQuinn homered to give the Browns a 2-0 edge. Frankly it was the first time in history that a world series game was won on two hits, but the Browns of 1944 have had the habit of bunching a few hits to win. The fact they've won 12 of their last 13 games, which includes yesterday's series win, speaks for itself. Big Mort Cooper pitched himself a superb game, until lifted for a pinch hitter. However, he eased slightly on McQuinn and therein lies the tale.

While all of this was going on don't forget Danny Galehouse, a surprise starter with a record of but nine wins as against 10 losses, scattered seven Cardinal hits in a masterful manner and turned in as good a hurling effort as the majority of winning series pitchers. Galehouse weathered early Cardinal attacks and twice proved his mound prowess when the Cards were in position to score, but still Galehouse fired a game that today will go down in history.

TO PREVENT 'CIVILIAN HUNGER' IN ITALY.

Washington, Oct. —(AP)— President Roosevelt today summoned a delegation of supply officers from Italy to review measures for preventing "civilian hunger, sickness and fear" during the coming winter.

Steps are being taken, Mr. Roosevelt said, "to enable the Italian people to throw their full resources into the fight against Germany and Japan."

ONTARIO FARMERS
1000 MEN WANTED
Now!

THIS is an appeal to THE FARMERS OF ONTARIO. The Packing Plants of Ontario, which process and ship your livestock for export, ARE SERIOUSLY SHORT OF MEN. Every available Farmer of Ontario is urged to offer his services for employment in one of the Packing Plants in this province as soon as the essential work of the farm is completed. OVER 1,000 men are required to start in the month of September alone. Good hourly wages will be paid. Transportation to the plant will be provided. Assistance will be given in arranging board and room.

With full staffs, the Packing Plants of Canada have ample capacity to handle even the tremendously increased numbers of cattle, sheep and swine, which Canadian farmers have ready for market this year. When operating to capacity the Packing Plants can keep the market cleared and livestock can be slaughtered, processed and shipped at its most profitable time, when it is at its market peak. Thus, losses which occur when animals are held beyond the peak—through additional feeding costs, through falling away from peak condition and through the danger to price structures when supply threatens to exceed demand—are avoided.

Last year several hundred Ontario farmers volunteered for work in the plants in processing their own products and protecting their own interests. Production for export this year has increased by 40%. Available man-power has shrunk by 28%.

The Ontario Farm Service Force, in conjunction with Employment and Selective Service has undertaken the task of raising sufficient help from Ontario Farmers to keep Packing Plants operating to capacity this year. This department of the Ontario government's Department of Agriculture feels that this extension of its service is as vitally important to the interests of the farmers of this province as anything it has yet undertaken. The need of meat as a primary essential food to our Allied Armies, to the people of Great Britain and to the starving millions in countries being liberated by our victorious armies, is the basic consideration. In addition, efficient operation in the processing and marketing of livestock is necessary in protecting the greatest export market ever opened to Canadian farmers.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 696

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Maybe a bridge rule seems worth more when it is wrapped up in a flock of words. But if you like quality instead of quantity, my booklet of Horse Sense bidding certainly has it.

On one small page therein will be found all the opening bids of more than one. Also their responses. Also defensive bids and the responses thereto. All on the same page.

In half a nut shell you will find there the rule for an opening three bid (in a major suit) and its responses. All that is confined to five short lines. Few words have been wasted in the stating.

An opening of three spades or hearts shows (1) a seven card or longer quite solid suit; and (2) a sure outside trick; and asks partner (3) bid game in that suit with one trick; or (4) invites a slam with two sure tricks.

Thus, the first response to a three bid admits whether or not a slam should be investigated. If responder bids four in that suit, abandon slam. If responder bids anything else, consider slam.

Suppose partner starts with an opening of three hearts when you have this hand:

♠K J 6 4 2
♥8 6 3
♦K Q 4
♣7 2

Your hand contains four tricks. An opening three bid usually expects to take eight tricks. Therefore, you can already see what appears to be 12 tricks in your pair.

Given a chance to develop the 12 tricks, partner might take them. But without two sure tricks in your hand, opponents are no doubt able to take two tricks in a hurry. So, bid four hearts and say so.

Change your two kings to two aces and the outlook is different. Because then, before opponents can garner two tricks, partner can swing into action.

With two aces instead of two kings, bid three spades. Not because you have any idea of playing it in spades. But only to tip off partner that he may sound out slam stuff.

A hint to the wise puts them wise.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Oct. 5 — (CP) — There is much uneasy speculation around some sport camps in Quebec, where the boys are wondering just how tough Premier Duplessis is going to be in his treatment of what he terms "rackets" in the Quebec world of sport.

O course, none of us would willingly admit that there actually is anything untoward or even odoriferous in sportdom anywhere — not even in the wrestling ranks — but the Premier seems to think there are certain shady elements which need investigation.

The whole business is very painful indeed to the gentlemen whose only desire has been to provide a trusting public with a wholesome, entertaining bill of sport fare. That there might be a few black sheep among them is a possibility that the average fan doesn't think about, as long as he is entertained.

At any rate, it is going to be a slow and tedious process to uncover these "rackets" and do anything constructive about the whole thing. Premier Duplessis is a brave man even to think of attempting it!

No Hint of Scandal

Striking proof that big league baseball is strictly on the up and up was given by Joe Burns and Doug Vaughan in the Windsor Star after St. Louis Browns nudged Detroit for the American League flag. The border sportsters reported that Washington Senators, who downed Tigers and let the Browns slide into the championship, almost to a man wanted the Missourians to lose out. But that didn't stop them from putting everything they had into their games with Detroit. There couldn't be any better proof of the honesty of the players than the way they humbled Tigers and let their enemies the Browns win out.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma still belongs to the Gils, meaning Give Lifts to Servicemen and being 6 ladies with private uniforms and after supper she said to pop, I've decided to keep a little diary about my work with the Gils, Willliam, so I can look fallward to having something exciting to look back on.

That's an idea, but what's going to make it exciting? pop said, and ma said. That's just where the novelty comes in. I'm going to try to worm some little story of adventure out of every serviceman I give a lift to, some little tale from his experiences in action. I expect to collect just dozens of thrilling little stories to put in my diary, and in fact I started the experiment today when I picked up a boy just loaded down with meddles and ribbons from overseas. Like so many of the boys, he didn't seem to want to talk at first, ma said.

I imagine they usually require a bit of coaxing, pop said, and ma said, This boy actually needed prodding. Finally I asked him point blank if he had ever been shell shocked, and he grudgingly admitted he had. Well that was the grand opening wedge. I asked him if he could recall his impressions at the time, and he told me that everything turned so blank he could hardly remember his name. All he seemed to know was that he had counted 2 thousand and 45 shells breaking in one morning, ma said.

Yee gods, pop said, and ma said, That was my first reaction, too, and I questioned him doubtfully, but he clung like a proverbial leech to his original figure, and then it developed that the shells were eggshells from a special boatload of fresh eggs that had to be scrambled before they went bad, and this boy was doing kitchin police duty at the time. Still, he seemed very serious about it, so maybe it really did effect him, William, she said.

Pop not answering on account of being in back of the sporting page.

WOMEN PAY BIG PRICE FOR POOR "BLOOD MAKE UP"

The women who feel and look "washed out"—limp and droopy—may be paying the price of hemoglobin shortage in the blood. The demands of monthly "periods" pregnancy, etc. all conspire to bring about this shortage of the vital red coloring matter in the red blood cells. Try Dr. Williams Pink Pills.

They help increase hemoglobin where there is a shortage of it due to iron deficiency and help chase away that "leaden" feeling of tiredness so often due to this condition. Start your course of Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. Ask your druggist.

Imperial Grattan Breaks Record At Madoc Fair

Paces Third Mile in Fast Class in 2.05½ to Beat Lady Harvester

PICTON HORSE WINS

Madoc, Oct. 5 — (Staff) — The thudding hoofs of Imperial Grattan, sorrel gelding owned by F. LeBlanc of Earlton, flashed over the speedway turf here on Wednesday in the sensational time of 2.05 1/2 to establish a new track record in mile events held by the Madoc Agricultural Society.

The former record of 2.09 was made several years ago.

The sorrel flash raced to victory in all three heats of the 2.15 class, taking the first in 2.06 1/2; the 2nd in 2.06 and the third in the record-breaking time.

The long rangy racer however was extended to the limit to win. In the most exciting trials, according to veteran horsemen present, ever seen on the local track, Lady Harvester, speedy brown mare owned by J. Naples, raced almost neck and neck in all three heats of the class with the winner.

Nip and Tuck Battle

They got away practically together at starter George Tice's 'Go' and the rest was a nip-and-tuck struggle for the entire mile, in all three heats. In the first chapter, the white-stockinged horse won by a "neck". He increased this margin slightly in the second and was in front by a half-length in the final heat.

Lee Volo, owned by A. D. Thompson, gave a good account of himself in two heats chasing the first and second placers closely to the wire. Patsy McGregor driven by F. Ingles finished with a 3rd and two 4ths.

Starter Tice, a veteran of harness tracks, and one who "knows his horses" stated that the events were beyond doubt the finest ever staged at the Madoc Fair and the best he had seen in years at any fair in the district. "This racing was a treat to watch" was his opinion, and concurred in by his officials.

The Results:

Air Force Bashes Nazi Submarines In Base at Bergen

London, Oct. 4 (CP Cable)—R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. heavy bombers bashed submarines in a base at Bergen, Norway, today on a 1,300-mile foray, one of the longest yet flown in daylight by the British four-engined heavies

That the big fellows may have landed bombs on some U-boats caught flat-footed by the swift shift away from targets in Germany was indicated by the brief Air Ministry communique which said a concentrated attack was made "on submarines and submarine pens."

R.A.F. long-range fighters escorted the bombers, but no enemy aircraft intervened. The attack was said to have been made in good visibility and against moderate anti-aircraft fire.

One Canadian bomber failed to return, an R.C.A.F. communique added.

AMERICAN BRED

By Franken Meloney

CHAPTER 14

"Wain speaking." He guarded his voice to keep from being heard in Ann's room. He was aware, at the same instant of someone downstairs stepping cautiously from the dining room into the hall. That would be Barton. Christopher was tempted to call to him that there was an extension in the library. He was aware, too, of the creak of Helen's door. Ann's sister was evidently not above a little discreet eavesdropping, either.

"You sound sick," Miss Smith said at once. "Like you were speaking from under water with a frog in your throat."

Her female perspicacity irritated him. "You can hear me. Do you want me to yell and wake up the whole house?"

"Oh, is there a house to wake? "Well, you're supposed to be in the Federal Court this afternoon on the Jenkins case and I thought I'd remind you."

"Thanks," he replied.

"Also Mrs. Wain was on the telephone most of yesterday, and she's already called this morning. She says she's got to talk to you, because she has a thousand things to settle about the puppy sweepstakes."

"You settle them for her," Christopher instructed. "You've gotten to know as much about the dog business as I have."

"And the law business?"

"You seem to know as much about that as I do, too. Thanks for the call."

He hung up. Footsteps, now casual, wandered back into the dining room and Helen's door closed almost noiselessly, and then opened again with ostentatious briskness.

"Good morning, Mr. Wain. I'd like to talk to you."

If there were American Grand Duchesses, Christopher decided, Helen would be one of them. To begin with, he had a most difficult time getting in touch with her. Remembering Ann's forwarding address, he had tried Bar Harbor. Bar Harbor had put him on the trail to White Sulphur Springs and, although he hadn't got Helen, he had got a haughty person by the name of Arthur, who was stubbornly reluctant to tell a strange male voice where his, Arthur's wife, could be found in New York.

Eventually, however, Arthur said that Mrs. Huston coud be reached at the Waldorf. Once reached, Helen had exploded right off, like a string of Chinese firecrackes, and it had taken him some time to convince her that Doctor Matheson, the Rivers' old family physician, was taking care of Ann, and that Emma Jeeves was helping.

The presence of Emma Jeeves for Helen. If Emma were in the seemed to be the one bright spot house it meant that her sister was being properly chaperoned. But even so, Helen lost no time in appearing on the scene, with one Tom Barton in tow. Christopher didn't know to this moment where Mr. Barton figured in the set-up, but he carried all the earmarks of an old family friend.

Helen's opening words seemed to bear out that conclusion. "Mr. Barton and I hate to inconvenience you in this way," she commenced, on a circuitous route.

"No inconvenience at all," Christopher returned politely.

"Oh, but it is an inconvenience. I would have had my sister moved immediately to a hospital on my arrival, but Dr. Matheson insisted that she stay here."

"Of course she stays here," Christopher agreed. "It's her home, and you mustn't feel that it's an imposition of any kind."

"But surely Mrs. Wain must be inconvenienced?"

"Not at all," he assured her noncommittally.

Helen was stumped. She wasn't getting anywhere. She made one last effort to establish the situation on a fitting basis of impropriety. "Nevertheless," she wound up, "you can appreciate how distressing this all is for Mr. Barton. When Dr. Matheson comes this morning, I shall have to make him see the good sense of getting Ann back to town at once. In the meantime"—Helen smiled as she swept toward the stairs—"thank you for everything you've tried to do."

Christopher looked after her, scratching his head. This was something else again. What did she mean, 'distressing' for Mr. Barton? Who was this Mr. Barton?

He turned to the door of Ann's bedroom, and tapped lightly. The nurse slipped out.

"Oh, good morning, Mr. Wain. She's better; quite a lot better today. Temperature's almost normal."

"That's wonderful. Any chance of my peeking in at her, do you think?"

"Dr. Matheson said she may have just one visitor if her fever went down."

"Oh," Christopher Wain knew conflict. "Perhaps the one visitor means her sister?" he hazarded.

"Oh, no. Doctor Matheson said it would be better if Mrs. Huston did not see Miss Rivers for the time being."

Christopher commented with a disarming smile, "I dare say that leaves a clear field for me, doesn't it?"

Miss Drew smiled too, and opened the door wider. "Just for a minute or two, and don't let her talk too much."

Christopher walked in, enjoying the sense of having scored first on Mr. Thomas Barton.

"Oh, hello," Ann smiled.

"Well, you are looking better," he essayed, as matter-of-factly as he could.

"You mean I've looked worse than this?" she demanded. "Were people permitted to come around and stare at me?" she pursued in mock outrage.

"Oh, I just poked my head in now and again," he soothed. "You didn't really look so terrible. I mean you weren't dangerously ill."

"Oh, I wasn't, was I? Do you know what I had?"

He shrugged. "A touch of grippe."

"A touch of grippe nothing! I almost had pneumonia!" she sputtered indignantly. "I was at death's door, I'll have you know."

"Oh, stop boasting. There's no such thing as almost having pneumonia. You either have it or you haven't it. If you haven't it, it's grippe. And as for being at death's door"—He gave a snort. "You're talking too much."

"People with touches of grippe can talk as much as they like," Ann pouted.

Christopher turned on his heel. "Very well, good-bye. You just go on and talk to yourself."

"Wait a minute, please. I have something I want to get off my mind."

"What is it?"

"What did I do, or say, when I was out of my head?"

"You didn't open your mouth," he fibbed, "when I was around."

She looked up at him, wondering if he really thought he sounded convincing. She had a vague memory that he had picked her up in his arms out in the barn, that she had screamed like a schoolgirl, and acted like the heroine of a Victorian play. She had probably cried, "Unhand me, sir!"

And very distinctly Ann had a recollection of having had a lot to say about men who ran around carefully concealing the fact that they were married to women called Brenda. She remembered having babbled, too, about reading Brenda's letter—or had she? At any rate, she felt horribly exposed as he stood beside the bed gazing down at her. What did he know, and what did he know she knew? The ony thing to do was to find out.

"How did I get in here that night?" she asked, trying to sound casual.

"I carried you."

"Good Lord, did I faint?"

"No, you just wobbled."

"You have a way of painting such attractive pictures. And how did I get into this?" She gestured about the bed.

"You fell into it." It was one of those succinct, self-contained statements. "Listen. You're talking entirely too much." He glanced toward the door as if he wished the nurse would reappear and stop the conversation.

"So I just fell into bed!" Ann faced his gaze squarely. "Didn't I put up any argument, or anything?"

"Naturally. It's your middle name. Ann Argument Rivers."

She detected evasion in his rather heavy-handed repartee. "Please," she appealed to him seriously, "see this my way. After I'm up, there'll still be matters we'll have to talk over about the farm."

"I don't like to call you names when you're so ill, so"—Ann noticed a little tightening of the lines about Christopher's eyes. — "No more gabbling. I might as well confess that there's someone downstairs who ought to be standing here in my place."

"You mean Helen! You 'phoned her? Why did you?"

"Well, weren't you at death's door?"

"No, I wasn't." Her tone was impatient. "I only had a touch of grippe. There was no need to call the whole militia!"

"The whole militia is right. Mr. Barton here too."

"Oh," she slumped back in her pillows. "It's going to be a bore, but I'll see them."

"You can't," said Christopher smugly.

"Why not?"

"Because I'm seeing you. Doctor's orders that you were only to see one person."

A dimple came slowly. "Well, if it was doctor's orders, I can't do anything about it, can I?"

He studied her. Somehow, that wasn't the right answer. "What is Tom Barton, anyway?" he demanded.

"A stock broker."

"I meant what is he to you?"

"Oh."

"Oh, what?"

"Well, Helen thinks he's engaged to me, and Tom thinks so too."

"And what do you think?"

"I don't know."

"What the blazes right have you got running around not knowing a thing like that?"

"It's something I don't want to talk about."

"It's something you've got to talk about."

So. Now she knew. She could tell by the way he glared at her, that she'd given herself away completely in her delirium. There wasn't a doubt in the world that she'd shouted Brenda's name until the very heavens rang with it.

"I feel too weak for any more discussion," she said faintly.

He looked contrite. "Gosh, I could kick myself."

"So could I."

"Kick you, or me?"

"Both. Wait a minute, don't go—How's Rowdy?"

"Rowdy's fine. She sleeps in the hall outside your room every night. It's the only place we can keep her quiet."

"I want to see her."

"She's out in the kennel now, being fed."

"Hans should know that Rowdy's got to have cod-liver oil and calcium, and she won't eat carrots She's very picky."

"Then Hans'll train her. She'll eat what she gets and like it."

Ann sat up. "She'll do nothing of the kind!"

"I thought you felt weak. Lie back there."

"But you don't understand. I'm showing her at the sweepstakes. I want her to beat Gretel."

A grin tugged at the corners of his lips. "That's nice!"

Nurse Drew came bustling in. "Did you call, Miss Rivers?" She tokk one look at Ann's flushed face and glanced at Christopher reproachfuly. "I think we've had a long visit," said she, donning her most professional manner.

"I think so too," Christopher agreed. He took Ann's hand. "That's swell about Rowdy winning over Gretel. Good luck! I'll send Hans in to see you later on, and you can give him special instructions. They'll be followed ont, I promise."

"That is nice of you!" stressed Ann scathingly.

Ann's sister was lying in wait for him outside the door. And Helen meant business. She gave him a feeling that she was taking him by the ear, although she didn't touch him.

"Young man," she started right off, in her best firecracker manner, "the nurse informed me that I was not permittted to see my own sister. Therefore, I cannot help taking umbrage at the fact that you have been locked in there with her the past fifteen minutes. I think its high time that we came to a complete understanding. Please come downstairs where we can talk."

Dutifully, he followed her to the library, her chosen field of combat. He was aware of Tom Barton in the living room.

"I don't like this whole performance," Helen said flatly. "You have placed Miss Rivers in a compromising position."

"I'm terribly sorry, Mrs Huston, but I don't really see how I have compromised your sister. I'm renting her house. She came here to see the place, and fell ill. I did what I could. I called the doctor, and I called you." He wanted to add that he had not called upon Mr. Tom Barton.

"That isn't the point," Helen persisted firmly.

"I beg your pardon." Christopher was not a lawyer for nothing. The time had come to define the issues involved. "If I haven't touched on the point, just what is the point?"

"The point is that Ann is engaged. It was a harum-scarum piece of foolishness for the girl to rent you Broadfields in the first place. It is, after all, her home. After her marriage, she will want to live here. And then, of course, there is Mrs. Wain. The whole performance is highly undignified and improper. Helen's lips settled into a flat line.

"I can't see that Miss Rivers' engagement has anything to do with the matter," he said civilly. "At any time she wishes to terminate the lease, I shall not be unreasonable. And as for Mrs. Wain—Mrs. Wain and I happen to be no longer married. I hope that that answers all of your questions."

"It answers none of them. It leaves the whole situation even more undignified and improper."

"What does?" Wain asked curiously.

"Your not being married. Ann is a very impressionable girl, flighty and fanciful. Rents the place—gets a job—goes in the dog business—permits her sympathies to be played upon by the first fellow who crosses her path. . . ." Helen's glance was so direct that Christopher glanced behind him to see if she were perhaps including some other miscreant in her wholesale denunciation. It was with difficulty that he restrained a smile. There was no use arguing with Helen or further explaining his position to her.

"Mrs. Huston, I am regretful if you have been embarrassed or inconvenienced," he offered merely. "I have to go into town immediately, and I think that my absence will considerably simplify things for you."

Helen looked more satisfied. She had won her point. "Before you go, however," she detained him, "I would like to discuss with you the extensive improvements that you have made on the farm. Ann is a child in business, as well as in other things."

"Miss Rivers is sufficiently not a child to have discussed the whole matter with me the afternoon she arrived. She may or may not be satisfied with the reliability of her tenant. However I should suggest that you talk that angle over with her personally.'

This was about as close as Christopher permitted himself to lose his temper. There was an embarrassed clearing of a throat at the doorway, and he looked up to see Tom Barton standing there. Tom was apparently in awe of Ann's sister, and was also the kind of a person who preferred life to be without sharp edges.

"So sorry to have had all this come up," Barton remarked vaguely. "Ann's getting sick is just one of those things. Mrs. Huston could stay on here, but I could find quarters in the village I imagine—?" It was the sort of question that ends up in the air, extending to the listener an opportunity to quickly overrule. Christopher good naturedly took the cue.

"I wouldn't hear of it," he said. He ooked at his watch. "I must be off, and the place is yours. I hope you'll be comfortable. Mrs. Johnson is at your service."

Wain nodded and left them, feeling that he did not like Tom Barton. He didn't care for a man who referred to Ann's illness as "one of those things."

He was annoyed to find Tom waiting for him at the front door. "I thought I'd walk out with you to your car," Barton suggesed. "A breah of air will do me good."

Christopher chuckled to himself. It was perfectly obvious that Tom had been sent by Helen to do a little more sizing up, a little further pigeon-holing. Tom cleared his throat: a chronic habit, Christopher noted.

"You raise dogs, I gather?"

FEELS LILE DIFFERENT MAN SINCE SYNTONA BUILT HIM UP

Was Troubled with Indigestion, Gas, Pains in Back and Limbs, Dizzy Spells; Nervous and Tired Easily, But Feels Very Different Now.

"I feel like an entirely different person from what I was a few weeks ago when I began taking Syntona," said Mr. James Roberts, 233 Ottaway Ave., London, Ont.

"It seemed as though everything in the world was the matter with me I used to suffer with indigestion, gas in my stomach, heartburn and shortness of breath. I would bloat up after my meals and have a heavy feeling in my stomach that nothing would seem to relieve.

"I was troubled with constipation and I frequently felt dizzy. Little spots darted before my eyes and I was hardly ever free of a bad taste in my mouth.

"I had pains across my back and in my limbs and joints. My kidneys often disturbed my sleep several times during the night.

"But things are very different now, and I give full credit to Syntona. I only wish I had known about this splendid remedy long ago. I am now free of indigestion and all that gas and distressed feeling in my stomach and chest. My bowels are regular and I haven't had a dizzy spell, or spots before my eyes lately. The bad taste in my mouth has gone away.

"Then, too, the pains left my back and limbs and Syntona acted as a diuretic to my kidneys, so I am enjoying my full night's sleep without being disturbed. As a result I get up mornings feeling fully rested and I don't get tired so easily as I used to. I just feel as though Syntona has built me up in every way."

Syntona contains the pure, liquid extracts of 12 of Nature's Finest Herbs and Roots. It acts on the stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels—aids in the elimination of excess acids and impurities from the system and promotes better assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.

Syntona may be obtained in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Boys Appreciate Regular Shipments Of Canadian Fags

"It is hard to beat anything Canadian, be it cigarettes or eats and we want you to know the Belleville boys in Italy do appreciate the regular shipments of Canadian cigarettes sent us by the Kinsmen fag fund," Tom Hallam wrote in a recent reply to Chairman Buster LaBarr of the Kinsmen fag fund.

"The citizens of Belleville are to be congratulated in their support of your fag fund, long may it flourish," added R. J. Whittard in another such letter, while C. W. Stevens wrote to say he was completely out of smokes when his shipment arrived at the front. "The boys all enjoyed this shipment," added Stevens.

"We are getting English cigarettes and they are far from palatable, but when your Kinsmen fags arrived in Belgium for us, it was a real treat," wrote Milt Davison in appreciation. "Canadian fags are a real comfort here," added G. Blakely.

The list of Belleville lads sent individual shipments of 300 cigarettes through the Kinsmen fag fund this week included:

All-Time Attendance Record At Madoc Fair Shattered With 12,000 Jamming Into Grounds

Variety of Entertainment and Splendid Exhibits Arranged by Officials

DECIDED SUCCESS

Madoc, Oct. 5 — (Staff)—Twelve thousand people, an all-time attendance record since the inception of the Fair in 1905, overflowed the natural amphitheatre, that is the Agricultural Park of this historic Hastings County village on Wednesday, to forge the greatest link in the chain of successful autumn exhibitions held here.

With its perimeter bordered by the flashing scarlets and gold of Autumnal beauty, the park basked in a perfect October sunshine, an added incentive, if any is needed, for the thousands who by consistency of attendance have transformed the show into an annual institution.

Closely-packed humanity in slow motion panorama thronged the greenswarded "bowl" of the grounds, the locale for the speedway, bandstand, midway, exhibit buildings, cattle runs, and a raised dias where modern and old-time performers staged a show during the afternoon that was as entertaining as it was variable.

Entire Area Encircled

Resembling beetles in mass formation, automobiles of all vintages occupied practically the entire area encircled by the track and reaching to the gates. Horse and buggies, reminiscent of not only the good old days but a reminder of gasoline restrictions of modern ones, were there too. A surrey or two, without the "fringe on the top" added a touch of 1912 or whenever this method of transportation was the family style for country and other fairs.

Apart from the record-breaking attendance, to say the fair was a success is to put it mildly. Other records went by the board too. Thousands of race-lovers saw Imperial Grattan, speedy sorrel horse smash the track record and lower it 4 1/2 seconds, in one of the most exciting trials of speed ever seen on the grounds. The story of the races is published elsewhere on this page.

Typical of Madoc shows, the fair was definitely agricultural, but so staged with attractions of other interest as to hold the marked attention of the, most blase urbanite. President Albert Woods, Secretary Will. Hill and the board of directors went all out and succeeded in their efforts to better the offerings of previous years.

Live Stock Outstanding

Point of convergence for surrounding counties, the fair attracted show animals of live stock breeders from the large areas of the district. Bovine aristocracy of Holstein, Ayrshire, Jersey, Shorthorn, Durham, Polled Angus and other dairy and beef breeds were proud representatives on parade of district and county herds.

Horse entries were well above par of other years. Clyde, Percheron, Belgian and other heavy draught breeds, as well as Hackney and similar carriage strains offered a fine equine display. Heavy draught teams in harness competed in feats of drawing prowess, a time-honored attraction of the fair.

Fine Exhibits

Conceded by veteran fair-goers to be the finest display in years, the fruit and vegetable, ladies and school display in the Exhibits Building was viewed by thousands. Outstanding were the Wartime Prices and Trades Board exhibit of re-made clothing, and the Marmora Branch of the Dominion Entomological Laboratories. Apples and fruits of all kinds, golden pumpkin and green squash, potatoes and other vegetable, grains and roots, preserves and pastries, gave a colorful Autumn touch while ladies' handicraft and schoolchildren's exhibits gave ample proof of the versatility of household members of district families.

Midway Good

The Midway was the centre of attraction for the surging good-natured crowd for the better part of the afternoon. Here it gorged itself on hot-dogs, hamburgs, "fair taffy" and gallons of sweet cider "fresh from the tree."

It saw a tented "girlie" show and ride on a callioped merry-go-round; mused at a novelty show "Back on the Farm"; had its fortune told or won or lost cigarettes at crown and anchor and other whirling wheels of fortune. There were apples and melons, and ice-cream sandwiches. Clowns and other comedians added to the fun and din of the barkers' tonsilar efforts.

On a raised dais in front of the Exhibits Building, the crack band of the Royal Canadian Artillery, Kingston, under W.O.1 Jesse, dispensed sparkling rhythms during the afternoon. Interspersing their melodies were dancing and singing numbers by the clever children performers of Mrs. Marion Peary of Peterboro. Colorfully costumed, these versatile youngsters, who ranged in age from five to thirteen, acquitted themselves like stage veterans in a program consisting of solos, duos and ensemble numbers.

Traditional contests of the Fair lured log-sawyers, old-time fiddlers, mouth-organ players, nail-driving ladies, cowboy and cowgirl songsters, while a novelty contest of the "man with the largest feet," believe it or not, attracted seven entrants.

High Quality Cheese

Indicative of the fine quality of cheese produced in Hastings County, were the high-scoring exhibits of this dairy commodity. Twenty-seven entries were on display in the various specials classes with none averaging below a 95 score.

Arthur McCreary, Queensboro, won the mythical championship of the Fair, with two firsts and 2 seconds in the specials classes, highest scoring cheese, and best finish. This is the seventh year in succession, that Mr. McCreary has won first prize for the best finished cheese.

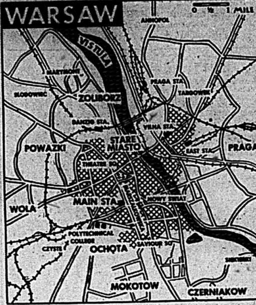
BATTLE FOR WARSAW IS FAR FROM WON



Polish patriots in Warsaw have ended resistance to the Nazis. Map shows points within Warsaw and on its outskirts where fighting was heavy. After the premature uprisings of Aug. 1, the suburbs east of the Vistula were centres of fighting. Then the Nazis, putting everything into the fight, began systematically wrecking those cities. Red artillery has been recently blasting Nazi defences in the main railroad station.

PORT

The communique said the invading forces now were in contact with the enemy both in Greece and Albania. Landing of Allied forces in Albania was announced some days ago.

Patriot groups were said to be cooperating closely with Allied forces in both countries.

Patras, the only area of invasion given in the first announcement, lies approximately 112 miles due west of Athens near the entrance to the Gulf of Corinth. It is on the north shore of the Peloponnesus.

The invasion returned British troops to the Greek mainland for the first time since 1941, when an ill-fated expeditionary force was forced to withdraw before the then all-powerful German army.

No Indication of Size.

An official source said the Allied troops in Albania were harassing enemy forces trying to maintain communications with the island of Corfu through the small port of Sarande.

The announcement gave no indication of the size of the British landing units or the extent of the contacts with the enemy. However, it is believed the units operating both in Greece and Albania are small compared with previous Allied landings on the European Continent.

Earlier in the week Allied forces occupied the island of Kythera off the southern tip of the Peloponnesus without opposition.

Today's announcement said that liberation of the Greek islands was continuing, but none of them was mentioned by name.

Recent reports have shown the Germans are thinning out their garrisons in Greece and the Aegean Islands, trying to evacuate the personnel northward through the Balkans by air, land and sea.

Other Allied units are proceeding with operations from newly-captured Almatian islands off Yugoslavia, including Brac. This morning's communique said artillery on Brac was firing on German concentrations on the mainland.

NAZIS FIGHT FIERCELY TO SEAL OFF BREACH

Americans Pull Back Under Heavy Enemy Pressure

Battle at Ubach Bloody As Any Since Invasion

With American Infantry at the Siegfried Line, Oct. 6 (AP)—American troops which entered Beggendorf east of Ubach yesterday had to pull back today under heavy enemy pressure.

Fighting as bloody and fierce as any in the entire invasion blazed around the wedge in the main Siegfried Line as the Germans threw their first sizeable counter-attack, supported by armor, against the Americans in an effort to seal off the penetration.

The Germans continued to pour heavy artillery fire upon Ubach, and just to the east of Ubach the "battle of the barracks" was developing into a stiff fight.

Barracks Well Defended.

The Germans were defending a cluster of four-storey concrete barracks extending for 500 yards along the road southeast of Ubach. They had converted it into a veritable fortress with anti-tank weapons, mortar machine-guns and infantry.

The Americans were within rifle range of the gray walls and Allied planes were divebombing the buildings.

It was yard-by-yard fighting for the infantry.

The Germans, whose superiors have threatened them with death if they retreat or surrender, were backed by the heaviest artillery they had been able to concentrate against Americans since the war began.

The heaviest engagement was on heights overlooking Herbach, which the infantry stormed late yesterday, knocking the enemy out of pill-boxes. The summit of these heights commands terrain south of Ubach. At 7 am the Germans counter-attacked in force. Infantry, supported by tanks, came out of the mists to the southeast.

Foe Regains Pill-Boxes.

The first enemy surge drove U.S. infantry from the heights and gave the Germans control of seven of the pill-boxes which they had lost.

Then the sun burned off the mists, the first bright clear day in weeks developed and our planes roared in.

The first flight arrived at 9 a.m. and lanced out against enemy armor and infantry. This was one of the closest air support missions yet flown. The artillery dropped smoke shells to outline the enemy salient and the planes hit their targets right on the nose.

In a few minutes another flight came over and dived in, giving the enemy a new pounding.

"Thank God for this weather," said one officer.

Forced From Height

In the first storming assault, the Americans were rushed from the top of a commanding height a mile east of Herbach, which they had seized yesterday in a drive 1 1-2 miles south of Ubach. But they held on to a side of the ridge and then the planes came over and dived upon the enemy armor.

Supported by the heaviest artillery they have been able to concentrate against the Americans since the war began along the Siegfried Line, the Germans made the going slow to the north, east of captured Beggendorf and Ubach.

Admitting a breach had been made, today's German communique said: "The enemy started another attack from his break-through in an eastern and northeastern direction. He was, however, checked by our own counter-thrusts. Forty enemy tanks have been destroyed in the course of a recent two days."

Another break-through was acknowledged by the enemy in the area north of Nancy, in the United States 3rd army sector.

Defences in Depth

Although the Americans at Ubach were through the main belt of Siegfried defences, an Associated Press dispatch from the front emphasized that there was no prospect of a sudden break-through to the Rhine.

The Germans have defences in depth, consisting of anti-tank ditches, minefields and trenches, all the way back to the Rhine to slow up progress, AP correspondent Don Whitehead said.

In their drive across the Leopold Canal Canadian troops of the 1st Canadian Army established "a limited bridgehead" and burst into the German pocket south of the mouth of the Scheldt.

Five Attacks Repulsed.

The British 2nd Army had beaten off five German counter-attacks in heavy fighting on the fringes of the Nijmegen salient across the Netherlands, Robert C. Wilson of the Associated Press said, adding although Lt.-Gen. Dempsey's forces had not yet fully gained the initiative in this area, the build-up of Allied power in Holland likely would soon result in new, explosive thrusts.

In the north the Canadians wedged into Holland beyond Putte 11 miles north of Antwerp. They were within six miles of cutting the only mainland road link for German gun crews and garrisons holding Beveland and Walcheren, where flood waters now up to eight feet deep covered more than a fourth of the dike-breached island.

Other troops closed within three miles south of industrial Tilburg and held their line three miles east of the road junction town of 'S Hertogenbosch.

On the east side of the Nijmegen corridor American troops who pushed east of Overloon buffeted back two German counter-attacks.

Truce Ends.

Dunkerque's strange truce ended at 10 a.m., after 19,000 civilians had been evacuated and the Germans had been allowed 12 hours and then an extra four to re-mine the road and re-establish their defence lines.

A German broadcast said the battle for the last German-held Channel port had been resumed, and now was "raging more fiercely than ever before," but there was no Allied confirmation that British troops of the 1st Canadian Army had yet launched their all-out assault.

To the south 3rd Army infantry sprayed with shellfire from German strongpoints on either flank, fought into their third day for Fort Driant whose "buttoned in" garrison battled from underground passages and trap-door gun-posts.

The Americans after a five-day fight were clinging to slim positions at the northwestern and southwestern corners of the fort near Dornot, five miles southwest of Metz, under flanking fire from other forts on both sides of the Moselle. They had been forced to give up a hold at the northeastern corner. But Lt.-Gen. Patton moved up 155-mm "Long Tom" artillery and was replying heavily to German guns which threw 600 shells into the fort.

'Great Deal of Blood' Will Be Shed In Next Few Months—Churchill

London Oct. 6 — (CP-Reuter) — Prime Minister Churchill warned the House of Commons today that "A great deal of blood" would be shed in the next few months.

Mr. Churchill, who had come from the War Cabinet to intervene in the debate on the town and country planning bill which is intended to enable local authorities to rebuild blitzed areas, declared "We must not imagine that the situation is not grave because we feel the assurance of victory."

"A great deal of blood is going to be shed in the next few months—Liberal, Conservative and Labor blood, and it is my duty above all to make sure that all is comfortable behind the troops and no needless cause of difference should rise to an undue height of proportion," the Prime Minister said.

The discussion of the bill had been prolonged by numerous amendments, chiefly by Conservative members, who were concerned about the question of compensation.

The government in an effort to get the bill passed quickly had taken the unexpected course of arranging for the House to sit an additional day on Monday.

Mr. Churchill, who said "At the present time we must keep our pugnacity as far as possible for export purposes," said it would be better to drop the bill than have a disagreeable party dispute about it at the present time. Broad agreement had been reached except in certain quarters.

The compensation issues dealt with matters far wider than the bill itself, he said, and there was no reason why the bill should be delayed and hampered, still less lost for their sake.

He therefore proposed to drop part two of the bill (referring to compensations) and set local authorities free to get on with their planning of the devastated areas without a day's delay.

Another bill dealing with the compensation question by itself could be brought in later.

Russian-Yugoslav Troops Fight in Outskirts Belgrade

PORT OF RION GUARDING CANAL TAKEN BY ALLIES

Turn Enemy Coastal Guns Against Ships Bearing Fleeing Nazis Across Waterway

MANY PRISONERS TAKEN

By NOLAND NORGAARD
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, Oct. 6 — (AP) — British forces have sealed off the entrance to the Gulf of Corinth in their Greek invasion by capturing the fortified port of Rion, Allied headquarters announced today. Official Greek reports indicated that more than half the Peloponnesus was securely in the hands of British troops and Greek Patriots.

Premier George Papandreou of Greece said in a statement that a minister of his cabinet had visited Tripolis where "security battalions"—Greeks fighting on the side of the Germans — had "surrendered to British officers without any skirmish."

Tripolis, in the east central Peloponnesus, is 60 miles southeast of captured Patrai on the Gulf of Corinth and 75 miles southwest of Athens.

Rion was overwhelmed in an eastward advance along the Gulf of Corinth from Patrai.

The Greek announcement also said the government member, landing from the island of Kythera, off Greece's south coast, also had visited Kalamai on the southwest coast.

This indicated the territory intervening between Kalamai and Tripolis was virtually free of Germans.

Enemy security battalions have surrendered at a number of other points in Greece, a communique said. Fifteen hundred prisoners were taken at Patrai alone.

Immediately after seizing Rion, 7 miles up the coast from Patrai, British forces turned enemy coastal guns captured there against large numbers of small craft in which the Germans were trying to flee northward across the Gulf of Corinth. An official statement said good results were obtained in this shelling.

German guns at Andirrion, immediately opposite Rion on the north shore of the narrow entrance to the gulf, remained silent yesterday.

Position Untenable

The fall of Patrai, which had been the main enemy supply port on Greece's west coast, came after German security troops surrendered near the town, making the position of the garrison untenable. At Rion, the Germans fell back quickly.

An official report said that prior to the fall of Patrai British seaborne supplies had to be unloaded at the less satisfactory port of Katakolon, about 50 miles to the southwest.

Despite the announcement of capture of enemy security battalions in several parts of the Peloponnesus there still was no official word on how far British units extended their lines.

FO. Ralph Campbell, Sidney Township Awarded the D.F.C.

Noted Flier Says His Act Was "Just Another Incident" in Line of Duty

SAVES LIVES OF CREW

Although claiming it to be "just another incident" apart from routine flying duties, Flying Officer Ralph Campbell, 25, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Campbell, 6th, Concession Sidney Township, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for saving the lives of his crew when his Stirling transport bomber was forced down in the North Sea.

None of the six crew members was seriously injured when the Foxboro pilot set the crippled plane down on the choppy sea and the only casualty was the rear air gunner who suffered a black eye. The "incident" occurred in the darkness of night and the crew members were forced to take to their life raft, later being rescued by naval craft.

Commended by C.O.

For his feat of setting the crippled ship down safely Flying Officer Campbell was highly commended by his commanding officer and has been awarded the D.F.C. "Am receiving the Distinguished Flying Cross, full details in letter to follow," the pilot cabled his mother.

Born in Sidney Township, the decorated flier attended Marsh Hill public school and Stirling high school and took an active part in young people's work. Prior to his enlistment in the Air Force in January, 1942, he was secretary treasurer of the Federation of Agriculture for Hastings County. After training at Toronto, Oshawa, and Camp Borden, he received his wings from the latter training centre, taking a post-graduate course in reconnaissance work in Prince Edward Island. He has been overseas since June, 1943.

CRIPPLING BLOW DEALT JAPAN'S GASOLINE SUPPLY

Heavy Raid Made on Balikpapan Island and Seven Bombers Lost

19 JAP PLANES DOWNED

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Oct. 6 — (AP) — Gen. MacArthur disclosed today that a second crippling blow was dealt Japan's big source of aviation gasoline and lubricating oil at Balikpapan Tuesday by heavy bombers, seven of which were lost in sky battles with 40 enemy fighters.

At least 19 and perhaps 24 of the enemy planes were shot down during a battle of more than an hour over the Borneo base while 40 tons of concentrated explosives touched off huge blasts among refineries and storage tanks.

A spokesman said the fierce air opposition plus intense anti-aircraft fire plainly indicated how important the enemy regards preservation of installations which supply 15 per cent of the gasoline and oil used by Japan's war machine.

The loss of seven Liberators was the largest number for a single raid yet announced by this headquarters.

Jap Destroyer Bombed

A communique last night at Pearl Harbor by Admiral Nimitz told of the bombing of a Japanese destroyer and large cargo ship near Iwo Jima, in the Volcano islands, 750 miles south of Tokyo. It did not claim they were sunk.

Nimitz' communique brought casualty figures in the invasion of the Palaus up to date while maintaining the ratio of more than 10 Japanese slain for every American.

From Sept. 16, opening day of the invasion, through yesterday, the total of Japanese dead was placed at 11,043 against 1,022 Americans. American casualties totalled 7,417, including 6,106 wounded and 280 missing.

The fight still goes on against pockets of enemy resistance on Peleliu and Angaur in the southern Palaus but already Peleliu's airfield is sending American planes against other enemy bases in the Palaus.

Police said a preliminary examination indicated she had been raped.

Two park laborers found the body shortly after 8 a. m.

DREW ENDORSES CHARGES MADE BY MAJ. SMYTHE

Canadian Reinforcements Had Little or No Real Infantry Training Claim

SPEAKS AT TORONTO

Toronto, Oct. 6 —(CP)— Premier Drew of Ontario said last night most of the reinforcements sent into action to replace soldiers wounded in the invasion of France had "little or no real infantry training."

He endorsed recent charges of Maj. Conn Smythe of Toronto, who recently returned home to recuperate from injuries suffered in France, that improperly trained reinforcements had been sent into action and presented excerpts from letters written to him by Canadians in action to support his statements. He was speaking to a meeting of the Canadian Corps Association.

He said Defence Minister Ralston "bears the heaviest load of guilt for this shameful situation" and described recent statements made by the Defence Department as "the most contemptible of all the contemptible excuses invented by guilty men to hide their guilt."

He urged the Canadian people to "accept no more excuses" and demand in a voice "which must be heard, that the expressed wish of the vast majority of Canadians be carried out by sending every trained man in uniform to the battle areas immediately."

Canada has 80,000 reinforcements available in the home defence army, the Premier said, and many of these have been trained in infantry yet they are being employed "at no useful tasks." A large percentage of the members have had years to learn field craft here in Canada.

Instead of sending these men overseas as reinforcements, Mr. Drew continued, "many units have gone into action time and again far below their strength simply because reinforcements could not be supplied."

The untrained men—volunteers from the forestry corps who had been chopping trees in Scotland, gunners from artillery training centres, men from armored units and others—"went into action full of courage and did the very best they could."

"They deserve just that much more credit for having fought as they did under such circumstances, but their willingness to fight is no measure of justification for sending them there untrained."

The Premier said that not only the infantry but tank units also received untrained men. These men included "reinforcements rushed from Canada without the required battle training in Britain before they reached the front."

CANADIANS CROSS CANAL BEHIND FLAME-THROWERS

Burst Into German Pocket South of Schelte River Mouth In Netherlands

GAIN BRIDGEHEAD

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With The 1st Canadian Army on the Leopold Canal Oct. 6 (CP Cable)—Behind sheets of flame sent roaring into German positions by flame-throwers, Canadian troops attacked across the Leopold Canal before dawn today and burst into the German pocket south of the mouth of the Schelde.

The attack was launched at 5:30 a.m., with the Canadians crossing the canal in assault boats north of Maldegem.

A limited bridgehead was gained rapidly and opposition was not as heavy as had been expected.

Maldegem is between Bruges and Eecloo, and the Canadians struck north across the canal just where it forks toward the Schelde and toward Ghent. Once over the water barrier, they were in a strip of Netherlands territory south of the Schelde.

Five thousand good enemy troops were believed to be holding this pocket as part of the German plan to deny the Allies the use of the port of Antwerp as long as the estuary is under German guns along its banks.

Move to Clear Estuary

The new Canadian operation is designed to wipe out this pocket and is the first move to clear the estuary and open the great Belgian port which could be of immense value as an Allied supply base.

In the darkness before dawn, Canadian units, led by western infantry, formed up along the canal for the attack.

Several hundred guns were ready to support them, but the feature was the work of the flame-throwers.

They lined up on the south side of the canal and at 5:30 a.m. they roared into action, spouting flames right across the canal and searing through the enemy trench system on the other side.

For 20 seconds a solid sheet of flame blasted the opposite bank and in the livid light of this inferno infantrymen leaped into the assault boats which had been placed in the water under cover of darkness.

Scrambled Up Dykes

Before the Germans could recover from the first blast of the flame-throwers, leading Canadian troops had paddled furiously over the 140-foot-wide canal and scrambled up the dykes on its far side.

The first troops across were commanded by Maj. Desmond Crofton Salt of Spring Island, B.C. They did not report a great deal of opposition and said the flame-throwers had killed some of the Germans right in their slit-trenches atop the dykes.

One group of westerners came under heavy machine-gun fire from a strongpoint on a flank which had not been attacked in the flame-throwers' barrage. They were held up for a brief period while the machine-gun was neutralized.

Large smoke screens were laid over the Schelde estuary to blot out observation by German gunners whose positions are laid out on the north side of the estuary.

Partisans Inside City Ready To End Reign of Terror

Other Russ Forces Menace Hungary's 2nd Largest City

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press War Correspondent

Moscow, Oct. 6 (AP)—Russian and Yugoslav troops fought the Germans in the outskirts of Belgrade today and front dispatches indicated patrols had crossed to the south bank of the Danube from captured Pancevo, less than nine miles from the capital.

Marshal Tito was reported near the front and it was believed troops of his army of national liberation would be the first formally to enter the fortified old city of 267,000. The range of hills at the northwest corner of which Belgrade is located is ideal for Red army infiltration tactics.

Pravda said other Allied Slavic troops had reached the vicinity of Nis, 130 miles southeast of Belgrade, where the Belgrade-Athens-Salonika and Belgrade-Sofia railroads meet.

Hungary Conquest First Priority

In northern Yugoslavia along the Tisza river, other Russian troops were less than 30 miles across flat Hungarian frontier country from the second largest Hungarian city, Szeged, imperilled frontally from Romania as well. The conquest of Hungary was declared in Russian newspapers to be the first priority objective of Russian strategy.

"The Red Army is clearing its way to Budapest by fire and sword," Pravda announced. "Hungary protects the Germans' southern flank and continually supplies cannon fodder. The loss of Hungary would mean the loss of raw materials such as oil, metals and foodstuffs." Szeged is 96 miles southeast of Budapest.

Thirty-five miles due south of Belgrade, Yugoslav units were locked in bitter battle with the Germans for the village of Topola, home of Karageorge—"Black George"—who beat the Turks a century ago and founded the royal dynasty from which King Peter descended.

Gathering Strength.

The Russians, augmented by Yugoslavia Partisan forces, were gathering strength for the final assault after capture yesterday of the key rail junction of Pancevo, northeast of Belgrade's city limits.

The Timusul river, flowing into the Danube at the western edge of Pancevo, formed a minor German defence line, but it laso formed the edge of a potentially dangerous pocket for the enemy because it already has been outflanked by the Russians a few miles north.

Thousands of Partisans inside Belgrade were reported armed and ready for the forthcoming battle to end the reign of terror under which the Germans have held the capital for 42 months.

(Except for reporting patrol activity, Moscow communiques remained silent about any action elsewhere on the eastern front. Berlin has reported beginning of a new Russian offensive in western Lithuania and invasion of the Baltic island of Saare.)

Escape Route Blocked.

From the southern environs of Belgrade to the tip of Greece, German divisions, variously estimated by Allied military source at eight to 25, appeared powerless to save their only remaining railway escape route.

The vigor and scope of the Russian invasion of the Danubian basin make it at present the most vital part of the entire eastern front—one where Marshal Stalin's supreme command must believe a decision is possible that will drastically shorten the war.

Says Committee Hopes To Annex German Territory to Oder River

By DANIEL DE LUCE
(AP War Correspondent)

Moscow, Oct. 6 —(AP)— The Soviet-sponsored Polish Committee of National Liberation expects to annex German territory to the Oder river, which flows within 31 miles of Berlin, and the Baltic port of Stettin on its west bank, the Polpress news agency declared today.

The agency originally was organized by the union of Polish patriots in Russia and now is the channel for news from inside liberated Polish areas.

"The Pomorze (Polish corridor) bridgehead must not be left in German hands," Polpress said. "It is our duty to the new Europe. The Oder is a Polish river. Restoration of all Pomorze to Poland is in the political, strategic and economic interests of the United Nations."

In a renewed attack against Lt.-Gen. Tadeusz Konorowski (Bor), whom the Germans captured at Warsaw, the Lublin Gazette asserted that his elevation to commander-in-chief in place of Gen. Kazimierz Sosnkowski was "nothing but a changing of the guard which smelled of provocation against the Polish people."

None of the press comment, however, attacked the Premier of the Polish government in London, Stanislaw Mikolajczyk.

Foreign diplomats in Moscow appeared to take the realistic, if harsh view, that the capture of Gen. Komorowski removed at least one important obstacle to Polish unity.

The announcement did not indicate where Maj. Bastedo was serving but it was understood it was in the Mediterranean theatre. The same announcement disclosed the D.S.O. had been awarded Maj. C. E. Corrigan, 43, Winnipeg, also of the R.C.A.M.C.

Another list of awards to soldiers serving in the French theatre included D.S.O.'s for Brig. (Acting Maj.-Gen.) Hugh A. Young of Winnipeg, Quartermaster General of the Canadian Army, Lt.-Col. (Acting Brig.) John M. Rockingham, Victoria, and Capt. (Acting Maj.) J. P. E. J. W. Ostiguy, Montreal.

Mr. E. A. Brooks, of the Reliance Industries Ltd., is the proud owner today of the fifty dollar War Bond, main prize given by the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Legion, in their fund-raising efforts through the medium of tickets on bonds and war savings certificates.

Mr. E. McFee, 178 Victoria Avenue, won second prize of a $25 War Bond.

Other winners were $10 war saving certificate, Mrs. F. Urch, R.R. 6 Belleville; $5 certificates, W. J. Snarr, Hoards Station, Ont., Allan McMullen, Metropolitan Stores, Belleville and E. Cook, 223 Front Street, Belleville.

The draws were made at a special meeting held in the Legion Club rooms, Front Street. Owing to the inability of Mayor Harry Rollins to be present, the lucky tickets were drawn by persons selected from the large crowd present.

While no definite figures were available last night, Legion officials stated that the venture was a decided financial success.

COLLAR AND TAG NOW BEDECK "BUTCH"

"Butch," the anti-police dog, who loves a uniform, but not a policeman, is now one of the proudest dogs in the city.

He struts by the limbs of the law with head and tail erect, the customary growl missing and a look of disdain in his eyes.

For "Butch" now is the proud owner of a collar and a dog tag, official symbol of immunity from the clutching hands of the upholders of city law and order.

This morning, the bulldog cavorted with his old friends of the Air Force at the corner of Coleman and Bridge Street, unworried by the possibility of capture and forced entertainment at the city dog pound.

SEEK WHEREABOUTS OF KINGSTON GIRL

Kingston police are seeking the whereabouts of 16-year-old Audrey Clark, who disappeared from her home in that city earlier in the week. Information received by local police indicated the Clark girl appears to be considerably older than she really is and would easily pass for a girl 18 or 19 years of age. She has a noticable scar on the lower left side of her face. The Clark girl was described as being five foot four inches tall and weighs well over 150 pounds.

MOTORIST CHARGED AFTER ACCIDENT

An automobile driven by Peter Coutts, Shannonville, went out of control east of that village early last evening and after rolling over several times in the ditch came to rest on all four wheels. Fortunately Mr. Coutts escaped serious injury, but the vehicle was extensively damaged about the body, top and windows.

Coutts told Traffic Officer Chas. Siple, who investigated, he was proceeding westerly when the car went out of control while negotiating a curve in the road. The vehicle travelled some distance along the highway shoulder before turning completely over when in collision with several large boulders. Coutts was held and today charged under the H.T.A. to appear next Thursday.

STUDENT NURSES NEED ONLY JUNIOR MATRIC

Contrary to a report carried in a mid-week edition of the Ontario Intelligencer that senior matriculation was required of girls and young women entering Belleville hospital as probationary nurses, it has been pointed out that it is full junior matriculation and not senior matriculation that is required.

According to new regulations which came into effect on July 31st, no Ontario approved hospital may accept for training any girl who has not attained her 18th birthday, or who has not received her secondary school graduation diploma or equivalent certificate. This, according to educational authorities, means complete junior matriculation.

Lightning Destroys Mill at Hybla

Bancroft, Oct. 6 — During a severe electrical storm, which passed over this district Friday morning, lightning completely destroyed a mill at Hybla, owned and operated by R. C. Bartlett. Lightning struck a gasoline tank on the engine and exploded, spraying gasoline over the whole structure, the building being aflame in two minutes. Fifteen cords of peeled and unpeeled alderwood was burned. The mill employed 17 men last year but had just started production this season, anticipating full employment Monday. The loss $2,000, with no insurance.

This plant supplied material for the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company at Lindsay.

Fire Destroys Large Transport East of City

A large tractor trailer owned by Cunningham and Wells of the Kingsway Transport, Montreal, together with its load of meat and other merchandise, was almost completely destroyed by fire shortly after seven o'clock this morning when the vehicle took fire after crashing into a tree on No. 2 highway near the Point Anne lane. The complete police report was not available, but it is presumed the transport skidded on the wet pavement and crashed into the tree.

Driver of the transport, Mr. Powell of Kemptville, was admitted to Belleville General Hospital suffering from second degree burns.

Members of the local fire department under Captain Frank Orr were called to the scene of the crash and attempted to save the tractor-trailer from complete destruction, but lack of sufficient quantity of foamite prevented them from checking the spread of the fire which started when gasoline sprayed over the hot exhaust. Lack of water also hampered firemen's efforts, it was stated. Three fills of water from the "booster" tank were used on the fire but the supply of water from a near-by well was quickly exhausted.

Community Drive for Funds Nearly Reaches Half-Way Mark

Almost at the half-way mark, the Belleville Community Service Campaign fund has received $7,000 in its coffers up to Wednesday night, campaign officials announced last night. Another $8,000 will complete the quota allotted to the city.

"We realize that the second half of the amount is usually the hardest to collect, but the Committee feels sure that the good people of Belleville will not let the fund suffer from lack of sufficient finances. We gratefully appreciate what those who have already donated have done for us; and we feel that those who have not as yet contributed will emulate the actions of their fellow citizens."

The four social services, who are doing an exceptional job in maintaining morale of the Home Front, are in urgent need of this money. Those who have experienced the many aids to humanity given by members of the Salvation Army; the V.O.N.; the Children's Aid Society, and the youth work done by the Y.M.C.A. know what a magnificent contribution to the nation's welfare they are making.

Their work should not and must not be curtailed. The scope of their facilities is measured by the amount of their finances. And so, it is up to the general public to see that their good deeds go on. It is surprising what a dollar here and a dollar there will amount to. And after all, a dollar isn't so much in these days of prosperity.

It is an investment which will pay dividends in health bonds; interest in happiness and comfort for those who are the innocent victims of circumstances and in these days the exigencies of war.

Send in donations to the secretary, Belleville Community Service Fund, at Riggs Garage, Pinnacle Street, or give your contribution to the canvasser.

South Hastings Educational Group Organizes Here

Organization of trustees, teachers, secretaries and councillors of the South Hastings public school inspectorate took concrete form on Thursday night with the formation of the new South Hastings Educational Association at a well-attended meeting held in Shire Hall.

The aims of the new association are to enable those whose education affects to keep abreast of educational development in order to prepare for the post-war period; to discuss important problems and make sure dollar-for-dollar value in education is assured.

Brooks Allen, Pres.

Mr. Brooks Allen, B.A., Marysville, was the unanimous choice for president. Mr. James A. Warren of Frankford is vice president and Mrs. Wanda Sine, Foxboro, is secretary.

Far-reaching representation was included in the roster of the executive group of the association. Trustee representatives will be Messrs. James Detlor and Stewart Lough, Sidney; Clayton Eggiston, and A. J. Gough, Thurlow and Arthur English and Dr. H. E. Eckardt, Tyendinaga. Township councils will be represented by Reeve Fred Wilson, Sidney; Reeve George MacDonald, Thurlow and Deputy Reeve Ken Vivian, Tyendinaga.

Also included in the Association executive are the presidents of the three township teachers' groups. These are, Sidney, Mrs. Mary Campbell, Trenton; Thurlow, K. M. Bird, Belleville; Tyendinaga, Miss Jessie Whiteman, Shannonville.

The new Township Teachers' Group executives elected at the meeting include beside the presidents, Sidney, Miss Verna Benns, Foxboro; Miss Marion Pound, R.R. 6 Belleville; Thurlow, Miss Mary Cowain, Corbyville, Mr. H. O. Walkom, R.R. 4 Belleville; Tyendinaga, Miss Mary Waddingham, Marysville and Mrs. Hazel Holden, Belleville.

Sponsored by R. H. Macklem

An important phase of the meeting was an informative discusson on library associations in the various townships that culminated in the organizations of these bodies. Teachers' executives in each township will be responsible for the administration and other work of their own library associatons.

Mr. R. H. Macklem, who sponsored the idea of the formation of the new organization and who is the newly-appointed inspector for South Hastings, outlined the advantages of the Educational Association and emphasized the values of library units. Miss Olive Delaney, Belleville Librarian, also spoke briefly, as did County Clerk Erle Denyes and Reeve Fred Wilson.

Membership fees of the Association were placed at $1 per classroom, and all school boards in the inspectorate will be invited to become members.

Indian schools, however, due to the fact that they are not part of the provincial system, but managed by a Federal Government department, will be allowed to become members without payment of fees.

Miss Eva Porter, Trenton, District Women Teachers' Federation representative addressed the association briefly at the conclusion of the meeting. Alderman H. J. Clarke, B.A., retired school inspector, was made honorary president of the organization.

POLICE COURT

Attack on Referee Brings Fines In Police Court

The parties who physically attacked the wrestling official at the Hume Arena Wednesday night paid fines into the local police court it was disclosed, when Magistrate A. B. Collins, K.C., assumed his judicial position in city police court today.

As the result of the outbreak, during which a wrestling referee sustained a cut on the forehead, Frank Carter, Belleville, was charged with intoxication and paid $12, including costs. The other party, Marjorie Thompson, was charged with disorderly conduct and paid $5 and costs prior to the opening of the day's proceedings.

Wants to Sober Up.

"This man feels he should have a rest. He suggests about 30 days in jail," commented Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan when Roy Larue, no fixed address, appeared on a charge of intoxication. "Inspector Hayes informs me he wants to sober up," added Mr. Donnan.

"That is very commendable," remarked Magistrate Collins as he accommodated the stranger.

A charge of assaulting his wife was dismissed against Gordon Sanford of this city. Mrs. Sanford appeared and stated it was all a mistake. The mistake of preferring the charge originally ultimately cost the complainant the costs of the court, some $5 in all.

In Wrong Court.

The name of Carl Conley, Trenton, was called to face a charge of non-support. The accused man failed to respond to his name and later it was disclosed the case should be heard in the County Police Court next Thursday. "This is the wrong court, enlarge the matter until next week at the Court House," stated Mr. Donnan.

Restitution Imposed.

A resident of Plainfield appeared charged with taking a case of beer without the owner's consent. Inspector Hayes informed the court the man was "gloriously drunk" when he committed the act. Only the costs and restitution were imposed.

Courier-Advocate Appears Attractive In New Layout

Featuring an entirely new front page and giving local news prominence throughout the issue, the first edition of the Trenton Courier-Advocate under its new management, came off the press this week. Indicating that local news will be featured with affairs of international nature being treated as of secondary importance, practically every story throughout the first edition is of town or district interest. An entirely different front page layout at once strikes the eye with the first edition being one of fourteen pages. Appropriate editorials also of local interest, are featured.

James H. Ormiston is the editor of the Courier-Advocate under its new management, with W. Ronald Carter as advertising and job printing manager and Percy Taylor in charge of circulation.

LATE ARNOLD W. GAWLEY

Eldorado, Oct. 6—Arnold Wayne Gawley only son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gawley of Eldorado passed away early Wednesday morning in the Belleville General Hospital as the result of a tragic accident. A loaded truck passed over his body at his home Tuesday night.

It was a great shock to the community where Wayne will be missed sadly by his parents, schoolmates and other friends. The banks of beautiful flowers and the large funeral procession indicated the high regard in which he was held by so many. He was eight years old and had started his third year at S. S. No. 16, Madoc, and attended the Union Sunday School. The funeral was held from his home Friday afternoon to Fox Church where the service was conducted by the Rev. A. Redding and Rev. A. Poulter. During the service the choir sang "Gathering Buds." The flower bearers were schoolmates of the deceased, Cyril Shaw, Sherwood Palmer, Percy Blakely, Elwood Carman, Lorne Chambers and Carl Cleveland. The pall bearers were neighborhood friends, Russell Empey, Burrel Bateman, Dean Shaw, Don Post, Laveryne Carman and Harold Chambers.

Interment was in Eldorado Cemetery.

JUVENILES PLEAD GUILTY

Napanee, Oct. 6 — (CP) — Three juveniles from Ottawa ranging in age from 15 to 16 appeared before Magistrate J. P. Garvin yesterday and pleaded guilty to breaking into the home of W. J. Morrison just west of Napanee on Sept. 28 and stealing $6. They were arrested later by Belleville police. The eldest of the trio on probation from St. Joseph's Training School was committed back to that institution. The other two both with previous records, will be referred to the jurisdiction of the Ottawa juvenile court.

POLICE BLOTTER

With portions of Belleville plunged into complete darkness, as the result of last night's storm when hydro service became affected, police assumed a more alert attitude while on patrol in the city. However, no serious crime resulted despite the fact street lights did not function for the greater part of the night.

Residents at the upper end of Pinnacle St. became alarmed when it was learned two horses were wandering at large about the street. Police found they had broken loose from the barn of a nearby milk dispenser. Later the animals were secured in their stalls.

A lone inebriate languished in the cell block last night, but was released early today after paying ten and costs for his folly.

Little Activity On Italian Front Due to Weather

Rome, Oct. 6 (CP)—Indian troops of the British 8th Army have taken the village of Vimola on high ground west of Rimini on the Adriatic sector, it was announced today but on lower ground in that region—turned to a quagmire by autumn rains and overflowing streams—activity was confined to patrolling.

Meantime American units of the Allied 5th Army captured Loiano, vital road junction on the Florence-Bologna highway, despite heavy rain and tough enemy resistance.

Americans also cleared Monzuno, a town three miles west of Loiano.

Today's communique also reported British troops of the 5th Army had made progress in the central sector, but did not specify in what localities.

East of Loiano American infantry advanced to a point 2,000 yards south of Monterenzio in the muddy hills between route 65 and Imola.

The enemy threw reinforcements of experienced Austrian and German Alpine troops into the central sector and unloosed fierce artillery barrages. But on both sides of the Florence-Bologna road the Allies pushed ahead against the stiff resistance.

Inclement weather once more curtailed M.A.A.F. operations, although a few sorties were flown against rail and motor transport targets north of the Gothic line battle area.

Shipping in the Adriatic also was attacked, while some fighters took part in the air support of British troops invading Greece.

Three enemy planes were downed and three Allied planes lost, as the M.A.A.F. flew 200 sorties.

It was announced last night that the battle-hard Loyal Edmonton Regiment had won the last German-held ridge overlooking Rimini. Four hundred Germans were taken after the Edmontons seized the height in hand-to-hand fighting.

Command Highway

Capture of Loiano gave the Americans a position commanding the highway to the communications centre of Bologna.

On their right flank, Americans and forward elements of British forces pushed forward and dug in on Monte Cece and Monte Della Valle, about 15 air miles from Imola, but were driven back by heavy German counter-attacks.

In the isolated hill country of the central sector, Indian troops of the 8th Army pushed upon Monte Calbano and Scarzana and found them clear of enemy troops.

On the western flank South African troops smashed two counter-attacks near Monte Vigese and seized Ripoli.

Lightning Bolt Disrupts Hydro Service in City

A lightning bolt, ripping through hydro wires at the corner of Church St. and Victoria Ave. disrupted service in a large section of the city following the electrical storm that swept the district Thursday night.

The bolt, according to hydro officials here, was of a particularly severe nature, tearing through primary wires, instead of taking the ordinary course of following lines until the electrical discharge comes to a transformer.

Hydro linesmen working under difficulties and in a heavy downpour of rain, effected repairs after the area affected had been in darkness for some time. Nature of the damage was such as to prolong repair work for a lengthier period than usual.

The storm swept in from the northwest, reverberating thunder accompanied by vivid flashes of lightning heralding a heavy rainfall.

Residents living near the corner of Church and Victoria were startled by a sudden thunderclap coming simultaneously with a vivid flash of lightning. House lights in the area were blacked out immediately, but street lights in that area were not affected, facilitating in some measure the repair work.

Premier Expresses Holland's Plight

London, Oct. 6 (CP — Premier Pieter S. Gerbrandy of The Netherlands today said that Germany was attempting to ruin his country with systematic plan of famine and flood, deportation and destruction "infinitely worse than anywhere else in Western Europe."

The Premier outlined Holland's plight at a press conference with a plea "not for world pity, but for understanding."

The major Dutch cities, he said, "are faced with the certainty that, unless the Germans are expelled in the immediate future, the available food supplies will be exhausted before the month is out."

Foreign Minister E. N. Van Kleffens said the Germans had burned to the ground the prosperous town of Berkel, between Rotterdam and The Hague, as a reprisal.

Many Famous Restaurants In Paris Closed

Paris, Oct. 6 (AP)—The world's greatest restaurant city now is operating on only half its normal scale or less, a birdseye survey of the capital's recovery shows.

Paris restaurants are serving about 300,000 meals daily against a normal average of more than 500,000—but the meals are far below peacetime standards and most of the famous restaurants like Maxim's remain closed.

Many legitimate stores are getting only 1-10th the supply of potatoes needed to fill the registered customers' meagre ration—one or two pounds a week. Many stores are getting enough sugar for only one of 20 regular customers.

It has been stated authoritatively that there won't be enough flour to permit the free sale of bread for another six months. People now are allowed about two-thirds a pound daily but complain it is full of crude, dark flour and even sawdust.

At the present rate of French shoe production 10,000,000 pair every four months—the average Frenchman will be able to get less than one new pair yearly.

Schools are scheduled to open in less than a fortnight, but they are expected to be hampered by a severe shortage of books.

Hamilton Waiter Convicted of Murder

Hamilton, Ont, Oct. 6 (CP) — Howard Ferguson, 33, of Hamilton will die on the gallows Dec. 14 for the murder of 63-year-old Abraham Rosenberg, Hamilton tailor.

He was convicted late Thursday night of the charge by an Ontario Supreme Court jury which deliberated more than five hours, bringing to a close the four-day trial. Sentence was pronounced by Mr. Justice J. A. Hope, the trial judge.

Ferguson, asked by Mr. Justice Hope if he had anything to say, replied: "Nothing."

Rosenberg was found in the rear of his James Street tailor shop here on the afternoon of last Feb. 4 and died a few hours later in hospital.

Ferguson was arrested in Fort Erie, Ont., where he was working as a beverage room waiter.

Before the jury retired Mr. Justice Hope instructed them to find accused either "guilty of murder or not guilty at all."

He reviewed evidence of witnesses, including several who have criminal records, and said "it is a question of what credence you give these witnesses." William Wigger, chief crown witness, had testified that Ferguson told him Feb. 4 that he had killed a man.

Defence counsel Orville M. Walsh, in his address to the jury asked for an acquittal on the grounds that the crown's evidence gave no "reasonable explanation of Rosenberg's death."

Take Inventory Of Estonian Stores

Tallinn, Estonia, Oct. 6 —(AP)—The Soviet Estonian Republic, now freed from three years of German domination, will decide for itself whether to adopt the Russian system of collectivization of agriculture, Arnold Veimer, President of the Council of People's Commissars, has declared.

"If the Estonians do not want collective farms," he said at a press conference, "they will not have them. But the party, naturally believing in it, will campaign for it by press and radio education."

"And the nationalization of stores and business?" a correspondent asked.

"Small enterprises of less than 10 employees will remain in private hands," he replied.

Currently all stores in Estonia are closed for inventory.

A land reform which was inaugurated in 1930—30 hectares of land to a peasant—has been reintroduced. A hectare is 2.47 acres. Veimer was asked how many hired hands a peasant may employ and how many cows he may own.

No Limit in Employment.

"There is no limit to the number of persons he may employ on a farm," he declared. "He may have as many cows as he can maintain."

The council president said he did not know what system would prevail in the other Soviet Baltic republics, Latvia and Lithuania, but there seems reason for believing there will be no forced collectivization or nationalization.

Veimer said the republic faced a tremendous task of reconstruction, especially with winter coming and stores depleted by the Germans.

He estimated it would take two years to rebuild the shattered town. The port is wrecked. Between 40 and 50 per cent of the city's buildings were destroyed.

AB. Donald Kimsley Arrives Home On Leave From Overseas

Picton, Oct. 6 — AB. Donald Kimsley has arrived from overseas to spend leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kimsley. A member of the R.C.N.V.R., he served on a landing barge during D-day. He suffered burns and was hospitalized for a time, but there are no scars left. He was one of the first L.C.I. to land on the Normandy coast.

Farmers Fortunate

Farmers consider themselves lucky as, for the first time in some years, there was no frost damage to tomatoes before all were harvested. Last year, frost on Sept. 23 spoiled many thousands of bushels. There have been mild frosts but no damage resulting. Factories are gradually closing, as corn is about done. A few plants are handling pumpkin, which are a smaller crop due to dry weather.

Plan Loan Drive

Plans for Victory Loan drive were made this week at a meeting of officials. A series of meetings is planned. These will be arranged by E. J. Williams, J. M. Hartwick and the organizers. A poster contest for school children will be held, Mr. Hartwick offering prizes.

Large Number Farm Auction Sales This Fall

As has been the case during the past several autumn seasons a large number of farm auction sales are being held in the Belleville district this fall with the frequency of newspaper advertisements and sale bill posters being indicative of their extensiveness.

In eight editions of the Ontario Intelligencer an average of four auction sales have been recently advertised, while on one specific day eight sales were advertised and on another seven. Some of these sales, of course, were for household effects.

"This is the season for farm sales," commented a local auctioneer when asked if their number this year exceeded that of past years. "I don't think there are any more this year."

According to reports all farmers holding auction sales are not of the age when they would be expected to retire. "Some are old and others are young, I never ask them their intentions," commented an auctioneer. The farm help problem has prompted many of the older farmers to consider retirement, however, it is thought.

Davoud's Wing Very Active

London, Oct. 6 (CP Cable) — Canadian Spitfire pilots destroyed five of 15 Messerschmitts encountered yesterday east of Arnhem in Holland, said a Reuter News Agency report from Belgium. It added that another plane was damaged while the Canadians suffered no losses.

An R.C.A.F. wing operating from an airfield commanded by Group Capt. Paul Davoud of Kingston since the Allied evacuation of Arnhem has been making a nightmare of the area for German railwaymen. With dive-bombing and cannon attacks it has cut 66 rail lines, destroyed 70 locomotives, damaged 40 freight cars and wrecked two bridges and six railway stations.

The idea is to force the Germans to resort to motor transport. When they do that, rocket-firing Typhoons and Spitfires will open up—as they did at Falaise in Normandy.

Pilots who calld it a "routine day", included WO. John Duncan of Paris, Ont.

Truce Is Ended, Dunkerque Battle Being Resumed

London, Oct. 6 — (CP) — Allied fighter-bombers swooped on Dunkirk at 10 a. m. today at the exact moment the truce with the stranded German garrison expired.

Indications were, however, that the British infantry of the 1st Canadian Army had not yet mounted a full-scale ground offensive against the last of the German-held channel ports, which was the evacuation point for the battered remnants of the British Expeditionary Force in 1940.

The battle had been halted to allow French civilians safe exit from Dunkirk. The German-controlled Dutch radio said fighting was "raging more fiercely than ever before."

About 190,000 civilians were evacuated during the extended 64-hour truce.

There was speculation here as to whether the German garrison estimated at about 17,000 would put up heavy resistance once the final assault struck, or whether, like the German garrison at Calais last week-end, its resistance would be short.

SNOW FALLING IN CARPATHIANS

London, Oct. 6 (CP)—The first snows are falling in the Carpathian mountains where Russian troops are fighting on the frontiers of Hungary and Czechoslovakia, the German communique said today.

Snow already has been reported on the western front in the Vosges mountains at the Belfort Gap.

Canadians Received Warm Welcome Writes Gunner Jack Jones

Picton, Oct. 6—"We were almost smothered by the welcome of the French people. I was kissed by old men, girls, men, and even babies were held up to me," writes Gunner Jack Jones, R.C.A., to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Jones. "In one town we liberated, all the people gathered, blocking the road. For a few seconds silence reigned, then suddenly the French National Anthem sounded from a loud speaker. The people broke and crowded around the trucks. Some of them, especially the older people, were crying, waving and cheering at the same time. The trucks were decorated with flowers. That is how it has been everywhere we have gone.

"In Ypres we were given a wonderful welcome—flags flying, people cheering. When they heard we were Canadians, you should have heard them. We stopped awhile after passing under the Menin Gate. When we started up our trucks resembled floats, with flags and flowers. It is surprising how many people in Belgium speak English. They seem to have a special liking for Canadians and help us all they can. The F.P.I. and White Brigade have been giving us a lot of help.

"I have seen quite a few robomb sites over here and nearly every one was hit by bombs. We passed through several ghost towns, rendered inhabitable by bombing."

Large Force Hits Aircraft Engine Plant in Berlin

London, Oct. 6 (CP)—More than 1,200 United States heavy bombers raided numerous industrial targets and airdromes in Germany today, with one large force hitting an aircraft engine plant at Berlin.

Strong forces of R.A.F. heavy bombers dumped a profusion of two-ton bombs and more than 360,000 incendiaries Thursday night on Saarbrucken, a major rail centre and arsenal in the Siegfried line behind Metz.

British mosquitos before dawn gave the German capital a sample of the heavier shower of explosives rained by one large force of the four-engined American planes in daylight.

As a railway point and advanced base, Saarbrucken now is of critical importance to the Germans. It is a focal point for main lines from nearly every part of Germany. Army units are being outfitted there constantly.

A Very Heavy Attack

The attack was described officially as "very heavy," one which "should seriously interrupt the flow of supplies to the front." Three aircraft from a force of approximately 400 failed to return.

Bomber crews reported explosions and large fires, that appeared to spread all over the city.

During the night other mosquitos kept up their spectacular train-busting and barge-sinking activities in Germany and Holland. They attacked 12 trains in the Hamm area to run their total to 145 destroyed or damaged in five nights.

Forty-four barges were attacked, mainly on the Rhine south of Emmerich. One mosquito was lost.

Thirty-eight more barges were destroyed or damaged in daylight yesterday by rocket-firing typhoons and spitfires operating over Holland.

Huns in Civies Try To Leave Dunkerque, One in Uniform Bagged

Outside Dunkirk, Oct. 6 — (CP-Reuter)—Capt. D.K. Drury of Hamilton said yesterday nearly 20 Germans dressed as civilians tried to get out of Dunkirk during the evacuation of civilians from the besieged port.

"One made no bones about it — he walked out in full uniform," Drury added.

"The 45-year-old wife of the leader of the main pro-German movement in Dunkirk also was bagged trying to escape our cordon."

NANCY PLANS SEPARATION

New York, Oct. 6 — (CP)—Nancy Oakes De Marigny, daughter of the Canadian mining magnate, Sir Harry Oakes, who was slain in his Bahamas home last year, told a New York Journal American reporter today there was "nothing to deny" when asked if she planned to separate from her husband, Count Alfred De Marigny, who was acquitted on a charge of murdering her father.

Hydro Commission Must Develop New Sources of Power

Dr. T. H. Hogg Speaks at Kingston to O.M.E.A. Delegates

TO HELP FARMERS

Kingston, Oct. 6 —(CP)— Dr. Thomas H. Hogg, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, today predicted that it would not be long after the war "before the commission will be called upon to develop new sources of power to meet growing demands for industrial and domestic requirements."

Addressing the District No. 1 convention of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association, Dr. Hogg said that undoubtedly there would be some recession in power loads when war production ends but this trend would be offset in some measure by reconversion of war plants to peacetime production for consumer needs at home and to share in Canada's part of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration program.

To Stimulate Demand.

"As the country returns to normal peacetime conditions, active salesmanship will be brought to bear to stimulate the demand for . . . consumer needs. The Hydro Commission itself has plans prepared along these lines. A large proportion of the anticipated load growth will result from the use of the new electrical appliances and improved equipment in the home and further load will result from the industrial production of such goods."

The commission estimated it would have a primary surplus of possibly 200,000 horsepower in the winter of 1945-46. But if post-war demands increased at a rate of about 60,000 horsepower annually, the reserve would be used up in three years. In normal times a reserve of 100,000 horsepower for Hydro's Southern Ontario system would not be excessive.

Extend Rural Services.

The commission also had plans for the extension of its rural services and "looks forward to the time when . . . Hydro service in rural districts will be taken as much for granted as it now is in urban centres."

Relaxation during the year by the Dominion Metals Controller of restrictions on rural extensions had enabled the commission to provide service for many new customers. More would be served when transmission line equipment became available in unlimited supply.

"Although extension of hydro service to areas now not served will form an important part of the commission's post-war rural planning, an equally important program will be inaugurated to give increased service to farmers by promoting the use of such labor-saving and profitable appliances as refrigerators and quick-freezing equipment, electrically-operated water pumping systems, improved grain grinders, water heaters and special appliances for poultry raising and similar requirements."

Amalgamate Districts

Dr. Hogg referred to amalgamation into one district of the former 120 rural power districts in the province along with establishment of uniform rates and abolition of the service charge for farm service. This step was of particular benefit to sparsely-settled rural areas.

Another amalgamation, that of the three Southern Ontario power districts into one system, widened the power-supply interests of Eastern Ontario to which developments at Niagara and along the Ottawa river and the Ogoki diversion in Northwestern Ontario "have become of practical interest."

He made two suggestions of post-war planning. One was the importance of maintaining and improving, if possible, stream flow of power-producing rivers. This involved land conservation. Preserving land from erosion contributed to soil fertility and river flow.

To Reclaim Forests

Reclamation for forests of lands unsuitable for agriculture was urged. He referred to the projected conservation of the Ganaraska River watershed in Eastern Ontario, explaining that while its conservation would not provide enough water for power generation on the river itself, recommended reforestation at its head waters would increase the flow in the Trent river on which hydro has several stations.

His second suggestion was that "before we export our natural resources we should endeavour to apply to them the skill of our workmen and the hydro-electric power derived from our streams."

The War Today—

Allied Attempt To Bore Through To Open Plain Leading to Cologne

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(AP War Analyst)

The fierce battle raging in the Aachen sector of the western front, where the U.S. 1st Army has crashed through the crust of the powerful Siegfried Line, is in that critical stage where a bit of good luck might tip the scales heavily towards the Allied side.

The Americans are continuing to widen the wedge they've driven into the westwall, which is particularly strong in this strategic zone. Tanks have been flung into the opening in an effort to bore through to the open plain which leads to the Rhenish city of Cologne — gateway to the great Ruhr industrial region and to Berlin beyond.

All-Out German Defence

The Germans are going all-out in their defence, having flung everything they can spare into this important engagement. They fully recognize that should the Allies make a break-through, carrying them across the Rhine, it would just about complete the hangman's noose for Hitler's neck. For this reason we may be sure that Gen. Eisenhower has his microscope on the Aachen battle, ready to pour in reserves and exploit any profitable-looking opening.

However, despite the potentialities of this battle, we mustn't assume that Eisenhower has picked it for the supreme effort which ultimately will open up the route through which the Allied armies will pour into the Reich. He will develop it if it looks good, but otherwise will strike in some more promising spot.

Allied Power Not Yet Turned Loose

Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels yesterday declared the Allies have opened an all-out offensive against Germany. That undoubtedly is true in the sense that the preliminary attacks are under way throughout the length of the 400-mile Allied line. But Eisenhower hasn't yet turned loose all the vast striking power at his disposal.

He is in the process of stabbing at numerous points in the Siegfried Line in an effort to find the soft spots, or at least the most feasible places for development. When he finds what he wants he will hurl a great concentration of force against it for a grand break-through. The Aachen sector might provide that spot if the present drive goes well.

Allies Race Against Time

The Allies are racing against time in an effort to smash across the Rhine before the winter weather clamps down on them. Their task is far from easy because there's much hard fighting to be done yet in Europe — not only on the western front but in the east and in Italy.

While the German forces are heavily outnumbered in western Europe they've managed to scrape together enough troops so that, as War Secretary Stimson puts it, they have "strength for initial defence of the west wall."

Nazi Divisions Weakened

The Germans claim to have 80 divisions in western Europe, and I understand from informed quarters that while this figure probably is true on paper, the divisions have been so weakened by losses that their actual strength likely is nearer 40. This might mean anything up to 500,000 fighting men.

That isn't enough Germans to hold the line, though they may cause considerable delay. Propagandist Goebbels virtually admitted in his statement yesterday that the west wall was doomed when he threatened that dwellers within Germany are prepared to wage guerilla warfare to the death.

Canadians in Balkan Air Force Support Invasion of Greece

Editor's note: Canadian airmen and air crew of the Balkan Air Force helped provide support for British troops invading Greece, it was disclosed in the following dispatch from an R.C.A.F. officer.

By FLT. LT. R. M. WILLIAMS
R.C.A.F.

With British Forces in Greece, Oct. 6 — (CP Cable) — As R.C.A.F. pilots and air crew in the Balkan Air Force helped provide sky support for Allied troops invading Greece, I accompanied the military forces crossing the Ionian Sea in invasion craft — and tonight all my old dreams are realised.

I am a millionaire — a multi-millionaire — with 15,000,000 drachmas burning a hole in my pocket.

Worth Only 12 Cigarettes

And I could go down to a neighboring village and blow the works on 12 cigarettes. But maybe I'll just spend 2,500,000 for four cigarettes and save the other 10,000,000 for a haircut.

This Greek exchange business is fantastic. For 2,500,000 drachmas are roughly equivalent to one English penny (about two cents). However, the current situation has been neatly solved by introducing British military authority notes in denominations of one shilling and upwards.

The Greeks urgently require medicine, boots, clothing and food in that order. Until these things arrive they are selling eggs, wines and services to the British troops and hoarding their shillings until the day comes when they will have something to spend it on.

Landing Craft Chased by Waterspouts

The most peculiar event of the landing in Greece was the chase of light landing craft across the Ionian Sea by two waterspouts. For an hour these two huge columns of water pursued us as we careened backward and forward at full speed in an effort to escape.

After the chase ended the waterspouts hadn't finished their work. They whirled away over the horizon and deposited all the water they had sucked up on the dirt roads we had to travel after landing, producing the worst rainfall in the Peloponnesus since 1930.

Make Nazi Garrison Supply Electricity

Another invasion freak was the electric power supplied by the German garrison in Patrai to British advanced headquarters just outside the city.

The power was generated by Greek patriots in the hills and if the Germans had cut off power for British headquarters the patriots would have ended the German power supply. The status quo was maintained until a mortar shell cut the lines.

'Mechanical Brain' Gunsight for Plane Machine-Gun Fire

Rochester, N.Y., Oct. 6 (AP)—Manufacture of a "mechanical brain" gunsight which electrically directs combat plane machine-gun fire so as to assure bulls-eye accuracy, adapted from a British design, was announced yesterday. The pilot need only dial the type of plane his enemy is flying, the range, the air speed and altitude and keep the enemy target within a gyro-controlled circle.

R.C.A.F. Recruiting Ends

One of the greatest organisations of the war which will leave its mark upon the future for what it has done in smashing the enemy of civilization, the Axis powers, and for what it will mean in the coming days of the after-war period in aviation has been the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. End of recruiting for the R.C.A.F. was announced Thursday by Air Minister Major Power, who revealed for the first time the strength of the R.C.A.F. as 204,000 men. The surplus of potential aircrew who have not yet begun their course of training will be demobilized and these young men will have the opportunity of joining the navy or the army. Many thousands are still in the process of air training and their course will continue and hence schools will continue to graduate personnel well on into 1945.

Figures were disclosed which were staggering in their greatness. 114,253 trained air crew personnel had graduated under the plan of whom 60,503 were R.C.A.F. members. Canada has laid out $1,631,000,000 of the $2,304,000,000 cost of the plan and there is a total of $442,500,000 recoverable from Britain as her share. Last February there were in the plan 11,000 planes in use and 3,899 aircrew graduated, the annual rate being 50,700. The new annual rate of graduation of aircrew will be 20,965. All future needs are met.

The Commonwealth Training Plan will be remembered in military history and in the life of the British Commonwealth of Nations for so many young men have passed through its doors to service that has had results which have made their mark on the course of the war and hence upon the life of the world. It was a gigantic conception and it has been carried out with the success that has fully served the needs of war. It has had a great part in battering the German Luftwaffe from its position and in the destruction of Hitler's war machine by the bombings over Germany and occupied Europe.

German Losses

In the present struggle it is estimated by a Swiss newspaper that Germany has lost eight and a half million men killed, six million three hundred thousand wounded. But that is not all, for ill in Germany are no fewer than twenty-one million, largely from "war experiences" or malnutrition, and eighteen millions shelterless, it is estimated, from air raid destruction.

This is part of what Germany herself has had to pay when Hitler was able to work Germany up to a war footing so that she might enter upon the war of aggression for the conquest of the world. And for it Grmany has to accept unconditional surrender at the close and whatever is necessary to prevent her making the world the battleground for tyranny again.

The above totals make no mention of the millions of prisoners. Hitler has also used up German resources of materials on his mad plunge into war. Germany's farm land is said to be exhausted according to this newspaper, her supply of game reduced to two-thirds and her forests ruthlessly cut down because the synthetic industry needed wood.

To this must be added the costs of the war in Italy and the costs to Japan. Then on the other side are the costs to the United Nations, through Axis aggression.

This mad dream of Hitler and Germany has its origin back in the long ago for Germany has been an aggressor for generations. In 1918 she was defeated and in time her defeat will come again as she loses her second war.

The stupendous losses which that nation has had to bear through these two conflicts is a retribution that Germany has to bear for the wages of aggression can never fail to be anything but costly since free men everywhere will fight and the aggressor must go down at the end of his fruitless and evil effort.

Germany under the law of retributary justice which does govern, however much a Hitler may say that only might rules, has had and will have to bear stupendous burdens economically and losses of life and ill health due to war conditions. It is with nations as with individuals, the aggressor must pay and so must the aider and abetter and at the same time a very heavy load falls upon those who are the victims of aggression.

Germany ought to see that humanity the world over will never permit Hun domination or any domination and will fight it to the last for it is contrary to the law of life and liberty.

German policy has opposed co-operation with other nations in progress and freedom. Like a giant bully she tries to coerce and beat smaller nations and has failed to learn the lessons of war through stubbornness, malice, sense of revenge and thirst for domination. In two wars she has been the loser.

The stupendous cost which the war has brought upon soldiers and civilians of Germany, upon her cities, only two of which it is said by the Swiss paper, Dresden and Breslau, "can be more or less called cities" because "the rest are a heap of ruins," her countryside and resources, should bring this power-made people to their senses.

For the unoffending Allied nations it is hard to have to bear their great costs but they have the realization that they are in the right, while criminal Germany after all her losses has to undergo like a criminal the penalty for her crimes against the whole world and the future of the human race. What has this lust for dominion at the expense of the rest of the nations brought Germany but disaster and ruin? She is now to be taught that she cannot go to war whenever she likes and then try to excuse herself out of it when defeated and perhaps prepare for another war. The Allied peoples have had to bear too much the burdens of war to permit recurrence of these struggles.

A Symbol and Fact

More light on the business streets and more lights on the residential streets of the city are symbolic of the rise of Allied power which at this time is smiting the Axis enemies with the certainty of beating them into submission and the lights of the world are coming on again.

Despite the Hun and the Jap the world likes light, physical light and moral light. That is what the Allied nations have fought for and that is what they are bringing back to the world.

However much people become accustomed to the new full glow of city illumination they will not forget the nights when there was less light because there were evil forces at work in the world which forced law-respecting nations to retrench so that weapons might be forged to bring these enemies to defeat and to bring back the fullest freedom and liberty.

Before their very eyes men and women see a symbol in the light—it must mean much to them.

Futurama for the Farm

The farm of the future, if we an believe the news these days, is going to be a very different affair from eyen the semi-bucolic establishment we've been used to. It is going to be fully mechanized, the prognosticators assure us, says Christian Science Monitor.

It's a good thing we have been warned, for it will take us a little time to get used to the idea. It will seem very strange, for instance, to find the barn redolent more of gasoline than of horses. It will seem even stranger to see loads of hay arriving, not aboard a hayrack, but tightly gripped in what we are told is a buck rake that picks up the hay in the field and transports it as it is to the barn in half-ton lots.

The farmer and his hired hands will probably take on the aspect of a panzer division, speeding out to the fields each morning in a cloud of dust, going through the day's ploughing or reaping at dizzy pace, and speeding back home again for a dinner of out-of-season delicacies fresh from the deep-freeze unit.

Valor gives awe and promises protection to those who want heart or strength to defend themselves.—Sir William Temple.

HEEDLESS

A woman's patience I
Perhaps was born to try.
Cluttered with manners sad
Which drive a woman mad.
Heedless of toil and care
I am the wife's despair!
Hear her: "For goodness' sake!
Pains will you never take?

"Was it your mother's way
Thoughtless to let you stay?
Follow you day and night
Setting your path aright;
Did she not wish you neat,
Careful of hands and feet?
Did she not once express
Scorn of your heedlessness?"

Answering her I say:
"Guess I was born this way!
P'raps by some ancient kin
Thus was I marked within;
Never hang things on hooks,
Close drawers or put back books;
Your patience oft to try
Down to the day I die."

HITTING THE PIKE

To "hit the pike" means take to the road or be on the way.

We also say that this or that was "the finest thing that ever came down the pike."

Why is a highway called a pike?

"Pike" in this sense is merely a shortened form of "turnpike."

"Turnpike" is synonymous with tollgate or tollbar. It refers to a horizontal barrier, such as a pole or pike turning on a vertical pin, set up along a road to halt vehicular and other traffic until the toll is paid.

A turnpike road is merely a road that has, or formerly had, turnpikes for the collection of tolls. Since the turnpike roads were usually the main roads, the term was extended in popular parlance to turnpike roads mentioned as being any important highway. We find common already in 1745.

The original turnpike was related to the turnstile, which is a gateway formed of four radiating arms of timber or metal at right angles to one another, revolving horizontally on a fixed vertical post and set up in a passage or entrance. Originally the turnstile was used to exclude any but foot-passengers, but now it is often intended to prevent the passage of more than one person at a time at any place where fees, fares or tickets are collected.

"Turnstile" is derived from the verb "to turn" and "stile," which is derived from an old Teutonic root meaning "to climb." The original stile was an arrangement of steps or the like contrived to allow passage over or through a fence to one person at a time while at the same time forming a barrier to sheep, cattle or other livestock.

"Cheval de frise" is a French military term. It was applied originally to a large, six-sided joist traversed with six-foot iron spikes that crossed each other. This device was used to check cavalry charges, to stop breaches in a fortified line, and to defend roads or narrow passages against horsemen. Literally the phrase means "horse of Friesland," which refers to the place where it was first used during the 16th century.

Four Differences Opinion Between Major Candidates

By JACK BELL
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Albany, N.Y., Oct. 6 (AP)—Four differences of opinion between President Roosevelt and Governor Thomas E. Dewey appeared to be developing today among major issues to be fought out in the remaining weeks of the presidential campaign.

Mr. Roosevelt stressed the issues last night in a 30-minute radio address to Democratic party rallies. Governor Dewey was expected to have his answers forthcoming soon—possibly in a speech tomorrow night in Charleston, W. Va., and possibly in news conferences.

Without referring to Gov. Dewey, the President took occasion in his talk to accuse some Republicans of "drawing a red herring across the trail" of the campaign by raising "the red spectre of Communism."

He said some politicians had wanted to make it difficult for members of the armed forces to vote, denied that there was any disposition on the part of the administration to keep men in the army after fighting stopped to avoid unemployment and reminded his listeners that such wartime restrictions as rationing and price controls could be ended quickly either by Congress or the President.

Gov. Dewey has raised the issue of Communist support against the Democrats, declaring several times during his recent western tour that Mr. Roosevelt had pardoned Earl Browder, Communist leader, who now is supporting a fourth term.

The President said he did not welcome the support of those who were committed to Communist or Fascist doctrines.

The soldier-vote issue arose even before Gov. Dewey became the Republican nominee, when he opposed enactment by Congress of the administration-SPD Federal war ballot bill.

He then insisted that the States could and would provide satisfactory means for uniformed personnel to vote.

The Republican nominee brought the issue of post-war service discharges into the campaign with the assertion that the administration was planning to hold men in the service longer than necessary in order to lessen the threat of unemployment after the war.

Reds Interested In Kiel Canal

Moscow, Oct. 6 — (AP) — The Soviet naval organ Red Fleet emphasized today Russia's deep interest in the post-war status of the Kiel Canal, which cuts through German territory south of the Danish border to link the Baltic with the North Sea.

Declaring the "question of security of the Baltic Sea" was involved, the paper said:

"Twice during the last 30 years German Imperialism has locked the Baltic Sea. This cannot be tolerated any longer."

Red Fleet added that "no other Baltic power prevented, and some did not want to prevent, German Imperialism from acting as pirates."

"Only the country which exterminates the pirates by its own arms could appear as the guarantor of safety on this sea," the paper asserted.

Says Hydro Now Free From Politics And Undue Govt. Influence

Brantford, Ont., Oct. 6 (CP) — Hydro today is free from politics and from any undue influence exerted by the government of the province of Ontario, Hon. George Challies, Minister Without Portfolio and member of the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission told Hydro representatives from the Ontario Municipal Electoral Association, District 5, Wednesday night.

"All municipalities should be on their guard against outside influences anxious to control Hydro and to secure its reserves to promote them for purposes for which they were not intended," he said.

Control of Hydro is in the commission appointed by the government, but control of Hydro legally, and in practice, is the function of the commission, he stated.

No Fuel Worries in Days Of Big Rural Woodpiles

(An Editorial in the Huron Expositor, Seaforth)

Last week we spent a day in a part of Ontario entirely new to us, but which brought back vivid memories of a once familiar sight in every home, in every town and village and farm in this part of Huron.

It was the long-forgotten woodpile. To be sure, it was a sparsely settled district, but every habitation had about it somewhere, what seemed to us, a fabulous pile of wood, cut and dried and piled ready for Winter use, in a part of the country where they really have a Winter every year.

The leaves were turning and the air was crisp at night, but not a householder was looking anxiously at his coal bin and wondering what he would do if the coal man failed him. In fact, these people's acquaintances did not include a coal man, and they were even less acquainted with his products.

There are a lot of people who can still easily remember when conditions were exactly the same in this part of Huron. Back to the days when the district farmers would cut the next Winter's supply of wood the Winter before, and at the same time mark out the older trees in the bush lot on every farm, which would be cut sometime between now and next Spring for fuel a year later. And the surplus would be sold to householders in the towns and villages.

Woodpiles were rotated like crops, and the wood lay drying in the sun of the Spring and Summer until the sap was dried out, the cells dried and through the cracks that developed the sun would sink deep into the heart of the wood. Then, when Fall and Winter came there were no damp, smoky fires, but the kind that crackled and splutered dispensed a heat that made the interior of the house feel like a hot day in Summer.

• •

No doubt it meant work for our grandfathers, and lots of it. But experience and practice seemed to make it easy. It must have been healthy work, too, cutting up the trees with a crosscut saw, or even a bucksaw, into cordwood and stove lengths, in the fine, clean smell of maple and beech that permeated the air. And even if it was hard, it must have been satisfactory work, as no man could look at his growing piles of wood without feeling a security for himself and family, no matter what the coming Winter would prove to be, back in the days when there were no steam or hot water heating plants, and no furnaces, and there was no coal dealer at the end of a telephone wire.

Too, the wood always paid a double dividend. It heated the cutter twice—once when he cut it, and again when he burned it. And as every man owned a saw and an axe and a strong pair of arms, there never was a fuel shortage known to exist.

• •

Perhaps we have gone a long way and learned a good deal since those days, but the average man has lost a good deal too, in the old family woodpile, that filled the woodshed and overflowed out of doors. No longer can we fire up to our heart's content, without thinking of the cost or the Fuel Controller, either.

DIS-USE, ATROPHY, AND DIS-EASE

A tooth one can use in one's business of living is easily worth ten times what it costs to have the finest possible denture installed—to any one but a tramp.

Critical inspection of the mouth of the pyorrhea patient usually reveals that the patient has neglected to have necessary dental treatment or repairs in earlier years or has indulged in the false economy of makeshift work by quacks who can remain in business as long as there are new suckers to be lured into the strategically situated "parlors."

Don't look now, my dental friend, but it is at least notable that most of these pyorrhea patients are and for years have been the most conscientious users of toothbrushes and dentifrices. It may seem unladylike to mention it here, but in my rude way—after all, my old man was just an honest but poor blacksmith until he got smashed up, and after that the family (seven members) subsisted on a monthly income of $35, plus what potatoes, chickens, milk, cream, butter, ham, corn, beans, squash, bacon, spare rigs, salt pork, apples, cabbage, pears, currants, cherries, pickles, jellies, jams, pigs' knuckles, sausage, fresh fish, fresh eggs and the like we could raise on vacant patches here and there or harvest on shares or catch or gather one way or another—gosh, we were poor but withal well nourished—in my rude way I often wonder whether the poor geek with pyorrhea would have gotten himself into such a sad predicament had he invested in good dentistry.

Dis-use of the teeth, gums, muscles, mucous membranes, glands, bones which are concerned in the function of mastication inevitably leads to atrophy, wasting, weakening of the face, muscles, mucous membranes, glands, bones, gums and teeth. This shrinking and weakening advances slowly or rapidly according to the number of teeth crippled or lost and not immediately repaired or replaced with functionally efficient dentures. Dis-use, dys-trophy (which means bad or poor nutrition), and sooner or later it dawns on you or your dentist that you have dis-ease—pyorrhea.

Fashion Flashes

FINE DETAIL marks many of the new fur coats. A fitted black Persian lamb coat has a three-button closing, half-belt back, folded in fullness at the sleeves and a folded over shoulder seam at the deep armhole.

DRESS-UP evenings are definitely here. With a simple sheath-like black crepe frock one woman wore a long black fox stole, long black suede gloves and a tiny velvet forward-pointed hat a-swirl with aigrette type feathers. A head-turning get-up!

IT'S NICE to see colorful hats spicing dark suits and frocks. A colorful affair is a small thick sailor of beetroot red hatter's plush with voluminous draping of blue and fuchsia chenille-dotted veiling, and a flat, double bow of blue satin at one side of the brim.

THE PLOT IS THE SAME for many of the most-liked dresses of the season. It includes a deep, wide square neckline finished at either side with self bows, and a side draped skirt also marked by a big self bow. It's style that is becoming to most women and suitable for all fabrics, even wools.

BIG DEMAND for tunic coat suits all over the country. Black woolen with tuxedo front of black and white checked woolen and matching checked skirt makes a good suit due for plenty of wear. Tunic coat can be worn with or without belt, which gives it quite a different appearance.

NO NOVELTY anymore is the verdict on the long-skirted dinner dress. Black silk crepe makes a graceful frock with entire back of sheer set in a scalloped frame of black lace that is in one with the long, tight, lace sleeves.

Brilliant Singing and Acting By All-Star Opera Quartet

A musically satisfied audience reluctantly wandered from the Collegiate Auditorium following the concluding number of the Community Concert on Thursday evening after it had heard the Columbia All-Star Opera Quartet, a group of seasoned opera stars, full of the fire and action of an art which absolutely precludes stiffness and immobility. The four stars Walter Cassel, baritone; Donald Dame, lyric tenor; Helen Olheim, mezzo-soprano, and Josephine Tuminia, coloratura soprano, seemed to assume complete mastery over the assemblage. They "burst forth" in a glow of friendliness upon their listeners, and captivated them with not only their singing qualities but their charming and sparkling personalities.

This versatile quartet, all of whom possess fine and resonant voices of ample breadth and weight, blends itself in perfect and effective harmony. Their voices of glowing quality emitted and controlled with taste and assurance and demonstrating deep feeling and dramatic fervour are the qualities, the sparks, which set their audience afire and turned the polite applause into a burst of enthusiasm.

Histrionic Ability.

The four displayed marked histrionic ability, going into theme character with an ease that was delightful to watch. In the duet, "What a pleasing effect," from "The Barber of Seville" by Rossini, Mr. Dame and Mr. Cassel made the performance shine. The audience laughed at their acting at the same time they were enjoying their singing. In the "Stuttering Song" from the Bartered Bride by Smetana, Mr. Dame, as soloist, literally "brought down the house" with his singing interpretation of an idiot. Miss Tuminia singing with tragic happiness the "Shadow Song" from Dinorah by Meyerbeer made "live again" the character Dinorah. The audience chuckled with delight at the different characters when the four stars sang "The Spinning Wheel Quartet" from Martha by Flotow. The recitatives were delivered in clearly enunciated English and the music exerted its ineffable magic upon its listeners.

Ovation For Artists.

Rendering the Prologue from "Pagliacci" by Leoncavallo, Mr. Cassel was "superb." He sang his way into the hearts of his listeners, their loud ovation bringing him back in the encore "A Sailor's Life" by H. Lane Wilson. Raising her fresh, flexible voice and using it with a bewitching coquetry, Miss Olheim sang "The Song of Khivria" from The Fair of Sorotschinsk by Moussorsky and was returned to the stage in the encore "Come Live With Me" by Carnivalli. In Miss Tuminia's return number, she rendered "Clavelitos" by Valverde.

The remainder of the program was as follows: Quartet: "Bella figlia dell'amore" from Rigoletto by Verdi; Duet: "Piangi fanciulla" from Rigoletto by Verdi, taken by Miss Tuminia and Mr. Cassel; Duet: by Miss Olheim and Mr. Dame, "Barcarolle" from Tales of Hoffman by Offenbach; Duet: by Miss Tuminia and Miss Olheim "Sous le dome epais" from Lakme by Delibes; "Donkey Duet" from Veronique by Messenger, sung by Miss Olheim and Mr. Cassel; "Le Reve" from Manon by Massenet taken by Mr. Dame; Duet Miss Tuminia and Mr. Dame Parigi o Cara" from La Traviata by Verdi; Quartet arrangement of Sextet from Lucia di lammermoor by Donizetti; "The Goodnight Quartet" from Martha by Flotow.

The music of the assisting pianist Mr. Archibald Black left no doubt in the mind of his hearers that he possesses the ability to interpret the music of the great masters with a perfection and beauty of style which makes him a pianist of distinction.

Following the concert, the executive of the Community Concert entertained the members and their friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Freeman where they had the opportunity of becoming acquainted with the All-Star Quartet.

St. Julien Chapt. Receives Letter Of Appreciation

Expressing appreciation for the parcels of gifts and comforts sent to the crew members of their ship from Belleville, officials of the local St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E. have received the following letter from the canteen officer of the H.M.C.S. "DUNVEGAN". This Canadian ship has been adopted by the local chapter with gift parcels for crew members regularly proceeding from this city for the enjoyment and comfort of the crew members.

St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E.,
Belleville, Ontario.

Dear Ladies:

It is with the ink of human thanks and appreciation that this letter is compiled.

Many, many, and innumerable are the thanks, that arose from the messdecks. The I.O.D.E. beams as an ever-burning neon sign of endeavor in the minds of officers and men alike. We who realise the work entailed, and the organization put forth, in order that we, one of the most fortunate ship's companies in the R. C. N. receive such donations, and receive them so well packed, are overwhelmed by the interest shown.

I am sure that if you could see the scramble when rumor has it that the I.O.D.E. parcels have arrived, success would spell your achievements. We do away with the usual piping of ships' hands turn to to take on supplies and volunteers are ready and willing to lend a hand.

I suppose many of your ladies have watched with admiration as their children break the first Christmas seal, and wait in obeisance for the look of honest-to-goodness happiness for the gift received. Here the men who, like all men, become somewhat disheartened by routine, men varying in age, men diverse in their ideas, outlooks, and principles, men who at all times await the moment to return to their homes, some to parents, while others to their wives and children, are encouraged by your thoughtfulness. It is not sufficient to receive their letters and their parcels; they do not expect, but they do appreciate, the interest shown by such groups as the St. Julien Chapter.

Even now, secure having been sounded, your magazines are their reading material, your books fill their bookshelves, and your candies and cookies fill their otherwise empty candy dishes.

It is from the depths of human kindness that such an interest must derive its origin, and in your case it seems like a bottomless abyss.

Again I say, thank you most sincerely, and on behalf of officers and men alike, we have one of the best chapters in the whole I.O.D.E.

Yours sincerely,
R. F. Bert,
Canteen Officer,
H.M.C.S. "Dunvegan".

KING CAROL GOING BACK

Mexico City, Oct. 5 (AP)—Former King Carol of Romania is going back home, palace officials said he told President Avila Camacho here yesterday.

"Apparently you guys don't know we're having Grape-Nuts Flakes for breakfast!"

"Why Sarge—we'd have been up before the bugler if we'd known those super-delicious, energy-giving Grape-Nuts Flakes are on the menu!"

"Well, you'd better jump to it! You'll need that Grape-Nuts Flakes nourishment today. We're going on a 15-mile route march!"

"Nuff said! We're on our way to the mess hut for our malty-rich, sweet-as-a-nut Grape-Nuts Flakes with their carbohydrates to give us energy, proteins to make our muscles bulge, iron for the blood, phosphorus for teeth and bones, and those other Grape-Nuts Flakes food essentials."

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Plain Penelope Need Not Despair

Sitting on the sidelines when the dance goes on is no fun. Every girl wants to be popular, feel that she is attractive, that she contributes something to the social scene. If she feels that Mama Nature has short-changed her on the good-looks deal, she must make up for the oversight. It can be done.

Given health, high spirits and a pocketbook that can stand a bit of strain for beautifying purposes, no girl or woman need be unattractive, no matter how plain her features may be. In fact, in these days when prettiness is a drug on the market, the plain woman who has style and distinction is a treat to the eye. To be chic is sometimes better than to be pretty.

Let us consider the figure. Many defects of the silhouette can be overcome by corrective exercises. The pumpkin shape can be trimmed down by dieting, the asparagus outline can develop curves by the same means unless emaciation is the result of ill health, in which case old Family Doc must be consulted. Reducing is a matter of will power and intelligent direction. It is only when overweight is due to glandular disturbances—and these cases are rare—that getting down to normal measurements is a tough job.

Both the fat and the thin should take themselves in hand because normal weight means better health.

Dress! Clothes make 'em and unmake 'em, no doubt about it. If every woman had good taste in dress, an appreciation of line and color, there wouldn't be a single ugly frock in any store, because there would be no demand for frumpy dry goods. The dowdy woman is that way because she has never made an effort to cultivate the dress sense; if one hasn't it, one should get professional help, seek a shop with a proprietor who will take an interest in the cash customer.

Many an ugly duckling has been transformed into a swan by dropping into a shop where clerks are eager to help in the selection by smart draperies. Not all women have the gift for picking out what is smart and becoming. Many women have fixed ideas that keep them five years behind the fashions. They need enlightenment.

Cultivating beautiful hands will help a woman make her beauty mark. A new, up-to-date coiffure will chop years from a woman's appearance—just a change from the same old hair-do.

There's no age limit now on make-up. A bit of rosebud flush on the cheeks, applied deftly, a deepening of the natural coloring of the lips, will modernize the woman who just hasn't cared enough to find out what should be done about her complexion.

daintiness of appearance, friendliness and graciousness—these qualities can be acquired by anyone. Dry your tears, Penelope. Climb out! And what a host of charm assets are to be had! A lovely voice,

Ken O'Dea's Single in Eleventh Wins for St. Louis Cardinals In Second Game of Series

Brownies Tie Up Game in Seventh on Solid Hits

SCORE IS 3-2

St. Louis, Oct. 6 — (AP) — The Cardinals took advantage of the Browns' fielding lapses to gain an early lead, then lashed out with 2 timely hits in the 11th inning Thursday as they whipped the American League champions, 3-2, and squared the first all-St. Louis world series in the longest game played in the baseball classic since 1935.

Away to an unearned two-run lead when the Brownies' defence fell apart in the third and fourth innings, the National League title-holders broke through again in the second extra frame on blows by Ray Sanders and Pinchhitter Ken O'Dea after the Browns had pounded Max Lanier for the two tying runs in the seventh.

Both Starters Leave

A crowd of 35,076, paying $152,553, saw the two starting pitchers, Lanier, the southpaw ace of the National Leaguers, and 32-year-old Nelson Potter of the Browns, hook up in a pitching duel during the early innings.

Potter went out for a pinchhitter in the seventh as the Browns staged their uprising. Lanier left the scene after Mike Kreevich, Brownies' centrefielder, opened the eighth with a double. Blix Donnelly, who hurled the last two innings Wednesday when the Browns won the series opener, and Bob Muncrief, troubled with a sore arm the latter part of the season, were just as brilliant. Neither gave ground until Ray Sanders led off the 11th with a single. Whitey Kurowski moved him up with a sacrifice. Marty Marion was passed intentionally but O'Dea, batting for Second Baseman Emil Verban, caught one of Muncrief's fast pitches for a line single into right to decide the issue.

It was a thriller in contrast to Wednesday's 2-1 victory, won by the Browns on two hits. Brilliant plays were frequent, with Marion making several seemingly impossible stops.

Thirteen Brownies went down via the strikeout route, six by Lanier as he hurled one-hit ball for the first six innings, and seven by Donnelly. The 29-year-old Donnelly reached his greatest heights in the eighth when he struck out three of the four men to face him after Kreevich sent the chunky Lanier to the showers. Donnelly checked the Browns with two hits in the last four frames to become the winning pitcher.

Potter Starts Downfall

Potter whiffed three and Muncrief four, but the former set the stage for the Brownies' eventual downfall when he was charged with two errors on one play in the third inning.

With Verban on first as the result of a single, Lanier sacrificed. The ball popped into the air between the plate and pitcher's box. Potter barely got his hands on the ball, fumbled it and made a wild throw to first, allowing Verban to go all the way to third. Augue Bergamo, who replaced Danny Litwhiler in left field for the Cards, couldn't get the ball past Second Baseman Don Gutteridge, but that was enough to let the fleet Verban cross the plate with the game's first run.

The Cards picked up the other unearned run in the fourth. Mark Christman was guilty of another error that loaded the bases with only one out. A walk to Sanders and Whitey Kurowski's first hit of the series put men on first and second. The Brownies' third baseman fumbled Marion's hard grounder. Sanders rounded third for home, but fell and scampered back to the hot corner. Verban sent a high fly to Chet Laabs in left and Sanders easily romped home after the catch.

That two-run lead appeared to be enough with Browns at the mercy of Lanier, Marion's sensation stops cutting short anything that resembled a rally.

But the "Cinderella Kids" showed some of the mettle that carried them to the American League pennant by tying up the count in the seventh. There was no indication of an uprising as McQuinn fanned to start the inning and Mark Christman fouled to Catcher Walker Cooper.

Moore Opens Rally.

Gene Moore, whose single opened the Browns' victorious rally in the first game, singled. Weak-hitting Red Hayworth rapped a curve to the left-field fence. That was good for one run. Frank Mancuso, also usually a weak hitter, batted for Potter, and singled, scoring Hayworth with the tying run.

The American League fans seemed squelched as Don Gutteridge grounded out to end the inning, but rose up again as Kreevich doubled to open the eighth. Donnelly was called in to put out the fire. He did it by striking out Chet Laabs for the third straight time that the leftfielder went down swinging. Then Donnelly fanned dangerous Vern Stephens and Christman after walking George McQuinn.

He set the American Leaguers down in order in the ninth, and allowed one hit in the 10th. McQuinn's double at the start of the 11th put him in a spot, but when Christman bunted down the third-base line the rookie hurler rushed in and made a good play to Kurowski at third to catch McQuinn by an eyelash.

Baltimore Orioles, piloted by Manager Alphonse (Tommy) Thomas, were scheduled to arrive her today after entraining at Baltimore last night.

The series will be continued here Saturday night and Sunday. Then the squads will journey to Baltimore for the remainder of the necessary games.

Louisville conquered Milwaukee and St. Paul in the association play-offs to earn the right to meet the Orioles who defeated Buffalo and Newark, both by four games to three.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
(AP Sport Writer)

New York, Oct. 6 — (AP)—Clear dope from the big muddy: . . . You couldn't blame Mort Cooper much for being discouraged about the lack of runs in October — for his side . . . Big Mort has started four world series games and only once have the Cards given him any runs . . . They were blanked for the eight innings he pitched in the 1942 series opener, shut out again in last year's finale and didn't score Wednesday until Cooper had left at the end of the seventh.

Cleaning the Cuff:

President Harry Parr of the Maryland Jockey Club is such a strong supporter of the Baltimore Orioles that when Johnny Podgajny did some fancy hurling in a recent play-off game, Parr said he would name a race at Pimlico after him . . . Madison Square Garden has just declared a dividend of 25 cents a share — or about what some of those summer fights there were worth . . . Jesse Owens, who was reported from Europe as being in the Army in Europe and getting ready to run in a meet in Paris, turned up at last Saturday's Ohio State-Missouri game to report that he has been working in a Detroit automobile plant for two years.

Toronto, Oct. 6 — (CP) — Apparently there isn't anything much better as basic training for a Commando course in any of the three services than a good, stirring season of lacrosse, with all its attending flailing shillelahs and near mayhem.

That, in part, is what that west coast boxla expert, Dan McKenzie of New Westminster, writes Jim Coleman of the Toronto Globe and Mail. Dan says that west coast teams have been losing players all along because "the training received by lacrosse players while learning the game develops an urge to get into the armed forces."

Aside from that, there isn't much wrong with the game in British Columbia, he avers, and the Salmonbellies are looking forward to copping the Mann Cup again if all goes well. St. Catharines Athletics have not been consulted yet about their attitude in the matter, however.

Young 'Uns Active:

Interest in minor hockey ranks in Ontario is at a record pitch, reports secretary Jack Christie of the O.M.H.A. Things are starting to hop early, and 10 minor teams have sent in their entries already, starting with Sault Ste. Marie on Aug. 14 no less! Last year, the entries didn't begin trickling in until the second week in November, but before they stopped reached an all-time high of 122. So, minor officials are hoping for an even better season this year.

Hither and Yon:

If trying means anything, the Kitchener, Ont., area will be well represented in this winter's rookie N.H.L. crop. Bobbie Schnurr of St. Michael's College is trying out with Boston Bruins, while Don Bauer and Pat Boehmer are taking a trial with Toronto Maple Leafs . . . Hockey promoters in Los Angeles and other west coast U. S. centres are looking for hockey timber in Canada's west. Wholesale importations of talent aren't expected to start until after the war, however . . . The Callaghan Sisters of Vancouver, Margie and Helen, liked their stay in the American professional Glamor Girls' softball league, but it's rumored they aren't interested in returning next year unless their salary ceiling is boosted . . .

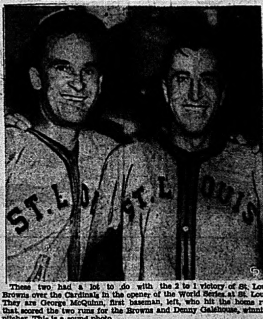
THESE ARE THE BOYS WHO DID IT



These two had a lot to do with the 2 to 1 victory of St. Louis Browns over the Cardinals in the opener of the World Series at St. Louis. They are George McQuinn, first baseman, left, who hit the home run that scored the two runs for the Browns and Denny Galehouse, winning pitcher. This is a sound photo.

Only team which will not appear in Toronto is the 1943 Dominion champion Hamilton Wildcats who are at home tomorrow to the Ottawa Trojans. Wildcats are expected to run their string of victories to three straight to retain their leadership in the O.R.F.U. standings. It is the second game in a week for these two teams who played last Saturday in Ottawa where Joe Krol led Wildcats to a 6-1 win.

The Trojans will play in Toronto again on Monday where their opponents will be the Toronto Indians who are also billed for double action at the weekend as they have a game with Toronto Balmy Beach tomorrow.

The Navy is taking over the Saturday football program in Toronto. They play the St. Thomas R.C.A.F. team in the first game of the double bill and their supporters are confident they will run their consecutive wins in service league play to three games. A special half-time program will be presented by the H.M.C.S. York dance band, which will play during the game.

The Navy-St. Thomas tilt will be followed by the second meeting between Beaches and Indians in a week. With veterans Earl Selkirk and Sam Sward along with rookies Brois Tipoff and Billy Myers to provide the scoring punch and a big line to batter the way, the Beaches are expected to score their second win of the season. They won last week's contest 19-1. However, if fleet Murray Jacobs gets away on many long runs and the Jack Harris-Al Humphrey forward-passing combination clicks consistently the Indians may gain their first victory of the season.

A Services League game between Camp Borden R.C.A.F. Hurricanes, who seem to have hit their scoring stride now that Toronto veteran Bobby Porter has taken over quarterback duties, and the Hagersville R.C.A.F. Bombers is the feature of Monday's double bill.

Should both Ottawa and Indians lose tomorrow their battle in the second game Monday will be for the cellar position in the O. R. F. U. so far each has lost its only starts, Ottawa one and Indians two.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

When Miss Lorain Clayton was appointed sports editor of Ohio State's student newspaper, "The Lantern," the college athletic department and the newspapermen of Columbus, O., dailies protested against the invasion of the stadium press box by a woman. A compromise was reached when Lorain was assigned a broadcaster's booth as her private stall.

The Baltimore hockey club, sponsored by Eddie Shore, manager of the Buffalo Bisons in the American Hockey League, yesterday was admitted to membership in the Eastern U.S. Amateur Hockey League. The farm team will play its first game at home Nov. 1 against New York Rovers.

The Kingston Memorial Recreation Centre Committee has recommended to the city council that a bylaw be submitted to the ratepayers for a $100,000 vote toward the construction of the sports and auditorium building on the local fair grounds property. W. J. Watts has been named president of the organization.

Ridden by 13-year-old Don Coke, Flora Astra from the Coke Bros. farm, Petrolia, yesterday won both heats of the half-mile running race at the Brooke and Alvinston annual fall fair at Alvinston, second horse being Rusty Lass, owned by O. Williams of Wyoming. Royal Henley accounted for two of three heats in the 2:26 harness pace.

London, Ont., is to have a football feature on Thanksgiving Day when the Mustangs of the University of Western Ontario play their first exhibition game of the season at Little Stadium, the visitors being the Hornets of Technical Training School, St. Thomas, in the Services League.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

A Frenchman, struggling with the English language, turned to an American friend for counsel:

Frenchman—What is a polar bear?

American—Polar bear? Why, he lives way up north.

Frenchman—But what do he do?

American—Or, he sits on a cake of ice and eats fish.

Frenchman—Zat settle! I will not accept.

American—What in the world do you mean, you won't accept?

Frenchman—Ah, I was invite to be a polar bear at a funeral, and I will not accept.

Appreciation Shewn.

When negotiations were first opened between Fort Erie and the local "Marines" regarding the venue of the 1944 Intermediate O.A.S.A. final championship series, the Fort Erie management offered the locals a flat guarantee of $400 to play the entire series in the Buffalo suburb. It was suggested a game be played Friday and in the event the series went to three games, then two would be played in Fort Erie Saturday.

"We refused this flattering offer for the simple reason the softball fans of Belleville had supported us in a splendid manner all season and we did not think it fair to take the entire championship series out of town," revealed Max Peoples, manager of the Marines today.

"The fans have turned out to our play-off games in goodly numbers, thus materially assisting us to finance trips to Oshawa, Kingston and Toronto. Naturally we hope for the same unstinting patronage on Monday when we play Fort Erie in the return game. With Monday a holiday and the possibility of a third and final game being played directly following the second game the largest softball crowd in history should be in the Fair Grounds stands," commented Skipper Peoples before leaving for the west part of the province.

The "Marines" will leave by motor early this evening, staying all night in either Grimsby or Oakville before continuing to Fort Erie Saturday morning. Incidentally the Columbian Squires leave by motor for Windsor and the Junior O.A.S.A. finals versus the Border Cities Mic-Macs tomorrow morning.

While on the subject of softball it might be fitting to relate that the Oshawa "Colts," thrice Ontario Intermediate champions, found the Senior "B" ranks a little tougher. George Campbell's Motor City charges bowed out to Hamilton in the senior ranks. Maybe the Colts will be back in the intermediate ranks another year.

This and That.

It has been rumored in and around Toronto that Syl Apps, former Maple Leaf hockey star, might return to the Leafian line-up this winter....Discount all such rumors, Apps will report to the Officers' Training Centre at Brockville next week after being in the Canadian Army for the past two years... Recently Lieut. Norm Clarke, sports officer at the Simcoe Army base where Apps was stationed, wrote to his sister here (Mrs. Harry Mills) informing her of Apps' decision to take an officers' course—"Apps will not be with the Leafs this winter," Captain Clarke assured his sister... Incidentally Norm Clarke is proud of the sporting activities of his Simcoe unit and would like to bring a soldier team to his native Belleville for a friendly match of some description..Lieut. Clarke does not care whether it is hockey, softball or even boxing, but he would like to head an army team into his old home town just once....When the officials of the Quinte Skating Club announced they would engage a professional skating instructor this winter the local fancy and figure skating moguls surely made a step in the right direction.

Cards Even Matters.

Wednesday's world series bouquet went to George McQuinn for his two-run homer that gave the St. Louis Browns the first game of the 1944 diamond classic. Yesterday's bows should be divided between Ken O'Dea and Blix Donnelly. O'Dea came through with an 11-inning pinch drive to score the winning run for the Cardinals and even the series, but from the radio accounts it would appear as though Donnelly's relief pitching was the principal factor that won for "Billie the Kid" Southworth and the St. Louis Red Birds yesterday. Donnelly struck out seven batters in four innings, striking out three Brownies in the eighth after the Cinderella Browns had tied the score in the seventh and got the first batter aboard in the eighth. True enough O'Dea's pinch single to score Sanders is being referred to as "the perfect hit", but still Donnelly's mound work was superb. Some fans scoffed at the Browns winning on two hits Wednesday, well the Cardinals only had one earned run yesterday, there first two counters being directly attributed to Brown errors. But these are the fortunes of a world series when anything can happen—and usually does.

Remember When.

That old old adage "they don't come back" was proven in New York 12 years ago tonight when Jimmy (Baby Face) McLarnin, the Vancouver Irishman, scored a six-round technical knockout over aging Benny Leonard. Ruler of the lightweight division in the early '20s and one of the greatest boxers of his weight of all time, Leonard absorbed a terrific beating before the bout was finally stopped.

Softballers Meet.

The Belleville Ladies' Softball Association will hold its semi-annual meeting at the Y.M.C.A. tonight commencing shortly after eight. Teams interested in playing next year are advised to be present as considerable business is on the agenda. The question of changing the date of the election of officers is already on Secretary Eddie Schreider's books, along with suggestions of expansion another season.

Pete Gray, above, sensational one-armed outfielder of Memphis Southern association club, has been sold to the St. Louis Browns for an undisclosed sum and another player.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 490

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You lucky people, think of all the bridge players who haven't yet had your opportunity of reading Horse Sense rules and reasons for them. Don't you feel sorry for them?

Fall heir to a hand like this:

♠ A Q J 10 4 3 2
♥ A
♦ 10 3
♣ A Q 3

Is it an opening of one spade, or two spades, or three spades? Apply the Horse Sense rule that most nearly fits this hand and your selection will stand up against any argument.

You know a one spade opening would show a biddable spade suit, five suit tricks, four high cards, two sure tricks. You have all that and then some. "Then some" prompts you to look for a better bid.

You know a two spade opening would show nine tricks. You have only eight; five high cards, two short cards in hearts, a short in diamonds. Not enough for a two bid.

You know a three spade opening shows a re-rebiddable spade suit, one sure outside trick, seven or eight tricks. All that stuff is in this hand. So, it must be an opening of three spades.

Should you be tempted to open with the lower bid of one spade? Certainly not. Partner may pass with less than three tricks. And you have hopes of making a game if partner has a trick or two.

Should you be tempted to open with the stronger two spade bid? Nix on that. You know such a bid forces partner to bid even with no tricks. And without a trick in partner's hand, you have no game.

Thus, the opening with that hand should not be a bid that must wait for partner to have three tricks. Nor should it be a bid that forces partner to bid with nothing.

It should be an opening that asks partner to bid if he has any trick. The opening that makes such a request is a three bid.

Pick 'em right and save a fight.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

(By The Canadian Press)

With the R.C.A.F. in France, Oct. 6 (CP) — "It's been a hectic day," the armorer said as he closed the last gun well and gave the last cannon barrel a parting polish. For the seventh time since the morning fog had lifted, LAC. Richard Larson, Punnichy, Sask., had made this Typhoon ready—cleaned the cannon barrels, checked the sights and firing mechanism, and packed the wells with belts of 20-millimetre cannon rounds.

Seven times the Typhoon had swept off the dirt strip in a galloping cloud of red dust and headed for Lisieux. The squeeze play was on and for the ground men there was no rest. Three different pilots had taken the plane up to join in the transport-busting attack. But Larson looked after the cannon of the three Typhoons without assistance until mid-afternoon when his partner, LAC. Al. Baldwin (712 Walmer Road), Saskatoon, Sask., who had the day off, decided to forego the holiday and joined him at this dispersal.

"You don't mind hard work," Larson explained, "when you know it's important, and today we've got Jerry on the run. I got rid of 2,200 rounds on this kite today and she's going up on another flip yet."

Baldwin and Larson are with the City of Ottawa squadron.

"It helps a lot when our ground boys understand that they've got a personal stake in the fighting," said Flt. Sgt. L. Sunstrum, Ottawa, (50 Spruce St.) The pilots know that and before taking off they show their armorers just where the target is on the map. When they get back, the boys will hear at first-hand how the attack went and how many "flamers", "smokers" or damaged they're claiming.

Strafing of enemy transport is an old story to several pilots with an RCAF fighter wing in France commanded by Group Commander W. R. McBrien of Ottawa. They first gained experience by hammering Rommell's supply lines in the desert, and they have put their experience to good purpose in the mass aerial assault on German vehicles in the battle of Normandy.

"It was easier in North Africa," said Flt. Lt. Gordon Troke, D.F.C., of Wolfville, N.S. "There were no trees out there and we used to find the Hun travelling nose to tail." Flt. Lt. Neil Russell, New Westminster, B.C. (2339 Dow Ave.) said, "The job is much the same as we did out there, only we've got lots more targets."

The change of the new gyroscopic gunsight from the old ring and bead fixed sight has resulted in a greater number of "kills" than otherwise would be the case, according to Canadian fighter pilots in France. For one thing, a Spitfire pilot can open up on an opponent from longer range.

It would be wrong to say the pilots are 100 per cent for the new sight. But as a rule, those who prefer the old sight are veteran second-tour men who as deflection shot artists did all right with the earlier model. For instance neither Wing Commander J. E. Johnson, D.S.O. and two bars, nor Sqdn. Ldr. H. W. McLeod, D.S.O., D.F.C., and Bar from Regina, like it.

Drought Spell In Australia Called Most Tragic

Sydney, Australia, Oct. 6 (C.P. Cable) — Drought conditions, described by Commerce Minister William Scully, as "the most tragic in Australia's recent history," may cut the wheat crop to not more than 48,000,000 bushels, lowest since 1914 and most states will have the greatest difficulty in meeting production goals for many types of foodstuffs, the minister said Thursday.

One report said sheep were "dying like flies in southwest New South Wales where flocks totalling 500,000 face extinction."

The minister called it the "most tragic in recent history" because it came at a time when the country's agricultural resources have been strained to the utmost.

A grant of £3,000,000 (about $10,800,000) to drought-effected cereal farmers was announced.

Wife of Trade Minister Dies

Ottawa, Oct. 6 (CP) — Mrs. J. A. MacKinnon, wife of Trade Minister MacKinnon, died at her home here early Thursday after a brief illness.

The former A. Irene Sharpe, she was a daughter of John Sharpe, Summerside, P.E.I., and was married June 29, 1911.

Mrs. MacKinnon suffered a heart attack recently.

The minister represents the riding of Edmonton West.

Quality of Ontario Potato Crop Good

Potato harvesting is now general on farms throughout Ontario, and while the aggregate yield of late potatoes has been estimated at below that of last year, the quality of this year's crop is better than usual, reports R. E. Goodin, potato fieldman of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Blight disease has not been prevalent in the crop this year throughout old Ontario, says Mr. Goodin, and therefore consumers may purchase their supplies with confidence that the potatoes will keep well under suitable storage.

The early crop has already been completely marked together with much of the intermediate crop. During recent weeks there has been an unusually heavy export movement to the United States market, where there has been a shortage of potatoes.

Consumers who purchase their winter's supplies during the next few weeks will be assisting in overcoming problems of distribution during the coming months, as there is a shortage of storage space and railway cars.

Cormorants Seen At Pt. Traverse

Point Traverse, Oct. 6 — Sportsmen who have been hunting in this area, report that several cormorants or bald ravens are disporting about in waters off here. These large, black birds are generally inhabitants of nearly every maritime part of the world, but are seldom seen inland. The birds appear very wary and shy, and are dexterous fishers, causing great havoc when they visit pools and lakes.

A few days ago a resident near Napanee reported seeing a pelican in that vicinity, which may have been mistaken for a cormorant, to which it is closely related. Pelicans inhabit exclusively the sea-coast of the warmer parts of America.

22-Pound Muskie Caught

Many fine catches of pike, bass and muskies have been taken from South Bay waters this fall. Willard Mouck, fishing guide, landed a 22-pound muskie, while many large pike have been taken by local anglers from those waters.

HUN V-2 WEAPON REPORTED FAILURE

Hitler Said to Have Ordered Scientists to Perfect V-3 "Atomic Bomb"

London, Oct. 6 —(CP Reuter)—Germany's "V-2" weapon has been in operation and has proved a complete failure, Ralph Hewins, Stockholm correspondent of the London Daily Mail, said Thursday.

Hewins said he was told this by a neutral observer who has just arrived in Sweden.

Failure of "V-2," the observer said, has caused Hitler to issue fresh instructions to his scientists to speed up their efforts to perfect "V-3"—an "atomic bomb."

"My informant gave me an eye-witness account of what this new bomb looks like and a description of damage it caused in one experiment; at which, he says, he was present," Hewins said.

"Its destructive power, he says, is immense. In an experiment near Nuremberg at the end of September, the countryside for hundreds of yards around was completely flattened as if it was sheared by a knife.

"What does the atbomb look like? The observer described it to me as, roughly resembling an aeroplane of considerable size and filled with a solid mass of fantastically complicated-looking machinery.

It is definitely not fired from a gun, he said, but it appears to be catapulted from special sites, like "V-1" and to be directed either automatically or by wireless. Atbombs are definitely not directed by human pilots."

FINED $750

Toronto, Oct. 6 —(CP)— Sam Wolfman of Toronto, found guilty of depositing 447 counterfeit gasoline ration coupons to his credit was fined $750 and costs or six months here yesterday. In addition he must serve four months in jail.

Romanian Regime Bitterly Attacked By Communists

Bucharest, Oct. 6 — (AP) — Romanian Socialist and Communist leaders have attacked the present regime as being incapable of carrying out the tasks before it.

The outburst followed a meeting yesterday among King Michael, Premier Constantin Sanatescu and the leaders of the four-party coalition government.

Communist leader Lucretziu Petrascanu, in a declaration to the Communist organ, Romania Nouva, said:

"The government has left many of the most important obligations of state planning undone. Although it is one of the most urgent matters the purge of the nation's administration has not even begun. Further, officials directly from the gallery of war criminals have been nominated to vacant posts."

Petrascanu declared that "only a government of broad Democratic concentration can assume the difficult tasks" confronting Romania.

Socialist leader Titel Petrescu said the conference with King Michael discussed the de-Hitlerization of the administration, multiplication of efforts to free Transylvania and measures to assure order and to supply the population with work for all.

The communists and Socialists announced in their news organs that they have agreed on a common platform of action based on close collaboration with the Soviet Union and destruction of Fascist influences.

NO DRY CLOTHES

London, Oct. 6 — (CP) — Declaring that the western front is becoming an area of "fog, rain, cold and mud," the German agency Transocean indicated today that the Germans are counting on the weather to stem the Allied drive. Troops on both sides, it said, hardly know what it is like to wear dry clothing."

Ferry Service To Be Resumed

Brockville, Oct. 6 (CP)—The ferry service between here and Morristown, N.Y., suspended in 1942 when the ferry was sold to New York interests is expected to resume in 1945, it was announced yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Kury of Cleveland, O., officers of the Brockville and Morristown Transportation Company, have discussed plans for resumption of the service with municipal officials here.

Contract for the guilding of a Contract to the building of a England shipyard and delivery is scheduled for early next year.

CHAPTER 15

It was not a very clever observation, for Christopher's step on the patio which spread before the house was a signal for some twenty Danes to give a view halloo of anticipation. "Yes, I raise dogs," Christopher conceded.

"Rather precarious occupation," Tom commented.

"I understand you are a stock broker?" Christopher related the word "precarious" to his question, and saw Barton look up with a half-smile on his face. It would have been a full smile had he been quite certain just what kind of a person Wain really was.

But when Tom saw the Sunbeam parked in the drive yard, he made his final conclusion: Christopher Wain could be dismissed as a man who raised dogs, and drove an ancient rattletrap that needed a coat of paint.

"Must have been quite a buggy in its day," Tom suggested.

"Oh, our day is not yet done." Christopher included himself with the car, and saluted in farewell to Tom Barton, whose ear was not attuned to the perfection of four hundred purring horsepower.

Christopher saw him turn back to the house, then change his mind and wander off, toward the open road. Apparently, Barton, too, could take Helen only in small doses.

Helen, left alone, paced the library in mounting indignation. She knew Christopher Wain's kind, a certain physical charm and glib tongue, linked up to complete irresponsibility. They were usually a varied type of sportsman with expansive ideas of making some kind of a living by raising dogs, or mink, or running stables. And they always had a peculiar fascination that brought rich girls fluttering around them, and sometimes marrying them. Well, he was barking up the wrong tree with Ann.

Broadfields might look as if Ann had money, but she didn't. Helen only prayed that the whole mess could be straightened out before her foolhardy young sister assumed too much liability, considering the staggering bills that had already been run up. The time had come, she decided, to consult Arthur.

So Mrs. Huston sat down at the desk overflowing with kennel bills and dog show announcements. She was at page seven of her closely-written epistle when she noticed a car drive up to the house and draw to a stop before the front gate. It was the kind of a car that one noticed—one of those large limousines with a special body that sloped off at the rear like a slouching debutante. There was a chauffeur in tan gabardine livery and there was also a woman in a large hat and short silver fox coat over a powder blue skirt, young and undeniably attractive.

Lord knows how many women he has in his life! thought Helen. This was something she would handle without the intermediary of the pan-faced Mrs. Johnson.

Helen opened the door as the visitor's hand reached for the knocker and asked, "What can I do for you?"

The visitor smiled. "I'm afraid that you can't do anything for me unless you would be good enough to tell Mr. Wain that I am here."

Helen flushed. "Mr. Wain left for New York a little while ago," she said shortly.

"Oh. You're quite sure? His office said that he was here."

"I am quite certain tthat Mr. Wain left for New York."

"Oh, I'm sorry." The woman's voice had a purr to it. She didn't seem sorry; she sounded creamy with pleasure. "I mean it's such a nuisance to have driven all the way up here, and then to have missed him... May I come in for a moment? I am Mrs. Wain."

Helen tried not to blink. This woman didn't look like the onetime other half of Christopher Wain. "I'm Mrs. Huston," she introduced herself. "Do come in, of course."

"Oh," Brenda seated herself in the library, tossed open her coat which loosed a little gust of expensive perfume, and pursed her lips. "I thought the name was Rivers," she remarked.

"It was Rivers; this is the Rivers' place; but the name is now Huston." Helen was meticulously explicit.

"Oh." Brenda renewed the syllable. She was evidently one of those women who fancy themselves with pursed lips, feeling that the moue lent her face an enigmatic expression, as if she were about to say something and was thinking better of it. Her eye roved the room with the precision of an auction appraiser, missing nothing. It came to rest on the Chippendale breakfront, whose magnificence was like that of an aristocratic old lady who doesn't have to explain herself in a world of parvenues. "You have a very lovely place here," Brenda approved, and added with a smile, "I know exactly what took Christopher's fancy. One side of him is old country stuff you know."

Helen didn't like the smile. It as much as placed her on a par with the breakfront bookcase... an interesting example of old country!

"And yet he's mercuric, very mercuric," Brenda continued tipping her head as if she were tasting the word and finding it to be exactly the one she wanted. "He's not the sort to stay put long. I gave him all this just after we were married." She waved a slender hand, conjuring up the idea that Broadfields was an understatement in minor key of all that she, Brenda, had given him. "Then he was in town for a season, and then the new place, Crestview, and then dogs, and then—Yes, very mercuric" she broke off, stopping her enumeration of Christopher's down ward progress at that point, but managing to convey the expression that after dogs would have come Broadfields and all that it stood for.

Despite the innuendo, Helen found al this very enlightening and constructive. "Wouldn't you like a cup of tea after your long drive? she suggested suavely.

"Oh, thank you, no." Brenda was not going to break bread with an enemy, for the business of holding a teacup implied that one had to keep one's claws retracted. "Christopher makes strange choices," she continued. "Frankly, I'm surprised. I had expected you to be so different."

"I", Helen drew in her chin. "I don't see why you would have expected me to be anything, why you should have even suspected that I exist." She was beginning to be puzzled by the ambiguity of this conversation. She and Mrs. Wain seemed to be at cross purposes about something or other.

"Don't be absurd." Brenda laughed. "Of course, Christopher told me all about you. But my dear"—she leaned forward confidentially—"it's only fair to tell you that you won't be able to hold him."

Helen gave a small gasp of denial and horror. Now it was clear. Brenda had mistaken her for Ann. Helen wanted to blurt out an explanation but she controlled herself.

"I assure you that you are entirely mistaken about — about—about whatever you're mistaken about." She felt herself floundering, getting into deep water. "Mr. Wain is the merest stranger to me," she ended desperately. "I wish you'd believe that, Mrs. Wain."

Brenda laughed again. "Mrs. Huston, really! You don't have to take that attitude. At least as far as I'm concerned, you needn't, What I mean to say is, I shan't embarrass you ever." She rose. "Of course, Christopher didn't mention that you'd be married. I presume you are a widow—?"

"My husband is very much alive!" Helen declared. "And I'm not divorced," she added significantly.

Brenda's eyebrows went up. "My dear—" She reached for a word in vain. "Well, frankly—"

"Please," she said hoarsely. "I wish you'd leave. At once."

She never quite knew what happened after that. It might have been minutes or hours later that Tom Barton came in whistling. "I had a grand walk," he offered in affable humor. "It braced me up no end."

Helen slowly unclenched her hands. "I feel like three tarnished cents!" she announced tragically.

"You ought to get out for a breath of air," Tom advised. "Oh, by the way, I talked with this Wain fellow as we went out to his car. I think I've got him sized up pretty well. He's just a happy-go-lucky chap who's up to his ears in a dog business he can't hope to make a living in."

"Thank you, Doctor Watson," said Helen acidly. She stalked from the room. She couldn't trust herself to speak. There were two bromides in her suitcase. She'd take Ann.

The nurse met her outside the door. Helen was in no mood to brook interference. Her mind was made up. She was going to get Ann out of here if she had to call an ambulance. "Let me pass," she said haughtily.

Ann knew the minute she laid eyes on Helen that something was up. If Helen were fifteen years older, she'd undoubtedly be inviting an apoplectic stroke. She even ignored the highly absorbing details of Ann's dalliance with pneumonia, which simply proved that she had something much important on her mind, for Helen always took an interest in other people's illnesses. "It's that man's wife!" she burst out as soon as she saw that Ann was alive and likely to recover. "She was here!"

Ann forgot about her illness, too, although she'd intended to put on quite a show for Helen. It took all her self-control not to grab Helen's arm and implore her to tell everything she knew on the subject of Mrs. Wain. Instead, she closed her eyes and murmured, as if she didn't care especially, "Well, what about her?"

"What about her? I'll tell you what about her. She was just here! Looking for him!"

Ann's eyes flew open. "She was here? What sort of a woman is she?"

"I suppose you'd call her beautiful," Helen admitted grudgingly "Anyway, she knows how to dress."

"Oh," said Ann faintly. Somehow, she had been hoping against hope that Brenda would turn out to be one of those dowdy women with the wide rear that comes from too much horseback riding. "She didn't ask to see me, did she?" she essayed cautiously.

"She did see you!" cried Helen. "At least she thought she saw you, which amounts to the same thing!"

"Helen, please," Ann implored. "Make sense., won't you?"

"Sense? Why Mrs. Wain insisted on mixing us up!"

Ann pressed both hands against her temples. "Us?"

"Me and you!" Helen exploded. "Don't you understand, Ann, that terrible creature thought that I, Helen Huston, was the woman in Christopher Wain's life! And to protect you I had to stand there and let her think it!"

Sheer surprise silenced Ann. Then she laughed.

"The whole affair is most unsavoury," Helen reproved her coldly. "You evidently fail to get the significance of her visit. That woman bodes no good, Ann. You might as well make up your mind that we're leaving here at once. Mrs. Wain is still in love with that—that creature, and she's out to get him or regain him."

"After all,"Ann said in a small voice, "he did belong to her. You're right, Helen. I'm ready to move whenever you can manage things. The sooner the better."

"Well," said Helen on a breath of relief, "I'm certainy glad that you're listening to reason for once in your life." She placed a cool, manicured hand on Ann's burning forehead. "We'll take no chances, however. I'll have an ambulance, and you'll go straight to a hospital."

"Is Mrs. Wain blonde or brunette?" Ann couldn't help asking.

Helen compressed her lips. "I never yet saw a divorcee that wasn't a blonde," she stated. "If they aren't they used to be. Personally, I think it's one of the lesser causes of divorce, this constant henna rinsing and bleaching. Not that Mrs. Wain looks bleached. I dare say she spends a fortune, just on keeping herself groomed — What's the matter?"—Helen broke off, and studied Ann in concern—"don't you feel well? You look odd."

"Odd?" Of course Ann felt odd. She wanted to fling her arms around Helen's neck, and tell her that she was the darlingest sister that ever a girl had. But Helen couldn't have stood the shock of it.

Besides, Ann was obtuse not to have guessed it sooner. And now her thoughts ran: Of course, there were plenty of cases where men remarried their divorced wives, and were happier than ever. What was it Helen had said? "That woman bodes no good — she's still in love with him — she's out to get him —"

"I said," Helen's voice broke into her thoughts, "what's the matter? Have you a pain anywhere?"

"I have a terrible pain," said Ann weakly.

Helen frowned. "We'll take no chances," she said firmly. "At first I thought we could move you in Tom's car—Tom is here by the way, the darling fellow's been worried to death about you. But on second thought, I'll hire an ambulance."

Ann nestled down beneath the blankets. But now she had no intention of being moved back to New York. "You'd better call the nurse," she told Helen faintly.

* * *

Christopher Wain did not return to Broadfields until the day before the Puppy Sweepstakes, almost a week later. He found Ann lying on the chaise-longue by the window in a pink negligee.

"Well," Christopher greeted her, "what's all this I hear from Dr. Matheson about not sleeping properly and all that sort of thing?"

"I had a relapse," said Ann.

"Bragging again."

"Thanks for the flowers." She gestured toward the huge mass of red tulips that Tom had sent only that morning.

He grinned. "I thought you'd like 'em—No, but seriously, you're looking pretty well."

"Pretty well? I thought I looked beautiful."

"You do. What I should have said was, you look pretty strong."

"I am strong. I'm going to the Puppy Sweepstakes tomorrow."

"Hey—Who said so?"

"I said so."

"What's Dr. Matheson say?"

"I didn't ask him."

"Because you know what he'd tell you."

"I don't care what he'd tell me. I've been looking forward to it for a month."

"Well, that's out!" Christopher said firmly. "You don't have to be there; Rowdy will do very nicely by herself."

"I expect her to do more than just nicely."

"You're going to be incorrigible in the dog show business. 'May the best dog win and I've got the best dog'."

Wain went to the door and whistled. There was an answering scrabble of claws on the floors as Rowdy and Gretel stampeded like a brace of lions into the room. Christopher lined them up together as they would stand in the show ring. It was the first time in more than two weeks that Ann had seen the two of them together. It was difficult to believe that Rowdy had once been the runt of the litter. She was now Gretel's size and acted as if she were aware that posturing was part of her raison d'etre.

Rowdy ignored Gretel, and stood motionless as a molded figure, her eyes on Ann. Only a slight quivering of muscle along her flank suggested that she lived and was not cast from tawny bronze. Ann caught her breath in pride. Then suddenly it was all over.

Rowdy was tired of posing. She lifted a giant paw and gave Gretel a playful wallop across the head. A moment later they were mauling each other around the room.

"They're a great pair," Christopher admitted. "Ought never to be separated. Too bad they'll just be out of the puppy class by the Morris and Essex show. I'd take a chance on showing them if they weren't."

"Well, why not?"

"Puppy class is one thing. But in the American Bred or Novice class, they'd be up against some pretty stiff competition. There'll be close to a hundred of the best Danes in the country at that show."

"I wouldn't be afraid," said Ann. "Competition is the life of trade."

"Well, it's the life of the dog business anyway." Christopher agreed. "Only you don't show everything you've got until you're sure it's the best you've got—Quit it, you roughnecks, before you tear the room to pieces!" He turned to Ann. "I'm taking them to the Sweepstakes myself, but I'm leaving too early in the morning to bring them in to see you. Better wish Rowdy luck now."

"Good luck, Rowdy dear," said Ann docilely. "See that you bring me a nice blue ribbon."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 6 (CP)—All groups with the exception of western oils were up on the noon index on Toronto stock exchange today, following slightly-improved morning sales. Sales were 259,000.

Golds were steady without interesting price changes. Wasa Lake was most active in the mining group at 1.04, up four. Aunor was up five at 3.75 and Hard Rock at 93 1-2 was up 3 1-2. Active on the downside was McKenzie at 1.89, down three. Pioneer was off five.

In the base metals, Steep Rock slipped five to 3.40 and Noranda was up fractionally at 58.

Industrials were steady to unchanged. Abitibi Preferred at 40 3-4 up 1-2 in the papers. Hiram Walker in the liquors was bright spot, up 1 1-2 at 70, while Distiller Seagram and Canadian Breweries gained fractionally.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Oct. 6 —(AP)— The stock market had to contend with some profit cashing today but selected rail and industrial leaders managed to tack on further improvement with assorted favorites registering highs for the year or longer.

Bidding was brisk at the opening but slowdowns developed as offerings cropped up and, while plus signs were well distributed near the fourth hour, small declines were plentiful.

At peaks for 1944 with advances of fractions to a point or more—several eventually retreated—were Norfolk & Eastern, Hiram Walker, Pepsi-Cola, Great Northern, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Woolworth and J. C. Penney. Resistant were Anaconda, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway and American Can. On the offside at intervals were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Telephone, Goodrich, General Motors and Texas Pacific Land Trust. Canadian issues were in better demand and generally showed fractional gains.

REDS SURGE INTO HUNGARY ON 75-MILE FRONT

Troops Seize Three Vital Railways Leading to Capital

Belgrade Virtually Besieged By Russian and Tito Units

By EDDY GILMORE
(AP War Correspondent)

Moscow, Oct. 7 — (AP) — Red Army infantry waves, surging across the Romanian frontier into Hungary on a 75-mile front, moved steadily toward the Tisa and Koros rivers, last big natural obstacles before Budapest today.

Indications were that the backbone of German-Hungarian resistance had been broken and that the Soviets had an excellent chance of carrying the fight to the area of the Hungarian capital within four or 5 days at the present rate of advance. Budapest was about 90 miles away this morning.

Kuban Cossacks were reported spreading "death and panic" in the rear of Hungarian troops unable to disengage themselves on the shattered front in southeastern Hungary.

"Our mobile units are chasing the retreating enemy," said a front dispatch to Izvestia, "and light Cossack units are in their rear."

Already more than 100 communities of the last big Nazi puppet nation had been seized, the latest communique announced.

Already 13 miles inside Hungary the Red Army has seized three important railways and highways leading into Budapest. Driving swiftly across farmlands offering little natural defence the Red Army troops captured Mako, within 15 miles of Szeged, Hungary's second city, and drove toward Orshaza and Bekes, 90 miles to the east, the war bulletin said.

While Soviet planes dropped leaflets exhorting the Hungarians to quit the Axis before it is too late, other Russian troops moved into Hungary from the Yugoslav frontier on the south. Augmented by Yugoslav Partisan forces, they reached the Tisa River 45 miles south of Szeged.

In Yugoslavia, Belgrade was virtually besieged.

No Official Report

There still was no indication whether the Germans were going to make a fight for the Yugoslav capital and there was no official report that Russians had crossed the Danube in the immediate Belgrade area. There was reason to believe, however, that the Russians and Tito's units were almost at the lowland suburbs across the river, if not already in them.

(The Algiers radio said the Germans were evacuating troops from Belgrade with the use of big transport planes.)

The new offensive in southeast Hungary fanned out from Arad, big west Romanian base.

Front May Collapse

The new thrust was announced as other reports in Moscow said that the Hungary home front might collapse at any moment, and the Russians already were planning an invasion of Austria after knocking out Hungary.

Hungary also was menaced by Russian military might from the north where along the Czechoslovak-Polish border Soviet troops fought toward a crossing of the Carpathian Mountains and sweep into the Magyar country.

In the Baltic, the war bulletin said, Russian troops on Saare Island, which guards the entrance to the Gulf of Riga, captured 80 populated places on a 25-mile front and advanced southwestward fifteen miles.

See Intervention As Possibility To Avert Strike

By The Canadian Press

With a deadlock existing in the dispute between Canadian meat-packing companies and the packing house workers of America Union (C.I.O.) possibility was seen today of government intervention in an effort to avert a threatened walk-out in packing plants across the country.

The Union, seeking a master agreement for workers across the country, said that employees at 11 big plants have voted to strike if their demands are not met. Spokesmen for the companies yesterday denied that union recognition is the issue and warned that a strike would seriously interfere with the war effort.

At Ottawa yesterday Fred Dowling of Toronto, Canadian director of the Union, and Pat Conray, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Congress of Labor, conferred with Arthur McNamara, Deputy Labor Minister, and M. M. Maclean of the Federal Labor Department. The Union officials said they had been told that the government would consider intervening in an effort to bring the Union and the employers together.

County Subscribes $2,000 to Fund

Hastings County through the medium of the County Council Patriotic Committee Friday contributed $2,000 to the Belleville Community Services Fund.

This amount is an excess of $500 over the amount given last year.

The committee under the chairmanship of Reeve George MacDonald, Thurlow, was unanimous in its decision to contribute to the local campaign. Other members include Reeve Charley Buskard, Wollaston, Warden Thomas E. Fleming, County Treasurer, J. Haggerty and County Clerk Erie Denyes.

Hastings County etaxpayers have contributed generously to patriotic purposes since the war began.

In 1940 the Patriotic Fund Committee was established and the county council unanimously voted a sum of money to be used for its purpose.

In 1940, the county contributed, through its committee, $10,074.19; in 1941 $9,342.73; in 1942, $8,741.21 and in 1943 $11,922.86.

This year, it is expected the contribution to patriotic organizations will reach well over the $9,000 mark.

Coincidental with the grant to the Belleville Community Services Fund, the committee in session Friday night also granted $100 to the Tweed branch of the Salvation Army and $50 each to county Red Cross units which amounted to $550.

Canadian Forces Meet Toughest Fighting Since Caen

ALLIES CLEAR GREATER PART OF PELOPONNESUS

British Bombard The Island of Levitha And Landing Parties Take Eastern Half

COMMANDER TAKEN

Rome, Oct. 7 —(AP)— A great part of the Peloponnesus in Greece now is clear of Germans, Allied Headquarters announced today.

British ships bombarded the Greek island of Levitha Oct. 5 and then landing parties captured the eastern half of the island. The German commander on the island surrendered at dusk after a further bombardment.

Levitha is a small island 43 miles west of the Turkish coast and approximately the same distance south and slightly west of the island of Samos the capture of which was announced in a communique issued by the Greek headquarters in Cairo yesterday.

Allied planes strafed six German-held airfields near Athens and Salonika on the Greek mainland in the face of heavy flak but met no fighter opposition.

Conducting effective strafing attacks, U. S. 15th Air Force planes countered German attempts to evacuate or supply troops by air and destroyed more than a score of enemy planes on the ground.

Four of the enemy airdromes attacked are within a 12-mile radius of Athens. Airdromes at Sedes just south of Salonika were strafed by Lightnings which hit parked aircraft, motor transport and a radio station.

Spitfires and Hurricanes of the Balkan Air Force swept the Gulf of Corinth, shooting up a convoy of Germans attempting to escape from the Peloponnesus. Despite heavy flak, a Siebel ferry and a landing craft loaded with troops were left burning.

Italian-based Balkan air force planes also gave support to Allied troops in Albania where the German headquarters at Delving was demolished by a salvo of rockets.

Enemy gun positions also were blasted in Albania and Spitfires destroyed motor convoy transport in northern Greece. Eleven Allied planes are missing from 150 sorties.

Enemy withdrawal from the Peloponnesus began with the abandonment of the port bases of Monemvasia, Gytheion and Kalamai (Kalamata), all in the southern part of the peninsula.

At Tripolis, near the centre of the peninsula, the Germans left behind more than 2,000 collaborating Greeks, who surrendered to British units Oct. 2.

British naval units roamed the Adriatic and the Aegean. A German battery on Corfu was bombarded, shells were poured into Crete, a Junkers transport plane was shot down over Maleme and direct hits were scored on a beached coastal vessel off the island of Melos.

ON PARTY BASIS

London, Oct. 7 —(CP)— Britain's next election—when it comes—will be fought on a party basis, it was indicated yesterday after Liberal headquarters gave organizers the "go" signal and the Labor party national executive made known its policy which must be approved by the annual meeting in December.

'Luckiest Vessel in Canadian Navy,' Sets Record, Has Many Escapes

An East Coast Canadian Port, Oct. 7 —(CP)— More than ever convinced that their ship is "the luckiest vessel in the Canadian navy," members of the crew of the destroyer Restigouche have returned to Canada after sailing their ship through years of duty that included both the evacuation and the invasion of France.

The veteran "Rusty Guts"—one of Canada's oldest warships—had many narrow escapes. Once, a glider bomb landed only 10 feet from its engine room without exploding.

On the credit side of her ledger, the destroyer has marked up assists in the sinking of eight enemy ships, three of them while sailing with an all-Canadian flotilla.

Happiest man of her crew to be home again was wiry Keith Hunter, 20-year-old able seaman from Trenton, who was the forgotten man in the ship's crow's nest during the 55-minute engagement with the anti-aircraft ships.

Overlooked in the press of battle, he refused to go down until he received orders, with enemy fire screaming past his head.

"They all looked as if they were coming right at me," he said. "I ducked plenty." The plainly visible tracer shells—it was a night action—were the worst, he recounted.

When the enemy had been shot up, Hunter's voice came down coolly from the masthead: "May I come down now, sir?"

"We had completely forgotten all about him up there," laughed Lt.-Cmdr. David Groos of Victoria.

FOOCHOW, CAPITAL OF FUKIEN PROV., TAKEN BY JAPS

Last Major Port Held by Chinese on East China Coast

BITTER FIGHTING

New York, Oct. 7 —(AP)— Foochow, capital of Fukien province and the last major port held by the Chinese on the East China coast, was captured by a Japanese invasion force three days ago, a Tokyo broadcast of a Japanese Imperial communique said today.

There was no immediate confirmation of the claim from Allied sources, but the Chinese High Command yesterday said Japanese troops had reached the northwestern suburbs of the city, located across a narrow strait from the northern tip of the Japanese occupied island of Formosa.

Foochow, occupied by the Japanese previously in April 1939 and retaken by the Chinese in September the same year, was the target of Japanese troops landed in Fukien province in what Tokyo said was a drive to forestall Allied landings from the Pacific.

Meanwhile an Associated Press dispatch from Chungking said a Chinese communique announced Chinese troops had completed the reoccupation of an important position southwest of Lungling, in Yunnan province to the southwest with the capture of a high peak.

Fighting also raged in Kwangtung province to the south where the Chinese High Command yesterday said defenders operating behind Japanese lines had recaptured the important town of Szewui, 47 miles northeast of Canton.

The fall of Paoching, key Hunan city 135 miles north of Kweilin, Kwangsi defence centre, appeared imminent. Fall of the city would remove a threat to the Japanese right flank in the enemy drive against Kweilin.

Formidable Fleet In Indian Ocean

South Shields, England, Oct. 7 (CP) — A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, said today that the Royal Navy already had a formidable fleet in the Indian Ocean and that plans to move warships to the Pacific were going ahead rapidly.

He told a meeting of seamen that the British Home Fleet constantly was on guard against any activity by what remains of the German fleet, which he said still must be considered seriously.

Mr. Alexander disclosed that 9,000 convoys have entered or cleared through United Kingdom ports since the war began.

"SNAP ELECTION" OUT IN ONTARIO SAYS COL. DREW

Forestry Development Plan Announced in Address at Hamilton

REITERATES CHARGES

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 7 — (CP) — Premier Drew of Ontario told the West Centre Division of the Progressive Conservative Association of Hamilton last night that he does not intend to call a "snap election."

He announced also the establishment of a forestry development plan, to be known as the Nipigon Forest Settlement Plan, as "part of extensive plans for education and rehabilitation of the members of our armed forces."

The Premier, for the second successive night, criticized the Federal Government for its "failure to provide adequate reinforcements for the army overseas" and agreed with a suggestion of the Progressive Conservative Party's National Chairman C. P. McTague that an immediate investigation be launched into the reinforcement issue.

He reiterated his statement of the previous night that his information regarding the sending of inadequately trained troops to the front lines was based on information received from men on the battlefronts of France and Italy.

Set Up Model Village

Under the forestry development plan it is proposed to set up a model forest village on the south shore of Lake Nipigon, Mr. Drew said. The purpose is to proceed with a planned development, based upon the various resources of the region.

"The venture will provide a permanent, high standard of livelihood for many families..."

The premier said E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario C. C. F. leader, in a radio address last Sept. 13 "echoed the dishonest campaign of the Sifton press to the effect that I am opposed to family allowances and that I was adopting an isolationist attitude so far as Ontario is concerned."

Mr. Jolliffe "knew that was untrue," Mr. Drew stated, adding that "He knew that I had said most emphatically (in a radio speech previously) that we were in favor of family allowances and that we looked upon Ontario as part of a great team in which we were prepared to contribute our full share out of any advantages we possessed."

"I made it perfectly clear that our objection related only to the fact that the family allowance act... would take from the people of Ontario between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 to be paid to the people of Quebec...

"We want the friendship of Quebec. We want their whole-hearted fellowship in the building of a great nation, but I do not believe that the people of Ontario are prepared to contribute out of their pockets from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 to the people of Quebec unless the people of Quebec are prepared to bear their share of winning the war upon which all security rests."

5TH ARMY TROOPS WITHIN 12 MILES OF BOLOGNA

Germans Are Working Frantically To Take Out Strategic War Materials to Germany

WEATHER STILL BAD

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Rome, Oct. 7 (AP)—Allied 5th Army troops have shoved ahead another two miles to within 12 miles of the Po Valley communications centre of Bologna as the enemy was reported working frantically to evacuate strategic war materials from northern Italy to Germany.

Allied headquarters said today the Germans again had failed to stabilise their lines in the central Italian sector. American infantry who cleared the enemy from Loiano were fighting yesterday two miles north of that important road junction town on the main Florence-Bologna highway, No. 65.

On both sides of the highway other 5th Army units kept abreast of the central salient. To the west, British and South African troops occupied Monte Vigese, which dominates the Pistoia-Bologna highway, and to the east a column north of the mountain village of Sassoleone carried to within 10 miles of Castel San Pietro, which is on the Bologna-Rimini highway.

Meanwhile, in the Adriatic sector Indian troops of the British 8th Army crossed the Fiumicino river near its mountain source, drove the Germans out of San Martino Di Bagnolo and captured Sogliano, 15 miles southwest of Rimini. Farther west in the valley of the upper Cavio British troops took Tezzo. Many Canadian and British units were believed still stalled along the rain-swollen, lower Fiumcino.

Weather continued to hamper operations and the Mediterranean Allied air force was severely restricted in its support of ground troops. However, fighters carried out strafing attacks against airdromes in Greece, and the Balkan air force attacked military objectives in northeastern Italy, Yugoslavia and Albania. Eleven planes were reported missing.

Field Marshal Kesselring continued moving German reinforcements from other parts of his lines to impede the 5th Army drive. Eight German divisions were reported resisting with increasing intensity.

One report said the Germans were ripping up railway lines in northern Italy and shipping them to Germany.

Hollywood, Oct. 7 —(AP)— A daughter, Marion Rose Lake, was born yesterday to Patricia Van Cleve Lake, wife of Arthur Lake—the "Dagwood" of the screen. The baby weighed eight pounds, four ounces. The couple has a son, Arthur Patrick, aged two.

Limited Advance Made North Of The Leopold Canal

Yanks Continue Slugging Match North of Aachen

With the 1st. Canadian Army, Canadian troops today are engaged in the toughest infantry fighting they have known since the battle of Caen. They have made limited advances against fierce opposition from their narrow bridgehead north of the Leopold canal.

Several small villages just inside the border of this part of the Netherlands south of the mouth of the Schelde have been captured by Western Canada infantry who are leading this new offensive. In one village it was estimated two companies of German infantry were wiped out.

The Germans are using a string of old pill-boxes which the Dutch built along the Belgian-Netherlands border years ago, and the enemy has to be driven out of each one of them with grenades and machine-guns.

Use Fortified Houses.

There also are fortified houses in this area which the Germans are holding with machine-gunners and snipers.

The operation was going slowly but this was expected before the attack was launched yesterday morning.

Five thousand troops of the German 64th infantry division who are defending the Schelde pocket are likely making the main stand along the canal and once this line is broken thoroughly the advance will speed up.

At one point the Canadians have pressed the Germans back nearly to the flooded area about three-quarters of a mile north of the canal. This success was gained on the right flank where resistance was not as stiff as on the left.

The Canadian forces in the bridgehead have been strengthened but much more heavy fighting is anticipated as the holding is widened.

On the other sector of the 1st Canadian Army front east of the Schelde there were no great changes. British troops still were three miles south of Tilburg and the Poles had not made any new gains.

Renew Dunkerque Attack.

British units of the Canadian army have renewed their attack on Dunkerque.

Dispatches from the siege line where the garrison commander, Capt. Schneidern has haggled for time, say he and his garrison of 15,000 or more are trying to hold on until Oct. 15 in the belief that a new German weapon by then would be ready and decisive.

The U.S. 1st Army slugged away north of Aachen today, jabbing at German stop-gap tanks and infantry half a mile north of Beggendorf and 1½ miles southeast of Ubach, while other elements pounded nearly a mile through the Hurtgen forest, 10 miles into Germany and one-third of the way to Cologne.

Despite German reports that the British troops had crossed the Neder Rhine at Wageningen, 10 miles west of Arnhem, Allied supreme headquarters reported only that the British had repulsed a German counter-attack at Opheusden on the south bank of the river three miles southwest of there.

On the middle Moselle front the U.S. 3rd Army won a solid hold on the northwest and southwest corners of Fort Driant, southwest of Metz, taking everything the Germans could hurl at them from the outside and blasting in doggedly to dig out the garrison buttoned into the honeycomb of tunnels below.

The U.S. 1st Army was systematically breaking up the Siegfried Line along a 30-mile front north and south of besieged Aachen. It widened the Ubach breach to seven miles at the base, wrested back a good part of the yardage lost in counter-attacks yesterday and hammered out new gains.

Mighty New Air Offensive Launched Against Principal Cities of Germany

London, Oct. 7 (CP).—In what was described as "the mightiest force sent since its inception", R.C.A.F. Bomber Group Halifaxes and Lancasters flew with other heavies to attack industrial targets at Dortmund last night, it was announced today.

More than 290 bombers from all squadrons of the Canadian group participated.

The German radio traced today's bombers as coming in over Helgoland Bay and the Brunswick-Hanover area, heading for the Magdeburg-Dessau region. Another formation the Germans said was over Pomerania and a third was over Hungary approaching the Danube valley early this afternoon.

Berlin was attacked twice yesterday. The first attack was in daylight—the first time since June 21—by American heavies which bombed a tank assembly plant, military and ordnance depots, and an aircraft engine plant.

During the night the R.A.F. was over the German capital in a diversionary flight while R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. planes were dropping more than 1,500 tons of bombs on Dortmund and more than 1,000 tons on Bremen.

The Air Ministry hailed the operation as the beginning of a new offensive against Germany and said that from 3 p.m. until midnight waves of bombers, totalling more than 1,200 aircraft, flew to their targets.

Cities Burning Fiercely.

Crews said both Dortmund and Bremen were burning fiercely with Saarbrucken, attacked the night before, still ablaze.

Forty bombers were lost yesterday, 12 by the R.A.F. in its night attacks, and 10 fighters were reported missing.

Dortmund, site of large steel factories and other heavy industry, took on new importance as a railroad junction with reconnaissance disclosure that the entire 18-mile stretch of the Dortmund-Ems Canal is dry and that at least 110 barges are stranded in the canal. R.A.F. bombers broke down its embankments Sept. 23.

In other night operations Mosquitos ripped the Amersfoort rail yards and barges in the Schelde and Zuyder Zee.

Fighters knocked out three enemy aircraft over the continent, adding to the toll of 30 enemy planes shot out of the air yesterday by the 8th Air Force and 36 seaplanes and three other planes caught at their bases in the Baltic.

Tribute Paid to Dr. Jas. Semple By Members of Belleville Presbytery

The fall meeting of Belleville Presbytery was held recently in Holloway Street United Church. The chairman Rev. A. C. McCallum of Bayside presided and conducted the opening worship. The following new members were presented by the secretary Rev. Alfred Poulter; Reverends P. J. Armitage, D. Bradford, A. E. McCutcheon, H. H. Hillis, Bernard Heywood, Miss Coulbes, Mr. Boyd Beckel and Mr. W. E. Lewis. The chairman welcomed the new members to the fellowship of Belleville Presbytery. Rev. A. E. McCutcheon replied on behalf of his colleagues. To him it was a homecoming since he had spent several years in this Presbytery.

Reference was made to the illness of Rev. G. M. Chidley of Trinity Church, Napanee. Some improvement in his condition was reported. The secretary was instructed to send another letter expressing the sympathy of the members of Presbytery and their hopes for a good recovery. Rev. Dr. E. W. Stapleton who is supplying Trinity Church in the interim was introduced to Presbytery and made a corresponding member.

Presbytery concurred in the call of Rev. Dr. James Semple to George Street United Church, Peterborough. Regrets at Dr. Semple's departure from Belleville and the Presbytery and eulogies on his work were spontaneously expressed by Reverends C. D. McLellan, J. A. Dilts, Dr. A. J. Wilson, Dr. A. J. Myers, W. H. Baugh and Mr. Fetterley. Similar sentiments could have been expressed by all members. Rev. J. G. McKee moved and Rev. W. R. Merrick seconded the following motion: I count it an honor and a privilege to add my testimony to that of those who have already spoken, and to express the Presbytery's appreciation of the great service rendered during these past years by Dr. James Semple. No task was too arduous, no Charge too distant, if the Court saw fit to lay some burden upon him. And more often than not the work to be done was of a nature from which most of us naturally shrink. But with fearlessness and energy many a problem was faced and many a difficulty overcome.

Dr. Semple has been called the friend of the young man. He is the friend of all, and a true servant of the Church. Few indeed are those in the Presbytery who have not benefited in some way through services rendered. One might be tempted to use the great words of one of our national leaders: "Never in the history of" this Presbytery "has so much been owed by so many" to one man. We shall miss him from our Court, but we are pleased to know that he will still be within the bounds of Conference and that we may continue to count on his interest and support.

It gives me pleasure to place on record our appreciation of the efficient and untiring services of Dr. James Semple during the eleven years of residence among us, and assure him of our best wishes and our prayers as he leaves to serve the congregation of George Street, Peterborough."

General Council Report.

A highlight of the meeting was the report of the General Council recently held in London presented by the two commissioners, Dr. Semple and Mr. Fetterly. They testified to the excellent spirit of the Council, the keen debates, the energy and wisdom with which problems were faced and dealt with. The United Church's contribution to the war effort was stressed. Four hundred men, ministers and students for the ministry, are serving in the forces. There are sixty-nine chaplains in the R.C.A.F. alone. The men in the forces have a serious attitude toward religion. Air Commodore Rev. Ewart Cochram believes there is more real religion among youth than ever before. Places of service overseas are packed. The Church of Jesus Christ never faced a greater day. Responsibility for help in the rehabilitation of the estimated two million Canadians uprooted from homes and churches by the war was laid upon our Church. Patient understanding of men returning from war experiences is needed. Reception of war brides could be undertaken by women's organizations.

Missionary night was a great occasion. Addresses were given by Dr. Geo. E. Darby, Medical Superintendent of the R. W. Large Memorial Hospital at Bella Bella, B.C. For thirty years Dr. Darby has been ministering to the people along the coast physically and spiritually. Miss Jean Somerville of Honan stated that the Church there is still carrying on and its message is, no matter what may happen there it will never be untrue. The final address was by Rev. A. R. Graham of India. He made a strong evangelistic appeal, claiming that "as a Church we should step forward with a new faith. That if we only got down on our knees for half a day we would not be wasting but saving time."

Ecumenical Evening was an important one in the Council's sessions. Dr. Richards, vice-president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, addressed Council. Rev. Dr. Seager, Archbishop of Huron brought greetings from the Church of England. He spoke of the closer relationships existing between the two churches. The issues bearing on actual union are already being discussed. One quotation is important: "We assume that the thing ought to be done; we hope that it has become a question of how it is to be done." The Council moved to appoint a commission looking for the furtherance of Christian unity among other communions which will confer particularly with a commission appointed by the Church of England in Canada on matters pertaining to reunion. On Sunday, September 10th, the Moderator preached the sermon in St. Paul's Anglican Church in London.

The United Church plans to make more use of the radio broadcasting facilities open to it. Fifteen thousand dollars will be spent this year and the proposal is to eventually spend one hundred thousand dollars a year on this work. People listen to programs with a spiritual appeal. It is a particular boon to people in outlying districts. The Church has committed itself to a great evangelistic enterprise. By means of personal evangelism, preaching missions, home visitation, Christian education, and every other way open this work will be done.

Praises Work in North

Rev. J. I. McKay, Superintendent of Missions spoke in high praise of the work being done in the North. More money is being raised in that area for support of its own work than ever before. As an outward token of progress the Carlow-Fort Stewart Charge asked permission to build a parsonage for their minister; the Lake St. Peter area plans to build a church. Permission for both was granted.

Rev. Dr. A. J. Wilson, editor of the United Church Observer spoke with justifiable pride of the progress achieved in five years. Circulation has increased from 11,000 to 43,000. Many letters come in weekly regarding matters dealt with in the Observer, some from other communions, even Roman Catholics. Advertisements bring outstanding results. The Observer is a paper of which the United Church is proud, and it deserves to grow.

Rev. Geo. A. Williams, Associate Secretary of the Missionary and Maintenance Department gave an encouraging address. Contributions to date $112,000 ahead of last year. For Belleville Presbytery the increase is over $1300. The Church hopes to increase contributions to this fund 5% in 1946. Mr. Williams stressed the need for a sense of stewardship. In United States the income per capita for 1943 was $1150. Of this amount less than 1% was given for Church work. That is a long way from a tenth.

The Christian Education Committee are sponsoring a number of community missions to Christian Education workers for the purpose of promoting evangelism in the Sunday School. Mention was made of the evident interest in evangelism on the part of leaders in the Church and among Young Peoples' groups.

The Evangelism and Social Service Committee commented on the evident interest in evangelism throughout the whole Church and called for such action as would channel all such evangelistic interest to where it would be most effective. The appointment of a full-time evangelist was suggested. Visitation evangelism carried out by laymen was recommended.

The Committee commended the action of various Provincial Authorities in announcing that liquor outlets will be closed on V-Day, and rejoiced in the opinion that the churches should be open for special thanksgiving services. They recommended that preparations be begun now to fittingly observe that day.

Large Supply Chickens Offered On Satur. Market

Market prices remained firm on the Saturday offering of farm products when an exceptionally large pre-Thanksgiving display of farm produce found a ready market in the city. For the second week the price of eggs remained slightly lower than a month ago when vendors offered grade A eggs at 43c the dozen.

With the prospects of a strong fowl market for the holiday weekend, a goodly offering of dressed chickens and a few ducks were displayed for sale at 40c per pound. The prevailing prices of 35 to 40 cents per pound for chickens found a strong market, with larger dressed birds bringing as high as $2 for best quality. No turkeys were offered.

The outside market proved rather colorful with large displays of apples, pears, plums and vegetables. In the apple market McIntosh Reds were quoted at $2.75 per hamper, while windfalls of the same variety sold for 35c the six-quart basket. Talman Sweets sold at 45c the basket and St. Lawrence at 40c for the same measure. Cooking apples sold for $2 a bushel while frost plums and Blue Damsons ranged from 90c to one dollar the basket.

Potatoes held strongly at $2 the bag or $1.75 a bushel, tomatoes bringing 35c the basket. Carrots and beets were 50c the peck and onions 75c. Large white cauliflowers went as high as 40c and cabbages held firm at a dime. Green corn sold at 25c the dozen ears.

The season's first offering of butternuts was noted with filled six-quart baskets being sold for 35c while hickory nuts moved up to 40c the quart measure.

A lone load of hard wood did not remain long on the square, being purchased for stove consumption for $16. A few young pigs were also offered and ranged in price from $6.50 to $7. It was a typical pre-Thanksgiving market with householders stocking well of the products of the good earth for the long holiday weekend.

St. Michael's H.S. Convocation Gala Event, 23 Are Graduated, Prizes Awarded, Addresses Made

The girls, dressed in their traditional white gowns with corsages of red roses, and the boys wearing their dark suits, twenty-three members of the graduating class of St. Michael's High School received their diplomas at the graduating exercises on Friday afternoon. The convocation, held in the auditorium of St. Michael's Academy, was a great occasion in the life of each and everyone of the graduates. As Monsignor J. F. Nicholson said in addressing them: "It is rightful and delightful to extend sentiments of felicitations and good wishes to those who in the morning of life and in the bloom of life gaze eagerly into the future."

Robert Wilson, as chairman for the afternoon's exercises, extended a warm welcome to everyone present and particularly the parents of the graduates. He expressed, on behalf of the graduates, an abundance of gratitude to the Holy Name Society and the Knights of Columbus for their donation of prizes and to the members of the Catholic Women's League for sponsoring the "At Home" and in every phase of furthering the success of the graduation.

Presentation of Prizes

Mr. A. Dutton, president of the Holy Name Society, on its behalf, extended congratulations to the graduates and presented the prizes awarded by the Society. He expressed the hope that they would have a successful life. He thanked the Reverend Sisters who had made the graduating class possible, also Monsignor Nicholson who had done a great deal towards its success.

Prizes awarded by the Holy Name Society were as follows:

Grade eleven—highest standing—Boyd Upper; highest aggregate — Boyd Upper; 2nd highest aggregate —Betty Flynn; 3rd highest aggregate—Sheila Doyle.

Junior Matriculation — highest religion — Mary Agnes Wilkinson; highest English—Mary Agnes Wilkinson; highest Latin—Mary Agnes Wilkinson; 2nd highest aggregate and highest for French—Marcelle Thomas; highest for History—Mary Agnes Wilkinson; highest for Science—Mary Agnes Wilkinson; highest for Mathematics — Mary Agnes Wilkinson.

Mr. M. J. Callaghan, in the absence of Mr. George O'Brien, spoke a few words to the graduates and awarded the prizes from the Knights of Columbus. Mr. Callaghan expressed his pleasure at being able to attend the Graduation Exercises and wished for the graduates success through life.

Prizes were awarded to the following students:

Junior Matriculation, 2nd highest aggregate, Robert Flurey; 3rd highest aggregate, Mary Flynn.

Senior Matriculation, Religion, Ed. Thomas; English, Robert Temple; French, Ed Thomas; Latin, Ed. Thomas; History, Robert Temple; Mathematics, Ed. Thomas.

John Doyle, president of St. Michael's Literary Society, presented a prize to Mary Agnes Wilkinson on behalf of the organization for the best attendance record for the past year.

The conferring of diplomas was conducted by Monsignor Nicholson. Valedictory by Ed. Thomas.

Edward Thomas, in delivering the valedictory, said in his opening remarks, "As the years move on, so do the pupils of St. Michael's pass through her portals. The spirit of the school lives on however, and the fundamentals never change." Edward expressed the gratitude of the graduates for the very best of training they had received from the Sisters. "The bonds linking us to the Alma Mater are steadfast," he said. We have had the support of the Sisters in all our scholastic activities. Now that we are leaving, their blessings are with us. We as classmates must now separate but our friendship lives on. Many projects together have brought us great joy, and in the years to come it will be a pleasure for us to recall these events.

Classmates, Gratitude Expressed.

"Not to be forgotten, however, are the students in our footsteps," Edward continued. "Let us hope too that ours was a good example for them." He expressed to Monsignor Nicholson his classmates' thanks for everything he had done for them, also to the other Rev. Fathers for their help and support towards their welfare. Lastly but not least, he thanked the parents for their inspiration and sacrifice.

Memories of the school will still live with us when we grow old. Graduation has always been and always will be a joyous occasion. In conclusion, Edward said, "May the students that are left behind keep up the good tradition of the school and may every pupil be a credit to St. Michael's."

'Golden Hour' of Graduation.

Monsignor Nicholson delivered an address and congratulated the efficient chairman and Edward Thomas who gave the valedictory. Referring to the graduating class, he stated it was a golden hour to be recalled in days to come. "Haec olim meminisse juvabit". Though far we may stray from the scenes of the past, the memories will follow us wherever we go, and the days that were first sway the days that are last. The destiny of a nation rests in the hands of its youth, and spiritual principles are vital for an individual and also for a country. In a spirit of trust in God, they would realise their fondest hopes.

Delightful interludes of music were contributed to the program by the Glee Club of the high school. It rendered "Oh Fairest Alma Mater", "There Are Such Things" with Robert Lucy taking the solo part and "Mother Beloved" with Robert Flurey as soloist.

The annual "at home" for the graduates was held in the evening in the auditorium of the academy. Forming an impressive setting for the occasion were the beautiful floral arrangements in a riot of multi-colored autumn bloom distributed throughout the auditorium. Featured band for the event was the 6 R.D. orchestra.

Assistant Postmaster Ernie Lang Retires After 39 Years Service

After almost 39 years' service with the local post office department, Assistant Postmaster J. Ernie Lang, 90 Catharine Street, has retired from the service to begin a well-deserved rest. On October 5th he commenced a six months' leave of absence prior to his official retirement from the service.

Son of the late Joshua Lang, former well known local building contractor, "Ernie" Lang, as he is known to his friends, was born in Belleville and has lived practically all his life here. He was educated at the Belleville High School, at Woodstock College and later took a course at the Ontario Business College.

Interested in Sports.

Taking an active interest in sport Mr. Lang, near the turn of the century, played baseball, football and hockey on Belleville teams and was a member of the first hockey team from Belleville to reach the O.H.A. finals. He also played hockey with London and Woodstock teams, being professionalised at the former place.

An employee of the Dominion Express Company of Montreal before he joined the civil service at the Belleville post office in 1906, Mr. Lang was in charge of the money order office here for 20 years and in 1932 was made assistant postmaster.

Has Seen Many Developments.

"I have seen a great many changes since I came here back in 1906," stated Mr. Lang, as he talked with a newspaper reporter the day prior to his retirement. "When I first entered the service we stamped all mail by hand—a really tedious job—and everyone came to the office for their mail. There was no postal delivery in those days. Volume of mail has seen a tremendous increase during the past few years."

Still taking close interest in sports, Mr. Lang attends ball games and is a regular attendant at local wrestling matches. What about the World Series? he was asked. "I think the 'Cards will win, but I favor the Browns," was the reply.

Lover of Music.

Aside from his interest in sports, Mr. Lang is a lover of music and still plays the piano, an enjoyment on which he at one time commercialized. During the heyday of the old Palace Theatre on Front Street, he acted as pianist. "That was in the day of the road show and the silent movies," he recalls.

Saddened by the loss of his wife some two years ago, Mr. Lang has no definite plans for the immediate future. "I'm just going to enjoy a well-deserved rest," was his only comment. He has two sons, Frank Lang, office manager at Stephen-Adamson Co., and Eugene Lang, who is following in his father's footsteps as a postal employee at the Belleville office.

FENDERS DAMAGED

Motor car fenders were damaged when two automobiles were in collision on Bridge St., west of the Coleman St. intersection Friday evening. The vehicles were driven by Charles Anderson, 17 Dunbar St. and Arthur Bruyea, 57 Church St. Police investigated following which an amicable settlement was established between the parties concerned.

London Beaver Club Popular Centre For Canadian Servicemen

Occasionally "Y" Secretary, Joe Shortt, receives a visit by some local boy, home on leave, who has had the privilege of visiting the "Y" Beaver Club in London.

Mr. Wilfred Spearman, who was in charge of the Club since 1942 has just now returned to resume his duties as secretary of the Westmount Y. M. C. A., Quebec. The famous Beaver Club is currently financed and operated by Canadian Y. M. C. A. War Services.

The Club's reading room, where daily papers from more than 86 Canadian cities are always available, is one of its most popular features, Mr. Spearman said, as the troops attach great importance to the link with home. Another instance of their devotion to families left behind was revealed when more than $15,000 was cabled through the Beaver Club alone to buy flowers last Mother's Day. As Club Manager, Mr. Spearman also received approximately a dozen letters daily from families seeking to contact men in the forces.

Beverley Baxter's study group conducted every Sunday for the discussion of World affairs and the preceding week in parliament was another well attended feature. Up to the end of April more than 8,500 Canadian servicemen had patronized this activity.

Of the people of England, Mr. Spearman has the greatest admiration. "I don't know of any other people who could have stood up so well to both the blitz and the robot bombs," he said.

Located in a large building, the Beaver Club contains 50 rooms, all devoted to the recreation and comfort of Canadians on leave. The regular staff is augmented by 800 volunteers, who are generally English girls offering their time to act as hostesses and dancing partners for the men.

There was no doubt the Club was filling a great need, Mr. Spearman declared. On one Sunday alone attendance rose to 15,000 and during the year averaged a daily 10,000. More than 10,000,000 Canadian Servicemen have registered at the Club up to the end of April.

Mr. Spearman has been succeeded in his position by Mr. A. W. Kemball, of Montreal, former secretary of the Verdun Y. M. C. A.

Belleville Member of LCI Assisted In D-Day Operations Across Channel

L.S. Raymond Donovan is Home on Furlough After Three Years' Service

For thirteen round trips across the English Channel the LCI (Landing Craft, Infantry) ship plowed her way steadily through the choppy sea as she assisted in the initial landing operations on D-Day.

Carrying a large number of British Tommies on each trip, the big landing craft dropped her ramps into four feet of water along the French coast just long enough to disgorge her soldier passengers. Then it went back to the point of embarkation in England for another load of keenly-trained troops waiting to get into action in the long-promised invasion.

Two Other Boys Included.

Assisting in these operations as crew members of landing craft were at least three Belleville boys, all of whom are now back in Canada on well-deserved 45-day furloughs. They are Leading Stoker Raymond Donovan, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Donovan, 319 Charles Street; Jack Lynch, son of Mr. Ed. Lynch, 50 Moira Street, and Hugh Houston, 284 Albert Street. The trio arrived home early Thursday morning.

Sitting in the comfort of his parents' living room, L/S. Donovan, with more than a hint of traditional naval reticence, quietly referred to extensive landing craft training operations in preparation for the real thing. He told how an abnormally heavy sea had delayed D-Day operations by a full 24 hours, and of the race to land a sufficient number of troops on the Normandy beaches to hold off the expected counter-attacks by the Germans.

Was in North Africa.

With three years in the navy Stoker Donovan has seen action only as a crew member of a landing craft. After completing his initial training he went "across the pond" as a crew member of a large LST and delivered it in North Africa where it lay in wait for invasion operations on Sicily. Then after three weeks' shore leave in Algiers he went to England to commence his training on various types of landing craft.

Came zero hour of the long-awaited D-Day and innumerable heavy laden landing craft under the protection of naval escort vessels and a strong aerial umbrella converged on the French coast. British Tommies jumped into waist-deep water as the ramps were let down and quickly swarmed ashore to make beachheads secure.

But the work of the landing craft was not finished. Additional infantry reinforcements were needed to secure beachheads and it was the job of landing craft to put them ashore. Intense rivalry sprang up between landing craft commanders to see who could make the most trips. Donovan's craft made 13 trips, but another ship in the same flotilla made more.

Ships Strongly Powered.

Only when a beachhead is made secure do landing craft ride up on the shore at high tide, there to unload when the water recedes. In the initial assault the invasion forces plunge into waist-deep water, thus allowing their craft to get away for another trip. Landing craft such as Donovan was a crew member are as "big as a sweeper," commented the local boy. They are powered by Diesel engines positioned amidships, engines which are still on the secret list.

"It's sure good to be home again," assured Stoker Donovan as younger brothers romped freely about him. "It is 22 months since I left Canada." One of his first acts after returning home was to outfit himself with new civilian clothes. "They feel good after being in uniform for a long time," he said.

Another Donovan boy, Chief Petty Officer Bill Donovan, is stationed in Newfoundland after seeing service overseas. He is married to an English girl.

Program of Don Cossack Chorus Divided Into Parts of Contrast

"One of the wonders of the art of the Don Cossack Chorus is the extraordinary variety of their concerts despite the fact that a male chorus by its nature tends to become monotonous." So wrote a noted American critic in reviewing a concert by the famous Don Cossack Chorus which comes to the Collegiate Institute for one performance on Monday evening.

According to Serge Jaroff, their equally famous conductor, the secret of this variety lies in two things. "It depends," said Jaroff in a recent interview, "upon the choice of program and, of course, upon technique."

Three Parts.

Jaroff points out that a typical program is divided into three parts, each of which offers a bold contrast with the other. "We begin with what is perhaps the most glorious music in the entire Russian repertory, the liturgical music of the Russian Orthodox Church. In the music of the Russian church you have the stuff upon which Russian choirs have been formed and reared. For hundreds of years, choral singing has played a major part in the Orthodox Liturgy. No organs are allowed in the Orthodox Church, consequently the burden of the music falls on the shoulders of the choir and the choirmaster. This has led to the building of a tradition of church music second to none in the world."

Then, Mr. Jaroff pointed out, in direct contrast comes the next group which is devoted to Russian classics. "The choral tradition was taken over by the Russian lyric theatre when Glinka founded it with his Life for the Czar more than a century ago. Just think of the choruses in Boris Godunov and in Borodine's Prince Igor and the operas of Rimsky-Korsakov. These form a wonderful source of colorful material for the programs. And then there are thousands upon thousands of fine part songs and independent choruses composed by the Russian masters."

Folklore Music.

"The third section, says Mr. Jaroff, is devoted to the oldest music of all, the folklore, and the little conductor believes that Russia is probably the richest country in the world in folk music. These include Cossack songs, soldier songs, work songs, lullabies and all the forms in which the people have sung from time immemorial.

The original Don Cossacks Chorus and Dancers under the direction of Serge Jaroff, who will give a concert at the Collegiate Institute on Monday.

Technically, says Mr. Jaroff, much depends upon the way this folk material is arranged. "Shvedoff and I score it so as to give our choir an opportunity to display its virtuosity and capacity for coloring. But at the same time we take great care not to obscure these beautiful melodies."

The Original Don Cossack Chorus, under the direction of Jaroff, begins its Eastern Canadian tour under the auspices of France Film at Belleville then visiting Ottawa, Quebec, and arriving in Montreal for two concerts.

Men Seeing Service In Both Wars To Get Govt. Help

Ottawa, Oct. 6 (CP)— Pensions Minister Mackenzie announced today passage of a new order-in-council designed to assist ex-service men who have seen service in both the first and second Great Wars in their return to civil life.

The order creates what is known as the "dual service pension" and is designed to protect the older ex-service men who are not eligible for benefits under the War Veterans' Allowance Act.

"There is no need for overseas service to come under the provisions of this new order," Mr. Mackenzie said. "The primary qualification is that a man shall have given service to his country in the armed forces both in this and the first Great War."

The dual service pension is payable to any ex-serviceman in the Canadian forces in this war, who has service in both wars, and who has attained the age of 60 years, or, if below that age, is permanently unemployable because of physical or mental disability, or is unlikely to become capable of maintaining himself by his own efforts because of economic handicaps combined with physical or mental disability or insufficiency.

Widows and orphaned children of deceased veterans coming under this category are eligible for the same assistance.

The rates are at a maximum of $365 a year to a bachelor, or to a widower or widow without a dependent child or children, or $730 a year to a married man, a widower or a widow with a dependent child or children.

Jap Premier Says Cabinet Failed To Carry Out Decisive Measures

New York, Oct. 6 (AP) — The Japanese cabinet has failed to carry out some "decisive wartime measures... at this moment of national crisis," the government-controlled Domei news agency reported today.

The words were attributed to Premier Gen. Kuniaki Koiso in a propaganda broadcast beamed to North America and Asia and recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

Domei said Koiso warned his ministers in a six-hour session that they must give "fullest attention" to matters that "stand in the way of the prosecution of the war."

Navigator Saves Burning Plane

London, Oct. 6 (CP Cable) — A Beaufighter was saved from burning and its pilot was able to press home a recent attack on a convoy when the navigator, Flt. Lt. Ronald Jackson of Brockville scooped up with his bare hands flaming material from the belly of the plane as it roared through heavy flak.

Flying with Sqdn. Ldr. Robert Schoales of Fort William as pilot, Jackson found the plane afire as the squadron went in to attack a convoy of six minesweepers and two trawlers.

It was no time to divert the pilot so Jackson reached into the blazing belly of the aircraft and scooped out the engine cover which he carried to the machine-gun hatch and tossed out. Then he subdued a minor blaze with the fire extinguisher. Jackson suffered severe burns.

GERMANS LEFT PATRAI IN GREAT HURRY

Advanced Allied Headquarters, Mediterranean, October 6 —(CP Reuter)—The Germans left Patrai, in the northern Peloponnesus, so hurriedly that they apparently had no time to set off demolitions in the area of the port, which appears to be in serviceable condition.

Allied infantry reinforcements are being flown into the western Peloponnesus.

Prime Minister Sends Message To News Boys

Belleville, Oct. 7 —(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King has expressed the appreciation of the Canadian government for the "devoted service" given by the newspaper boys of Canada during the present war. The expression of appreciation was contained in a letter from the Prime Minister to H. B. Cowan, Jr., chairman of the National Newspaperboy Day Committee of the Canadian Circulation Managers Association.

Text of the letter, made public last night on the eve of the observance of National Newspaperboy Day tomorrow, follows:

I have been interested to learn from your letter that Oct. 7 is being celebrated both in Canada and the United States as National Newspaperboy Day.

I should like to take advantage of this occasion to express the appreciation which is felt by the government, and, I am sure, by millions of Canadians of the devoted service given by the newspaperboys of Canada during the present war. In wartime, the regular and prompt dissemination of the news is of even greater importance than in peacetime. To the thousands of boys who, day after day, in all kinds of weather bring us our daily papers, the people of Canada owe a debt of gratitude.

In wartime, the newspaperboys have done far more than deliver the newspapers. The newspaper boys have had their part in almost every national and local wartime campaign. Campaigns for victory loans and war savings to which they themselves have subscribed in large numbers, for paper salvage, for blood donors and many others have been devotedly supported by the newspaper boys.

The newspaperboys themselves are still too young to serve in the armed forces, but we do not forget that dozens of the men in Canada's navy, army and air force were once newspaperboys.

It gives me great pleasure to pay a tribute to the newspaperboys of Canada in connection with the national newspaperboy day.

Indian Forces Clear Village

Kandy, Ceylon, Oct. 6 —(CP)— Indian infantry jungle fighters were reported today to have cut across the top of the so-called "Chocolate Staircase" highway which leads up the mountains by many twists and turns to the Japanese northwestern Burma base of Tiddim.

At the same time the main British 4th Army advance down the Manipur road was closing a nine-mile gap and crushing Japanese troops trapped by a roadblock four miles north of Tiddim.

Thanksgiving

With grateful hearts Canadians prepare for Thanksgiving for all the blessings that Providence has bestowed upon this land. The annual festival for the fertility of the land, the mercies of the passing year and the garnering of the harvests is one of the most natural of occasions for celebration as it is most universally observed in some form or other in history.

In war time this land has been peculiarly blessed in that it has had plenty, its harvests have been good and there has been fortunately an overflow of produce through the self-sacrificing toil of the farmers and their families and all those who have helped them harvest the produce so that there may be food and food to spare for Canadians and for the other nations who depend upon Canada especially at this hour. Canada is grateful that she has been able to be a granary for so large a part of the world. God's blessings upon Canada through nature and woman's and man's effort and skill on farm, in factory and in the homes call the people to praise and gratitude.

But more than the gifts of the field are other blessings which will find expression in gratitude, Heaven's benediction upon Canada in days of war, the self-sacrifice and gallant service of her noble sons on battlefield, in the air, and on the sea, the freedom of this land from the spite of the enemy for our shores are unmolested and the direction of the war on the road to the victory which now is within sight. Gratitude on such occasion cannot but be the dominating spirit of the people as they realize that what we have and are is the result of heroic struggles in the past and in present days for liberty and the other freedoms which the Western World at this time enjoys and which are denied through enemy aggression to many yet to be liberated in Europe. Our country is free, our neighbors are free, the Western World and lands liberated in the Old World and Britain which was never overrun are free through faith and sacrifice of comfort, limb, even life and suffering of the heroes of the forces and of the civilian peoples. Germany over five years ago pounced upon the world, Germany was the enemy of Thanksgiving and exponent of brute force, cruelty, envy, lust and tyranny. She is being driven closer and closer to the end of her perfidious course. For this the rest of the world and Canada are grateful. So in war time the anniversary sinks deeper than in the piping times of peace. Like the trees that send their roots down deeper and deeper as the trees grow so as to stand the tempest, gratitude goes deeper with its roots into the human heart in these days because freedom has been saved from the storm of war which has swept across nearly the entire world. Homes in the lands at war or at peace have been deeply stirred by the victory of good over evil forces of German inhumanity and by the hope of secure days to come.

Today the lights are coming on again, victory has followed victory for many months and the enemy is all but bottled up in the Reich. With victory in Europe in sight this year's Thanksgiving will perhaps parallel more closely than ever the first recorded proclamation of the day in Upper Canada May 15, 1816, which called for a day of thanksgiving for the ending of the war between Great Britain and France at that time. There is thus a greater sense of freedom but naturally the burdens of war have rested heavily on homes which have loved ones in the forces of liberation. Hence will be a quieter sense than in peacetime observance, the thoughts of the people run deep because victory comes through sacrifice.

This year Canadians troops have participated in the liberation of France, Belgium and Holland, they have been engaged in the war in Italy where they have been making progress against a stubborn foe. The United Nations have stabbed deeply into the Nazis' Siegfried Line and Russia's great armies have continued their powerful advance from the east.

There is room for deep gratitude on the part of the Canadian people that in one of the great operations in all history, the greatest amphibious operation of all time has through the excellence of Allied equipment and the tireless and thorough planning of the Allied strategy, casualties in western Europe have been less than expected to date despite the fierce nature of the struggle and the increased power of modern arms. They are grateful for the advance of medical science, now serving thousands of men who otherwise would have died of wounds on the battlefield but for the saving agencies.

There is occasion too to celebrate the success of this Dominion on the home front in the turning out of the tools of war. From the Atlantic to the Pacific there have been bountiful harvests with which Canada can feed herself and the United Nations. Here in the traditional meaning of the observance will not be lost.

Thanksgiving Day to express gratitude for an abundant harvest was an observance adopted from the early settlers of New England. It was first held in Canada Nov. 6, 1879. Then, as now, the celebration date was not fixed but was decided by the Governor-General-In-Council who issued a proclamation.

Following the First Great War, the date was for some years observed in connection with Armistice Day, November 11. However, servicemen protested vigorously for an exclusive Armistice Day and their wishes were met by an act of parliament setting aside November 11 as the annual Remembrance Day.

Since that time Thanksgiving Day has been held in October, usually on a Monday early in the month.

In every mind at Thanksgiving will be the faith that soon will be the last of the war in Europe and that in the Orient peace will speedily come with the overthrow of Japanese military tyranny and the restoration to China and the other nations the security they and the rest of the world so much desire and needs.

That Fourth Verse

(Manchester Guardian)

In the wardroom of one of H.M. ships, with Mr. Churchill on board, a sing-song was in progress. Prime Minister and officers joined in singing "Rule, Britannia," but after three verses there came a pause.

"What about the fourth verse?" said Mr. Churchill. Nobody seemed to know it so Mr. Churchill sang it himself.

What is the fourth verse of "Rule, Britannia"? Mr. Richard Tobin, of the "New York Herald-Tribune," writing the story for his paper, made many inquiries, but nobody was able to quote the verse.

So he wrote to No. 10 Downing Street, and recently he received a courteous reply with all four verses of "Rule, Britannia," neatly typed. The missing fourth verse, as sung by Mr. Churchill, is:

The Muses, still with freedom found,
Shall to thy happy coast repair,
Blest isle, with matchless beauty crowned,
And many hearts to guard the fair.
Rule, Britannia, etc.

Iron for Apples

Apple growers may be afflicted by barren trees; either one here and there, or a whole orchardful. Here is a remedy from Scotland, quoted by The St. Thomas Times-Journal.

A Lanarkshire grower had several barren trees. So he reverted to an old Scottish trick. In the late Autumn, after there was no prospect of growth, he drove a rusty nail into the trunks about one foot from the ground. The following year there were no results. The year afterward the trees blossomed as if in the full burgeoning of their youth. The yield of apples was equal to the best the grower ever had. His explanation is that some trees are non-fertilizing, and as the rusty nail has ferric-oxide properties, it fertilized the sap and set things going again.

Of course, it is also an old trick on the farm to put a rusty nail in the drinking water of the poultry to "tone them up" when they are not laying well.

Soon To Return

(Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph)

One of these days the doorbell will ring and there once again, like the first robin of spring will be the Vanished Caller. You remember, the cheery and persistent citizen with the sample case of brushes or hosiery, or perhaps a mechanized carpet sweeper. We will not say when that day will come, for fear of being called complacent. But come it will. And a typical Canadian life will be resumed.

JUST FOLKS

TOO MUCH

We eat too much; we drink too much,
But few are they who think too much.
We dance too much; we play too much,
But few are they who pray too much.

Men brag too much, and swear too much
But few are they who care too much.
In idleness men live too much,
But few are they who give too much.

We ask too much; we yearn too much,
But never mortals learn too much.
We tread our selfish ways too much,
But few give praise to God too much.

NUGGETS OF KNOWLEDGE

Can there be such a thing as a white blackbird? Certainly. "Blackbird" is the name of a species of bird, just as "cow" and "robin" are. Therefore if one of this species happens to be white, and such albinistic freaks do occasionally occur, it is correctly called a white blackbird. Likewise, there may be white redbirds and white bluebirds.

Face lifting is nothing new. The Roman Emperor Justinian had a new nose built on his mug after the original had been cut off in battle.

When a toad moults it swallows its skin. This swallowing of the sloughed skin is merely incidental to shedding. Toads are rather clumsy in their actions and movements and apparently they swallow the loose skin in their efforts to free themselves from the encumbrance.

"Paying through the nose" means to pay a fancy price for a thing—to pay more than it is worth—to get stung. The origin of the expression is lost in obscurity. There is a legend that Odin, the Norse god, imposed a tax resembling the modern poll tax. It was called a nose-tax because it was a penny a nose, and in default of payment the nose was supposed to be the forfeit. "Paying through the nose" may have originated with this myth. The French have a similar phrase—"payer par le nez."

"Harvest moon" is the popular name given in northern temperate latitudes to the full moon that occurs about harvest time. Astronomers usually regard the full moon nearest in date to the autumnal equinox as the harvest moon. This is, roughly speaking, between the 18th and 20th of September. Country people, however, are more likely to regard the next full moon as the harvest moon; namely, the full moon that occurs about the middle of October.

At this season the path of the moon, especially in high latitudes, passes quite closely above and below the horizon at the time of the full moon, causing it to rise nearly at sunset for several nights in succession. Thus the harvest moon prolongs the natural twilight and permits tardy farmers, so it is said, to complete their belated harvesting before the coming of frost and winter. In south temperate latitudes this phenomenon occurs in late March or early April. The moon that follows the harvest moon and that has similar characteristics is called "the hunter's moon," alluding to the fact that the hunting season generally does not begin until after the harvest.

SO YOU HAVE HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE?

To readers who ask what's good for high blood pressure or what one with high blood pressure should eat or should not eat, it may seem incompetent or maybe just unkind of me to say that I don't know.

Of course I could offer a list of foods one with high blood pressure may and may not eat. And I could caution gullible ones against eating red meats, although heaven only knows what red meats have that other color meats haven't. I might even impress some of the customers who have dabbled in quack literature by warning them to beware of wrong combinations of foods such as starch and protein in the same meal, as for example in wheat the staff of life, or sugar and protein in the same meal, such as the milk nature provides for babies and young animals.

Honestly, I've smoked many a pipeful about this question and I'm blessed if I can think of a single positive thing to say about high blood pressure. All I can think of, that I believe will do no harm to say here, is more or less negative. To wit:

High blood pressure is not the same as too much blood. Many individuals with high blood pressure are anemic and have rather too little blood.

Florid complexion is no more significant of high blood pressure than is pallor.

If blood pressure is reduced at all by salts or saline cathartics of any kind, natural or artificial, it rises within a day or two after the catharsis is over.

Since high blood pressure is not a disease or an ailment in itself, but only one manifestation of some disease or some bad health habit, is it futile to hope that this or that remedy will restore blood pressure to normal level, except cure of the disease or correction of the bad health habit that causes it.

I do not mean to imply that a physician should not prescribe any remedy or treatment he deems necessary in any case where blood pressure is high. I do earnestly advise you not to monkey with any such remedy or treatment without benefit of medical supervision.

An adult with moderately high blood pressure may donate blood repeatedly with no more injury to his or her health than such blood donations cause a normal adult. On the other hand, such drawing of a pint or less of blood at suitable intervals does no particular good to the person with high blood pressure, because the fluid and corpuscular volume and strength of the blood will be restored to the ordinary or original level within a few days anyway.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Malnutrition

I got into a rundown condition and was advised by a doctor to have my teeth all out. I did so, and have become weaker, feel tired and can hardly lift arms after any exertion.

(K. A. P.)

Answer—I wish I could advise you intelligently, brother, but you give so little information. What produced the run down condition in the first place? Was it the natural consequence of insufficient mastication of food, and the nutritional deficiency produced by your limiting your diet to refined pap which requires little or no chewing? If so, the damaged teeth should have been promptly repaired by a good dentist. That might have salvaged some of the health that is now lost. From the time you began to subsist on refined pap instead of real food you should have supplemented your inadequate diet with suitable daily rations of vitamin D and vitamin B-complex—these being the essential vitamins lacking in the refined modern diet. Teeth or no teeth, there was and is no good reason why you should not consume three pints of milk a day, or milk products equivalent—such as cream, butter, skim milk, sour milk, buttermilk Bulgarian lactic milk, Acidophilus milk, condensed or evaporated milk, dried powdered milk, clabbered milk, whey, cottage or Dutch cheese, custards, etc.

Pimples

Ben Told not to drink milk, eat butter or cheese, because these foods cause pimples.

(S. J.)

Answer—You'll be sorry when you grow up, son, if you don't eat just such foods,—all you can handle. Send stamped self addressed envelope, for pamphlet on pimples.

A Modern 'Black Hole of Calcutta'

(From Netherlands News)

No story has so roused the indignation of the people of Holland against the Germans from whose hold they are now being freed as that of the fifty-eight women jammed into a single cell at the order of a German concentration camp commander. One goes back to the Indian Mutiny to find a parallel for this incident as it is reported by Holland's underground press.

The night of January 15, 1944, will not be easily forgotten by the people of Holland. On that night there was committed in the concentration camp at Vught a crime so heinous and cowardly that even the Nazi authorities in Berlin had to take cognizance of the affair, and to punish the guilty persons.

For some time the underground newspapers "Waarheid" and "Vrij Nederland" had hinted at an act of cruelty in the concentration camp which had cost the lives of a large number of women and had driven many others insane. It remained for the clandestine paper "Trouw" to discover the details of what happened and to loosen among the Netherlands people a wave of indignation such as has rarely been provoked by the harsh acts of Nazi oppression.

One of the women in Barracks 23B wrote a letter to the camp commander in which she accused her fellow prisoners of conduct unfriendly to the Nazis. When she boasted to the other women of what she had done, they cut off her hair. Afraid of further revenge, the creature decided to flee. At midnight she left the barracks and tried to make her way through the barbed wire fence. But she was discovered by a guard who shot her in the breast. Seriously wounded, she was taken to the hospital.

When the next day, a Saturday, the camp commander, named Gruenewald, was notified of the incident, he ordered all the women in the barracks, seventy-five in all, to be taken to the as yet unfinished prison building in the camp.

Ranting and raging, and assisted by the three guards, Gruenewald drove most of the women into one cell; by crushing them tightly together, they managed to press fifty-eight prisoners inside the room, although they had difficulty in closing the door. Thereupon, the commander wished the prisoners "a pleasant Sunday," and, apparently calmed down, he locked the other seventeen women in another cell. All lights in the prison were then turned off.

• •

It is impossible to describe the suffering of the fifty-eight women in that barren cell, the underground paper said. There was no water and no sanitary arrangement. Owing to the lack of oxygen, many became unconscious but as there was no room to put them down, the other women held them upright.

Gradually even the strongest women lost their strength, and the bodies tumbled over each other. Some of the women became mad with fear and fought with those who tried to quieten them. The air became unbearable, the walls and floor were wet with condensed breath. The atmosphere grew fouler and fouler. Their thirst became insupportable. Women cried and screamed, others prayed aloud and encouraged and consoled the weakest among them.

After many efforts, they finally succeeded in breaking a small window near the ceiling, but it was of little help as a wooden board had been fastened outside the window. It was pitch dark; when one of the women tried to strike a match it went out for lack of oxygen. The number of unconscious victims increased.

Fourteen hours later, at eight o'clock the next morning, two guards opened the cell door. What they beheld was so gruesome, the stench so revolting, that they recoiled in horror. The women's faces were bluish-green; the eyes of the few that had remained conscious were bulging with terror of death.

Panic stricken, the guards slammed the door shut and summoned the German head physician. The doctor ran to the prison, and unlocked the cell door.

A few women still stood pressed against the walls, with barely enough room to stand. The remainder of the floor was heaped with the dead and the unconscious. Those who were able to leave the cell unaided, crumpled up as soon as they came into the open air. The cell was steaming like a Turkish bath.

• •

When Commander Gruenewald was notified of the tragedy, he immediately tried to cover up his crime. All women who still could walk, were placed in solitary cells. None of the Netherlands doctors (political prisoners who served in the camp hospital) were permitted to attend the victims.

Without consulting the commander, the German physician ordered hospital cots to be brought to the prison. At noon, the group of seventeen women in the second cell were also transferred to individual cells. They had suffered far less than the first group.

This smaller group were released on Monday afternoon and returned to the barracks. They were forced to sign papers that they had been guilty of mutiny.

Gradually the women of the first group also returned to the barracks. Many were severely burned, presumably from the nitric acid that, owing to the heat, had formed upon the fresh masonry of the prison walls.

There were twenty women who never came back. The names of eleven dead were published by the clandestine paper "Vrij Nederland." The remainder became insane.

The camp commander ordered the German physician to register their deaths on various dates covering a period of several weeks. This the physician refused to do.

The affair was reported, and Gruenewald and his wife, who was known for her cruelty throughout the camp, were arrested and taken to Germany.

SAYS LAST GERMAN CIVILIANS EVACUATED

Stockholm, Oct. 6 (AP)—The Berlin correspondent of the Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter reported today that the last German civilians had been evacuated under cover of night from the German city of Aachen, now menaced on both north and south by U.S. troops.

He asserted that reports from the front said 80 per cent of the city was in ruins.

Washington Spotlight

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, Oct. 6 (CP)—Britons, Russians and Americans, saviours of the world from threat of Axis slavery—a salvage job still far from ended—are being attacked for alleged plans to dominate the world in the interests of peace.

Strange that this could be true so soon after those dark days when all freedom-loving peoples pinned their wavering hopes on the efforts of these countries to make themselves powerful enough to turn back the Axis.

That it is true is evident from what has been written and said of the Dumbarton Oaks conference which has been dragging on here nearly six weeks seeking merely to draft a proposal for a world security league.

From all sides and from those whose written and spoken words command wide attention come fright inspiring warnings of the terrible consequences if those three powers decide to stand together as guardians of world peace and international decency.

"Power politics" is the cry of those who now shout loudly for the right to share in decisions on future wars or suppressions of war of small countries whose continued existence depends entirely upon the lavish sacrifice of lives, wealth and brains of the three countries their protagonists seem to fear.

Universal brotherly love, humility and self-effacement might be a better formula but hard-headed Realists at Dumbarton Oaks, particularly the Russians, do not accept that goal as possible of attainment just now.

The alternative as a measure of insurance against barbarism would seem to be unlimited power in the hands of those who can best be trusted to use it recently.

The effort to put that alternative into a form palatable to the critics of power politics in the United States is believed to be one of the reasons why the Dumbarton Oaks conference has lasted twice as long as expected, and still goes on.

Canada's memorial neglected: In Arlington cemetery, just across the Potomac from the White House, burial place of thousands of heroic and illustrated dead of the United States, stand the great marble, open-air theatre, the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, the historic Lee mansion and the foremast of the battleship Maine, all beautifully kept and cared for. A little apart from the main memorial, without approaching pathway, its base buried in neglected grass and weeds, weather-worn and drab, stands the graceful Memorial Cross erected by the Canadian government in memory of Americans who died while serving with the Dominion's forces in the First Great War.

WEDDINGS

CLARKE-FRANCO

St. George's United church in Toronto was adorned with settings of white dahlias and salmon pink gladioli on Saturday, September 30th, for the wedding of Norma Ruth Franco, daughter of Mrs. M. F. Franco, to Frederick Robson Clarke, Belleville, son of Dr. and Mrs. Harold Clarke, Brighton. Officiating was Rev. Willard Brewing, and the wedding music was played by Simeon Joyce.

Given in marriage by her brother, Donald F. Franco, the bride was in a street-length frock of aqua faconne sheer, styled with a fitted bodice and full skirt. A matching sweetheart hat misted in shoulder-length veiling completed her costume and her bouquet was of calla lilies, coral roses, forget-me-nots, bouvardia and swainsona.

The bridal attendants, Miss Neola Magee as maid of honor and Mrs Margaret Ferguson, bridesmaid, were in pastel wool jersey in gold and rose, respectively, with ruffles at the U-shaped necklines and on the pockets. Their matching half-hats were caught with clusters of single asters, and they carried mauve asters, gladioli petals and champagne 'mum petals.

Gerald Clarke attended his brother as groomsman and the ushers were Dr. E. G. Cameron, Kingston, and Gerald Liddle of Grimsby, uncle of the groom.

For the reception, held at the Alexandra Palace, the bride's mother chose a winter blue crepe ensemble with accents of navy, while the groom's mother was wearing pearl gray crepe with touches of fuchsia.

As her going away costume, the bride changed to a raspberry red suit, a black topcoat and accessories and mink furs.

JONES-WEIDMARK

A wedding of interest took place in Olivet Baptist Church, Toronto, Thursday afternoon, Oct. 5, when Mary Ethelda Weidmark, Reg. N., a graduate of Nicholls Hospital and daughter of Mrs. Weidmark, of Picton, and the late Calvin Weidmark, became the bride of LAC. John David Jones, R.A.F., stationed at Picton, son of Mrs. Jones and the late Dr. J. D. Jones, of "Bodnant," Rhyl, North Wales Rev. J. K. Holland officiated. The church was decorated with baskets of 'mums, gladioli and red roses. Daniel Holland was soloist and sang "O Promise Me."

For the ceremony the bride wore a floor-length gown of white satin with a Basque bodice, with long sleeves, sweetheart neckline and finished with tiny self-covered buttons and a full satin and tulle skirt. Her long veil of illusion net was caught to her head with orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of deep red roses and heather.

Miss Phyllis Weidmark, Reg. N., was her sister's only attendant, in floor-length Romance blue crepe, with a pink petal Juliet cap, matching shoulder-length veil and a bouquet of Johanna Hill roses. LAC. Edwin McGarrick, R.A.F., stationed at Picton, was best man.

At a reception, held at 21 Marguerita street, for immediate friends and relatives, the bride's mother received the guests in a mauve ensemble, black hat and accessories, and a corsage of yellow rose. For a wedding trip, the bride chose a turquoise crepe ensemble with touches of brown, a tan topcoat and brown accessories.

Fashion Flashes

NO SHORTAGE of flattery on the part of the new hats. A real face framer is an off-face head-fitting black velour cloche wreathed almost all around with rose and blue mixture curled ostrich.

IT'S EASY to have quite a wardrobe with the aid of one full-length and one short skirt, both done on graceful, wrappy lines. Nice with either skirt is an overblouse of waistcoat lines made of white metal moire stripes on black satin.

IT'S DIFFICULT to define a coat as being of cloth with fur trimming or of fur with cloth touches. Brown tweed is used for the front of a coat with sides, back and sleeves of nutria.

PERFECT for all but the very coldest weather are some of the suits now being shown. One model has a black woolen skirt, a purple wool jacket with revers of American broadtail and a matching waistcoat with sparkling rhinestone buttons.

BIG AND BEAUTIFUL berets are seen everywhere, many of them of black velvet or satin sparkled up with a big jeweled clip, pin or brooch.

SMARTEST DRESS of the week is a simple beige wool frock with full-length, very narrow insets of black braid. High, round neckline, plain sleeves and black suede belt cinching the waist and holding the perfectly straight lines of this distinguished frock.

With the war at the peak of intensity, Canada this year must raise an additional $320,000,000 by borrowing. Only $70,000,000 of this extra need is due to cancellation of compulsory savings. 'Rags to Riches Kids' Now Out in Front of the Cardinals Winning Third Game by 6-2

Put on Rally After Two Out in Third to Score Four Runs

CAN'T STOP McQUINN

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

St. Louis, Oct. 7 — (AP) — Unless St. Louis Cardinals snap out of it soon, the ragamuffin Browns are going to complete baseball's big 1944 surprise story by adding a first world championship to their first pennant victory.

Heading into today's fourth game of the neighborhood rivalry, the "rags to riches kids" are hitting a thin .170, fielding a wobbly .950 but leading the Red Birds in the all-important detail of two victories to one. Jack Kramer was responsible for yesterday's 6-2 American League triumph.

With the forecaster predicting fair and cooler weather, a contrast from yesterday when most of the 34,737 fans perspired in the 88-degree temperature, skipper Luke Sewell is ready to go with Sig Jakuki, a red-faced right-hander from a Houston shipyard.

He will be opposed by Lefty Harry Brecheen from Broken Bow, Okla., whose record of 16 victories and five losses was one of the best in the National League.

Jakucki's last outing was a win in last Sunday's pennant-winning game when the Browns made it four straight over the Yanks. That was a six-hit job coming on top of a five-hit shutout against Boston but his past performance chart is spotty. A four-game streak in June when he allowed only one run in four starts was his best. He won 13 and lost nine.

Captured Last Three Games

Brecheen likewise hurled the flag-clincher for his club in a Boston relief job and captured his last three games, winding up his last starting job with a six-hitter over Brooklyn Sept. 25. Billy Southworth used him three times on relief against the Yanks last fall when he was charged with one defeat.

Stopping the Brownies appears to be largely a question of stopping George McQuinn, the graceful first sacker from Alexandria, Va. He sticks out head and shoulders over the field on his .625 batting mark compiled on five hits, including two doubles and a game-winning homer, in eight times at bat. McQuinn, "A ball player's ball player" has driven in four of the 10 runs his team has scored. Gene Moore has scored three times on McQuinn's wallops.

If McQuinn was the big gun of the Browns' attack with three blows in yesterday's victory, Jack Kramer rated equal billing on his excellent exhibition of "clutch" pitching.

The 26-year-old right-hander from New Orleans, who drew a medical discharge from the United States Navy after six months service a year ago, was in hot water in the early and late innings, although he had one streak in mid-game when he retired 10 Cards in succession.

Moore Makes Two Catches

A two-base error by Vern Stephens on Johnny Hopp's grounder put the Redbird centre fielder in position to score an unearned run in the first when Walker Cooper singled. Again in the seventh a wild peg by Don Gutteridge trying to complete a double play let Whitey Kurowski move to second and Marty Marion's single was all that was needed for a second unearned tally.

Moore's back-to-the-wall catch on Stan Musial's drive in the eighth and another save by the veteran outfielder after a long run into the sun on Kurowski's fly in the same frame helped Kramer out of a hole but he did most of the work himself, striking out 10 men.

Loser Ted Wilks just didn't have it and was lucky to escape trouble in the second, when he loaded the bases on walks but whiffed Kramer. Successive singles with two out by Moore, Stephens, McQuinn, Al Zarilla and Mary Christman chased Wilks and counted three runs and a wild pitch by reliefer Fred Schmidt permitted a fourth to come across in a third-inning rally that meant the ball game.

The Browns added two more off Al Jurisich that proved unnecessary in the seventh. Don Gutteridge's double, an infield out, a walk to Stephens on which the fourth ball was a passed ball permitted Gutteridge to score, and McQuinn's double did the job.

Today's game will be the last in which the players share. With 35,000 expected the pool which now totals $231,150 will top $300,000. The remainder of the receipts will go to the War Relief Fund that netted $74,256.58 on the third tilt.

The 19-3 victory of No. 3 Wireless School, R.C.A.F., over No. 18 S.F.T.S., Gimli, in the Manitoba services football league Thursday was costly in that L.A.C. "Rocky" Rock of Windsor, Ont., suffered a broken leg in a tackle just before the finish of the game.

Jack Shewchuk of the Boston N.H.L. Bruins last night received 7 trophies at the annual dinner of the Brantford Golf and Country Club as the tangible result of his season's play. The cups included those for the Brant County title and the club championship.

The first exhibition hockey game of the season, played at Windsor last night, found Detroit Red Wings of the N.H.L. facing Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League. The practice tilt resulted in a 3-3 verdict.

What's Doing in Sport

Lieut. Melvin Hanson, sports officer of Military District No. 10, Winnipeg, returned to the football wars today with a scheduled turnout as quarterback and playing-coach of the Winnipeg Army team in the Manitoba services grid loop against No. 3 Bombing and Gunnery School. Hanson, variously called "Fritz" and "Twinkletoes", last saw grid action in 1941 when he led Blue Bombers to victory against Ottawa Rough Riders in the Grey Cup classic at Varsity Stadium, Toronto. He enlisted for overseas service but was severely injured during training in British Columbia when his football career was believed closed.

Seven patrons at Laurel Park, Maryland, yesterday collected a daily-double payoff of $2,906 after Linza, a 51-to-1 shot, won the opening event for two-year-old maidens and No Quota, paying $40.50 for $2, captured the second race. It was the largest double in Maryland racing since 1941 when Early Spring and Javery returned $3,320.40 at Pimlico.

The English Golf Union has preparations in hand for a resumption of championship golf in Britain next season, it was reported from London last night. The Royal and Ancient Club, Ladies Golf Union and the Professional Golfers Association are also considering 1945 tournaments.

The $3,000 Herald-Leader Stake, feature of yesterday's Lexington, Ky., trots, went to Algiers, owned by E. J. Baker, St. Charles, Ill., in two straight heats over Beatrice Hanover. Mrs. J. B. Johnson, Jr., Rochester, Mich., provided two winners, Blue Again in the 15 pace and Provident in the 17 trot.

Toronto, Oct. 7 — (CP) — Just to make the current Mann Cup lacrosse series more interesting, New Westminster and St. Catharines are in a bit of a dither over the hall of fame question that has so perturbed hockey fans the past year or so.

Jack Woods of the Salmonbellies started it when he suggested the British Columbia city would be a good place to set up a memorial to the originators and carry-oners of the great Canadian summer pastime. After a hiatus of a few days, Clayton Browne of the St. Catharines Standard replied in sturdy fashion to uphold the honor of the Ontario centre.

Browne points out that they have been playing lacrosse in St. Kitts since 1870, which he ironically says makes the Ontarians of merely "juvenile ranking." The game came into St. Kitts from Montreal, he adds, while the west didn't start until much later.

He cites numerous figures and statistics to support his claim, so it looks as though a good argument is a-brewing between the rival camps. Anyway, the two teams can fight it out when they meet in the Dominion finals. After all, it adds up to good publicity no matter how you look at it.

Saturday Staff:

Jim Coleman of the Toronto Globe and Mail reports that Scotty Kennedy of bargain basement mare Omar's gift fame is trying to track down Ralph Allen in France. Ralph, the Globe's war correspondent, at latest reports was having a tough time parley-vousing and savvying the native patois of the different French districts . . . Among the many amateurs getting tryouts in the N.H.L. this winter is Leroy MacDonald who gallivanted with St. Francis Xavier University in Antigonish, N.S., last winter. Detroit Red Wings are trying him. . . there has been much talk about formation of a semi-pro baseball setup in Ontario next year, but Bill (Niagara Falls) Gaynon cautions against excessive speed in any such setup, with an eye to the post-war needs of the game, would be much more reasonable. His point is that good Canadian amateurs will be available after the war, and it would be inadvisable to open the gates for numerous imports from the U. S. that they couldn't pay for when the easy money of war industry isn't available any longer...

London, Oct. 7 —(CP)— Great crowds watch "secret" racing in Britain weekly despite the government's wartime ban on all but a skeleton list of regular tracks.

These unofficial meets, however, are not of the "black market" variety. They are promoted haphazard by small local, syndicates for their own profit. They are outside any governing association, have their own rules and usually are held in farmer's fields. Sometimes an old racecourse is taken over for a day or two.

Promoters generally aren't too inclined to talk of their activities for fear of possible government action but South Wales and Shropshire are among the principal areas where these "secret" meets are held. Crowds of anywhere up to 1,000 are no exception.

Promoters usually consist of three or four local citizens who subscribe a few hundred dollars and hire a farmer's field for something like $175 a day. Local farmers and stables are invited to enter horses and there never is a shortage of runners. The jockey question, too, is solved easily.

A course is roped off and a marquee forms the remainder of the equipment, except for a farm cart to accommodate the judge and perhaps another for the starter. The usual admission charge ranges around 50 cents. Some of the meetings boast an exclusive betting ring —exclusive in that admission costs $2.25.

The wagering business has been so good that fairly-important bookmakers sometimes pass up regular race meetings at, say, Ascot or Windsor, to "go flapping," as it is called.

Perhaps no cricketer in Britain can match the record of Frederick Eacock who, at 71, plays regularly each week for Brighton Nomads. He has been playing regularly with that played at school.

In his latest game Eacock bowled right through the innings, a total of three hours, and said later that he "wouldn't miss my weekly game for the worlds." He was a blacksmith and railway forgeman until retirement six years ago.

This season the venerable cricketer has claimed 63 wickets, a feat he performed 55 years ago when his average a wicket was four runs.

The British Broadcasting Corporation brought out a modern version of an old theme when it posted this notice in its London headquarters.

"Notice To Staff: Members of the staff desirous of attending funerals, Sunday School outings, choir festivals, etc., must apply before 10 o'clock on the morning of the match."

Ivan Rasputin To Meet Wagner In Main Bout

Riding on the crest of four consecutive wins in the last month, Ivan Rasputin, the mad Russian of the wrestling ring, nibbled off a tough morsel for his Hume Arena appearance next week when "Ivan the Beard" tackles Bob "Strangler" Wagner, the Oregon Octopus, whose wrestling tactics are as shady as those of Rasputin.

The Mad Russian pulled a new ruse out of the bag to beat "Whipper" Watson when "Ivan the hairy-one" played possum to subsequently drop kick the pride of East York into the first row of the reserve section. Of course Rasputin's "there's tacks in that thar canvas" wouldn't exactly appeal to a ring-worn veteran like "Strangler" Bob Wagner, the claimant to the Pacific Coast title. Actually Wagner possesses a neat bagfull of wrestling tricks himself which should make matters even on that score next Wednesday night.

Otherwise Promoter Frank Tunney has "Irish Jack" Kennedy, the St. Louis speedball artist, to meet John "Fingers" Katan while Krippler" Davis, the Texas badman, meets Pierre DeGlane.

Slight Mistake.

An Irishman entered a barber's shop for a shave. After he was seated and the lather applied, the barber was called to the adjoining room, where he was detained. The barber had in the shop a pet monkey which caused amusement by imitating its master. As soon as the barber had quitted the room the monkey seized the shaving brush, dipped it in the lather and proceeded to apply it to the Irishman's face. When that operation was finished to the monkey's satisfaction, the little animal picked up a razor, and, after stropping it, turned to Pat to shave him.

"Stop that!" cried Pat firmly, sitting erect. "Ye can tuck the towel in me neck, and put the soap on me face, but, begorrah, yer father's got to shave me!"

Rugby Ramblings.

We observe where Bowmanville High School, Oshawa, Peterborough and Lindsay collegiates have once again grouped together in a Lake Shore Senior Interscholastic football group. They open their interscholastic grid season with all squads playing tomorrow. There was no mention in dispatches as to whether or not the group had affiliated with the C.O.S.S.A. or not. In the event the Lake Shore schools do return to the provincial interscholastic football wars both the Belleville Collegiate and St. Michael's Academy will have to sharpen up their 12-man fo[illegible]ll diet. Incidentally Jimmie D[illegible]l, now associated with the Provincial Police here, has expressed his willingness to assist in the coaching of a 12-man interscholastic team in Belleville. Jimmie played middle wing with the famed Sarnia Imperials prior to enlisting with the R.C.A.F.

However, with an 18-game six-man interscholastic schedule facing them, local secondary school gridders will not have too much time to devote to practising the conventional game.

Time is Now.

For the past three years the six-man interscholastic football game has served its purpose in the Bay of Quinte area, as it helped to keep the grid game alive when school boys were enlisting in 1940 to '43. During this period the majority of secondary schools abandoned football from their sports program, that is with the exception of the Quinte district schools who used the abbreviated six-man game to supplant the regular rugby football game. With the Lake Shore schools coming back into the picture with strong interscholastic teams this fall, especially in the junior series, Quinte district schools should not be left behind, but rather climb aboard the interscholastic rugby football band wagon, especially in the junior series. Apparently school heads feel the drain on students to the armed services has passed its peak so interscholastic sports are on the march once again. Belleville schools, all three of them, should not be left behind and the only way to keep in the parade is in the sponsoring of school team sports in the junior series for the duration at least.

Softball Siftings.

For the information of the softball fans the score of the Belleville at Fort Erie Intermediate O.A.S.A. final game at Fort Erie today will be posted on the Ontario Intelligencer bulletin board late this afternoon in order to acquaint the fans with the result prior to the return game here on Monday afternoon. The SACO "Marines" left for Fort Erie by motor Friday evening, arriving in the border town shortly before noon today. No advance notice as to the relative strength of the Fort Erie team, as compared to Eastern Ontario clubs, could be obtained, but the Marines feel they eliminated a better than average team when they pushed the Toronto winners out. Jim Hunter will pitch the series for the Marines, although "Elongated Jim" has been idle for some weeks. No doubt the largest softball crowd of the year will welcome the returning softballers here on Thanksgiving Day.

Incidentally the Columbian Squires pushed off for Windsor and the Junior O.A.S.A. finals, which open in the border city tomorrow. Bulletin board service will be carried on this series also.

Remember When . . .

Christy Mathewson, immortal pitcher of the New York Giants, died at Saranac Lake, N.Y., 19 years ago today. Baseball then mourned one of the greatest hurlers in its history in the passing of the great "Matty." Mathewson was the victim of galloping tuberculosis.

Everything Goes.

Local wrestling fans have seen everything of late. They saw the defeat of Frank Sexton, who hadn't bitten the wrestling ring dust in over two years anywhere. Also they saw "Whipper" Watson beaten the other night and that's something in the muscle-bending business. For good measure the fans saw Referee Cliff Fox manhandled by the crowd with a woman beating knots on his noggin with her shoe. Now skipper Frank Tunney comes along and announces he's signed Ivan (the be-haired Russian apeman) to meet Bob (the really strangles 'em) Wagner. The outcome of this meeting just couldn't be predicted.

Picks Ty Cobb.

Dunninger, the mental wizard, turned to baseball on a recent CBS program, asking listeners to write down the names of Cobb, Gehrig, Ruth, Speaker and Mathewson. They were then told to concentrate on one name of the five, and to mail their replies. When a sealed envelope was opened on the program of the following week, the name of Cobb was disclosed. The response from listeners revealed that 46 per cent had given the name of Cobb, 18 per cent Gehrig and the remainder were divided among Speaker, Ruth and Mathewson.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 500

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

An eternal cry-angle in bridge is your first response to your partner's opening bid. Should you first reply in your suit, or your partner's, or no trump? Should it be without a jump or with?

Every response depends on its mate; the opening. Because each type of opening bid calls for its own peculiar brand of help. And the first answer usually includes some sort of signal, too.

The order of bids is guided by T-A-N. Takeout is first choice. Assist is second. No trump is last. This order may be abandoned only when a signal in the opening asks for a signal in the reply.

For instance, an opening bid of one is a normal bid. It does not contain a signal that asks for a signal. So, the order of choice of responses thereto always follows T-A-N.

On the other hand, an opening two bid contains a signal that asks for a signal. It asks partner to abandon T-A-N and bid no trump to deny having a sure trick for slam help.

An opening three bid also contains a signal that asks for a signal. It asks partner to abandon T-A-N and assist to deny having two sure tricks for slam help.

Have at this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠A Q J 10 4 3 2
♥A
♦10 3
♣A Q 3
NORTH
♠K 9 8 7
♥7 4
♦A K 2
♣8 5 4 2

South opens with three spades. It signals partner to assist to four spades if he has not two sure tricks. However, with two sure tricks, north follows the order of responses in T-A-N.

North has no biddable suit for a takeout. If he assists he says he has not two sure tricks. So, his first reply is three no trump. Not because he wants to play it there. But to show two sure tricks.

With that information, south is now sitting in the golden seat. He can bid four spades. Or he can probe for slam. That's up to him.

If you think a slam is present, don't just sit there looking pleasant.

Moore Can Thank Angelo Giuliani For His Chance

St. Louis, Oct. 7 (AP)—If Gene (the Spinx) Moore, St. Louis Browns outfielder, ever speaks more than three words at a time—his record at present—he might thank Angelo Giuliani for a share in the world series currency.

It was Giuliani who told Clark Griffith owner of the Washington Senators, last spring, that he didn't appreciate being traded from a likely pennant-winner to a sure loser. He would quit baseball, Giuliani averred, rather than play with the lowly Browns.

The "Old Fox" had to send the Browns another ball player in lieu of the recalcitrant receiver, who had been swapped for Rick Ferrell, another backstop. Griffith sent the 38-year-old outfielder.

Today Moore is swatting the world series ball at a .333 rate and has been the front man in three of the four Browns' rallies in the first three games of the all-St. Louis fracas.

Notes on Series

St. Louis, Oct. 7 — (AP) — Harry Brecheen, today's Cardinal pitching nominee, appeared in three of the five world series contests last year, but hurled only 3 1/2 innings. He was the losing pitcher in one of the games.

During the first three games, hungry fans have consumed more than three tons of peanuts, more than 100,000 hot dogs, almost 5,000 cases of beer, and 8,000 cases of soft drinks.

The Browns have scored 10 runs in four innings of the first three games. Every run has crossed the plate after two were out in an inning, and in every scoring frame but one, there wasn't a batter on base before two weeks out.

Dennis Barkley, 17-Years-Old To Tend Twine

Toronto, Oct. 7 (CP)—Short, curly headed Dennis Barkley, 17-year-old junior, will carry the load in the nets for New Westminster Salmonbellies when they meet St. Catharines Athletics here tonight in the first game of the best-of-five series for the Canadian lacrosse championship.

Fresh from winning the British Columbia title and a 20-4 victory over an all-star service team at Winnipeg, Salmonbellies expressed confidence they would retain the Mann Cup which they won last year by defeating Mimico-Brampton Combines.

'Bellies are making their 17th appearance in a Mann Cup final and bidding for their 10th title. Athletics are making their seventh appearance and bidding for their fourth title.

Both teams have high-scoring records for the past season and prospects are that the series will be tight from start to finish.

In Manhattan

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Oct. 7 —(CP)— Sometimes a play comes along which is so skilfully written, so well acted and so suited in treatment and subject-matter to current tastes, that it has "hit" written all over it in Neon lights.

Rose Franken's "Soldier's Wife," starring the lustrous Martha Scott, is such a play. It opened at the Golden Theatre this week and will be on Broadway for some time to come, or practically every critic in town is hideously mistaken.

Argument of the play is that when a soldier is invalided home, his readjustment to civilian life—despite a loving wife, understanding relatives, a job with a future and an unexpected stroke of financial good fortune—will be enormously difficult.

All this is obvious enough and could be the basis for either a weighty study in sociology or a not-so-weighty comedy with a happy ending. Miss Franken has chosen the latter treatment.

Miss Scott scores heavily in a role that fits her half-adolescent, wholly-adult personality, and Myron McCormick plays opposite her just as neatly.

Frieda Inescort and Lili Darvas give excellent support and Glenn Anders contributes a superb bit of Neo-Lonsdalin drawing room comedy.

"Men To The Sea," a timely and sometimes powerful drama of war-time wives whose husbands are overseas, opened at the National Tuesday.

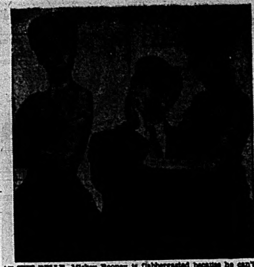
Action takes place in a Brooklyn boarding house among five girls who were married at the height of the United States' war hysteria following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. How their marriages make out with their husbands absent is considered without sidestepping.

It's not a pretty play, and may not have enough to get it by in a town where tastes in the theatre do not always seem to run to good drama. It's a worthwhile play for anyone who likes his poison strong.

"The Odds On Mrs. Oakley," opening at the Cort early in the week, is a farce about horse-racing which seems likely to finish out of the money.

It involves a divorced couple who undertake alternative custody of a horse which wins in the wife's silks but can't do a thing for the husband.

The play has the germ of an amusing idea but is handled in a humdrum manner. It is not one of the more important events of the season.



AT THE BELLE—Mickey Rooney is flabbergasted because he can't tell Lynn Wilde from her sister Lee. They are both in "Andy Hardy's Blonde Trouble," the funniest of the series. All the favorites are in the cast as well as Bonita Granville and Herbert Marshall.

Ottawa, Oct. 7 —(CP)— More than 7,000 Canadians, who have no interest in the war, politics or taxes and live in country no one else would have as a gift, are causing some concern these days.

Recent reports from the north say that new cases of tuberculosis have been found among Eskimos examined by government doctors. The cases have been reported in widely-separated parts of the north.

With the memory of what tuberculosis has done among Indians, government authorities feel considerable anxiety. The Eskimos are a wandering people and hunters suffering from the disease may carry it to remote encampments where there is no likelihood of doctors ever encountering the victims.

The few tuberculosis cases discovered among Eskimos in the past usually have been among natives living near posts and in association with white men. The latest reports indicate that active, independent natives have contracted the disease.

Treatment facilities at present are limited as northern hospitals are not designed to care for patients over a long period. Moving Eskimos to southern institutions might do more harm than good as they claim the Arctic weather suits them best. The development of northern sanitoria in the future may be necessary.

Women: The Dominion Cabinet has no woman member but women have had their part in the business of state during the war years. Cabinet ministers are always ready to admit their dependence on the ability, the memories and the diplomacy of their private secretaries.

Take the top war departments. Defence Minister Ralston has Miss O. J. Waters as his private secretary, Navy Minister Macdonald has Miss Doris L. Bently and Air Minister Power has Miss I. Gough.

Laden with the cares of financing the war, Finance Minister Ilsley has the assistance of Miss A. L. Wickwire.

Most other ministers get along with the help of mere men.

LOUISVILLE WINS FIRST GAME OF JUNIOR SERIES

Baltimore Threatened to Tie up Contest With Rally in Ninth

SCORE IS 5-3

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 7 — (AP) — Louisville's American Association Colonels will clash with Baltimore Orioles in the second contest of the junior world series here tonight after edging the International League squad 5-3 in the opener of the best-of-seven set last night.

Mel Deutsch probably will be assigned to the mound by the Colonels tonight. Frank Embree is Baltimore's probable starting pitcher.

An Oriole rally in the ninth inning which threatened to tie last night's contest was discouraged by hurler Jim Wilson, with the help of relief pitcher Si Simonds.

Simonds fanned Lou Kahn, a pinch hitter, and forced Hal Kleine to roll out, thereby saving the victory for Wilson over loser Ambrose (Bobo) Palica, Johnny Podgajny and Kleine.

Besides spreading his hits until the late uprising, Wilson doubled and scored in the third to help his mates along. Catcher Fred Walters, who cracked three singles, figured in three of the early Colonel runs.

Sherm Lollar's double and eventual tally broke Wilson's shutout in the eighth. He doubled in the final frame to score Howie Moss, who had doubled, and Dellx Mack, who had walked. Simonds' relieving then took effect.

CHAPTER 16

The nurse suspected nothing the next morning when Ann professed great interest in Miss Drew's little niece who was acting in a school play near New London.

"I wouldn't think of your missing the performance for worlds, Miss Drew. I'm perfectly all right to be left alone. I've been outdoors for two days now. I'm practically well. Besides, Emma Jeeves is here. I can always call on her, you know, if I need anything."

Miss Drew hesitated, full of conflict. Susie was to be Little Miss Muffet in her theatrical world debut via Consolidated School District No. 9's Spring exercises. Susie was the apple of Miss Drew's eye.

"If you're sure—" she murmured.

Ann was sure. Miss Drew, overcome with gratitude, went about the job of leaving everything so that it would run like clockwork during her absence.

The mainspring of Miss Drew's carefully planned clockwork went out of kilter as her car left the driveway. Ann looked at her watch. She would have none too much time.She rang the bell for Emma Jeeves.

"We'll be ready to leave in twenty minutes," she announced, when Emma's towel-wrapped head peered in at the door. Emma was dusting and when Emma dusted she always wrapped a towel about her head, on the theory, Ann supposed, that even if you noticed no difference in the room when she was finished, you would know that she had been dusting.

"Ready to leave for where?" Emma Jeeves' New England caution evidenced itself. "Didn't know as you was supposed to be allowed out. Nurse didn't anything about it."

"Maybe the nurse didn't, but what about the doctor!" Ann quibbled shamelessly. "Best thing in the world for me. Get in the car and go for a nice drive with you."

"Well, a nice drive might help." Emma whipped the towel from her head with alacrity. She didn't like dusting, anyway.

Fortunately Ann had worn the smartest of her tweed suits the day she'd come down sick.

"Where do we go?" Emma asked, as she squared herself importantly before the wheel of Ann's car.

"Oh, just down this road a bit."

The car started forward jerkily. Ann repressed a smile as she glanced at Emma's life-and-death grip on the wheel.

Upon reaching the broad straight concrete, Emma let herself go. Ann watched the speedometer crawl all the way up to thirty-five before it hovered to a stop. She watched Emma's face. She thought, I could take her all the way into New York and she wouldn't see anything but the pavement in front of her.

"Give her a little more gas, Emma," she coaxed. "It's fun to drive fast."

"My old flivver won't go no faster'n this. I never drove a car as good as yours."

This was rare praise for Ann's old coupe. "Let her out," she invited. "I'll bet she'll do as high as sixty with a good driver."

Emma let her out. The needle hovered at fifty. Her eyes glistened with excitement. Plain, stolid Emma Jeeves was transformed into a thing of force and power, a Yankee Valkyrie mounted on an iron steed. As they crossed the Connecticut to guide her. Ten miles away from line, Ann began unostentatiously Crestview, the cross-roads were marked Puppy Sweepstakes, and a big red arrow pointed left. Emma observed, "We ought to be circling pretty well back to home. This has been quite a drive for your first day out."

"We might stop off at some friends of mine who live here. I could stretch a bit," Ann suggested brazenly, as the red arrows made an abrupt right-hand turn into a private drive.

The driveway was long, winding and impressive. But even the driveway did not prepare Ann for what was disclosed when they drove over the brow of the hill.

Crestview was one of those enormous pseudo-English manorial establishments that you read about in books but hardly ever believe are real.

"Drive over that way, not up to the house." Ann guided Emma toward a meadow where five or six hundred cars were parked—limousines with chauffeurs in livery, old jalopies beside which her own coupe need not cringe or develop an inferiority complex, and a collection representing the entire history of the development of the station wagon.... All in all, it was a fine cross-section of democracy. "So this is the dog business?" Ann mused.

"Your friends must be giving a party," Emma said dryly. She was recovering from her orgy of speed and was beginning to orient herself. "Seems you put something over on me. Seems we're pretty far from home."

"Oh, we can't be too far," Ann offered airily, and added under her breath, "not more than half the state of Connecticut, anyway."

"A drive is one thing, but you shouldn't be walking around," Emma fretted as Ann stepped out of the car.

"I won't be long," she promised. "You wait here."

Ann started to thread her way toward a huge tented area in gay red and white canvas. A mad din of barking made the signs Show Ring and Benching superfluous. She stopped to rest, because her knees suddenly felt as if they had turned into rubber. Perhaps it was foolhardy of her to have attempted so long a trip. She passed a canopy under which sandwiches and tea were being served. She hesitated. She really ought to stop for a hot drink, but Christopher had said that the Danes were to be shown at eleven-thirty. It was now almost quarter of twelve.

Still, show schedules were always delayed. Ann remembered how she'd used to wait around with her father for hours on end. "Late or not," she decided, "I need a cup of tea or I'll disgrace myself by fainting."

She approached a long table, laden with sandwiches and cakes. She heard a debutante-looking girl with a red steward's badge pinned to her dress say to a rather seedy-looking man with a brace of dogs on a leash. "I don't whether there are any dishes for dogs to drink from, but Mrs. Wain is coming over now and I'll ask her."

Ann's vision blurred as Brenda approached. In her wildest imagination, she hadn't dreamed that anyone to whom Christopher had been married would look like this. Yes, she was beautiful, in a willowy sort of way, and togged out like an English heroine at a garden party, even to a hat that threatened to become a parachute at the least gust of wind. "My dear," she cried. "It's all over! We've won!"

A little group gathered about her. The man with the brace of dogs concluded that he could find here no facilities for quenching canine thirst, and wandered away. Ann moved a little closer to the tinkling voice.

She was quite aware of her brazen eavesdropping, but it was beyond her strength to pull herself away.

"Christopher was just like an excited little boy in the ring," Brenda held forth. "It was too thrilling when the judge finally came over and gave Gretel the ribbon. Gretel is Christopher's new American bred dog, you know—the first one he's ever bought here. But with Germany—" Brenda's voice trailed off expressively.

Ann felt for a chair. It was like reading a telegram: you get the bad news the second time you go over it. The information trickled slowly into her consciousness with the echo of Brenda's words. Rowdy had lost!

The show lost its excitement, its urgency. As in a fog, she heard one of the women say, "Brenda darling, why this sudden interest in dogs? You sound like a professional!"

Someone else laughed.

Ann felt sick. The teacup rattled on the saucer. She got to her feet. She had only one desire: to get as far away from Crestview as she could. It had been an insane impulse to come here in the first place.

A hand caught at her arm as she made her way toward the gate. "Say, look who's here, will you, Carol?"

She turned to see Paul Freund and his wife smiling at her. "Oh, hello," she said as cheerily as she could.

"Hello yourself!" said Paul. "I thought you were home in bed with a trained nurse!"

"I am," Ann assured him earnestly. "Pease don't for a minute think I'm not, or tell anyone else that I'm not."

"You ought to be spanked," chided Carol. "Honestly, that's terrible! You as white as a ghost."

Carol didn't look any too well herself, Ann thought fleetingly. She was much too thin.

"Wasn't it a shame about Rowdy?" Carol continued.

Ann nodded.

"Tough break," Paul agreed. "Well, that's dog business. You lose today and win tomorrow. She's a swell pup anyway.... Listen," he broke off, "I'm going to put you in your car, and no nonsense! Carol's right. You're ill."

Back at Broadfields, Ann toppled into bed—grateful to be there, grateful to have gotten there before Miss Drew returned from seeing her little niece sit on a crumpet or whatever it was that little Miss Muffet sat on.

Miss Drew immediately discerned the shadows beneath her patient's eyes, but she decided that the first few days out of bed were always fatiguing. Ann gathered that Emma true to promise extracted would not tell.

Ann must have drowsed off into a long nap, because when she wakened to the crunch of gravel as a car drove up the drive, it was quite dark. Then there was the yapping of dogs, and Christopher's firm tread along the flagged path to the house.

She was tempted to play possum and pretend to be asleep; but instead she called, "Come in," in answer to a light knock on her door.

There was a rush of dog to her side—dog that smelled of fragrant brilliantine. She put her hand out in the dark. "Turn up the lights," she invited Christopher.

"You look fagged," he observed.

"Fagged, nothing! Just the strain of having my dog go to ashow."

"Well," he told her robustly, "the best medicine in the world for anybody is a dose of good news." He whipped a large blue ribbon out of his pocket. "While you lay here sulking all day, look what your dog went and did."

"You mean she won?" She bit at her tongue to keep from contradicting him, which only would have let the cat out of the bag.

"The ribbon speaks for itself," he offered with modest duplicity.

"It doesn't speak loud enough. I want to hear more," she said maliciously.

"Well, she won."

Ann sat up, and reached for her comb and compact.

"That says something, but not enough. What kind of a win was it? Did she have any competition? Was she alone in her class?"

"Of course, not."

"You mean that she beat Gretel?" Ann was determined to show him no mercy.

"Beat her to a frazzle," he insisted manfully.

"Well, I knew she would. She's Christopher fidgeted with his the better dog." cigarette lighter. Ann reserved her sharpest barb for the end.

"I want to say this for you." She forced magnanimity into her voice. "You're a swell loser. If my dog were beaten, I only wish that I could take it as well as you do."

"I know," she took up glibly. "Oh, you lose today—"

"and you win tomorrow."

Little Benny's Note Book

We were having physiology in school and Miss Kitty asked Puds Simkins how many bones are in the lower leg, and Puds said, Do you mean about how many?

Oh very well, about how many? Miss Kitty said, and Puds said, About the same in everybody.

There is nothing funny about stupidity, Miss Kitty said. In fact stupidity is a form of affliction, and it is very impolite to laugh at the afflictions of others, and I'm sure we all know that politeness never hurts anyone. Why, mere politeness alone has made the entire French nation famous. Can any boy in this class even imagine a circumstance where politeness wouldn't do more good than harm? she said.

Which Humfree Bond waved his hand, saying, If you were so polite you wouldn't get in a elevator as long as you could see somebody else coming so you could leave them get in first, the elevator would keep on getting full and going up without you, and you might keep on standing there doing that till you starved to death.

And on the other hand you might not, Miss Kitty said, and Raymin Levy waved his hand, saying, Suppose you started to drownd in the ocean with a cramp and you were too polite to yell for help because you didn't want to get the other people on the beach all excited?

As long as we're supposing, can't somebody suppose something sensible? Miss Kitty said, and Shorty Judge waved his hand, saying, Suppose a mosquito got on your nose and you were so polite you waited for him to get off instead of trying to smack him off, he'd probably give you a good sting before he decided to get off, because he wouldn't be as polite as you.

Such a class, we'll resume the physiology lesson, Miss Kitty said. Which we did.

HOLIDAY WEATHER

Toronto, Oct. 7 (CP).—The Weather Bureau last night predicted "generally fair and warm" weather conditions for the Thanksgiving holiday week-end in Ontario, with the possibility that there may be occasional rain. The temperature, however, will be warm.

A Weekly Column Devoted to the Activities of the Members of the Armed Services at Home and Abroad

By G. H. C.

"I see by the papers, Bill," said the grizzled veteran of the last war to his red-bereted pal while they were waiting to move off on parade, "that the young squirts overseas are chewing on hardtack in the advance in Normandy and France."

"Yeah, I noticed that myself," replied his First Div. buddy, shifting his tobacco cud to the port cheek.

"Wasn't bad stuff, that wasn't," commented the first GWV. "For one thing, it made good fires when the quarterbloke wasn't stikin' his nose around."

"Hmmm", ruminated his mate, stroking a stubbly chin, "I remember back in 1916...."

★ ★ ★

The Canadian Field Battery had camped for the night after a forced march from Ypres to the Somme. Ahead in the fading light was the Albert Cathedral, its Leaning Virgin partially obscured in a summer mist. To the northward, German gunflashes lighted the horizon that was Bapaume, Courcelette, the sunken road....and beyond.

Wagon lines had been established. Guns were under cover. The troops had dined on "Mr. McConachie" and a suet pudding? concocted by Battery Cook Slim Avery, Toronto, from purloined flour and judiciously purchased raisins. It had a grayish color, probably coaxed by boiling water from the "greyback" shirt commandeered for service as a pudding cloth. It had little dark specks, too, that a housewife would hardly classify as caraway seeds.

Night settled over the little French village. Gunners sought out estaminets, Sergeants were already there, huddled around little tables over biere Francais and a spot of cognac.

Butch Jones and Tich Carter, battery signals, sat quietly at a table. After the third goblet of "vin blink" Butch yawned. "T'hell with this. I'm goin' to hit the hay. Carter nodded and the two friends left the estaminet.

A few minutes later they were crawling up a ladder to a disused haymow in a ruined barn. Figures sprawled in the hay, some sleeping, others reading or writing by the dim light of candle stubs horizontally on the walls of the building.

In the flickering light, the two gunners selected their "beds" unrolled their blankets, and settled for the night.

★ ★ ★

A silvery moon shone down on the little village. Inside the ruined barn a nasal cacophony echoed in the haymow. Figures stirred, moaned, and turned in their blankets. Wristwatches glowing in the darkness showed phosphorescent hands pointing at 2.30.

Butch Jones stirred in his sleep. His hand twitched as he grumbled and turned away from his sleeping comrade. A second later he stirred, half-wakened, and growled, "Go to sleep, Tich, whatinell are you botherin' me for?"

Again he stirred, and swore. Alongside, Tich slept peacefully. He had not moved.

Jones' eyes half-opened in the darkness. Then they stared. In a split second he was fully awake. He opened his mouth but no sound came forth. He tried to move his limbs, but they refused to budge. The whites of his eyes gleamed as they rested on a shadowy figure nearby. A shaft of moonlight pierced a crack in the ruined barn wall, and shone athwart his body. Terror seized him.

On his chest, biting at the upper left hand pocket of his khaki tunic, sat the largest rat he had ever seen. Filthy, emanating a rank odor, shapeless socket where one eye had been and one of its forelegs a hanging stump, the rodent, as large as a house-cat sat quietly, endeavoring to tear away part of the tunic pocket. Then it looked up — moved closer to Butch's face.

That was enough. An ear-piercing shriek tore itself from his throat. Within a minute the barn was in an uproar.

The huge rat, leering horribly, leaped from Butch's chest, and scampered away to its lair. Matches flared in the mow.

Gunners swore, muttering about the bad effects of "vin blink" They laughed at the story. It took Butch three days to convince them of the truth and this was done only with the supporting evidence of the chewed tunic.

• • •

"And that was the last time," said the veteran to his red-bereted pal as they swung along Front St. in the Fair parade, "I carried a chunk of hardtack in my upper left tunic pocket."

Thanksgiving with

Not just for today but for the Future
Let us give thanks. For now the picture clears,
And through the smoke and steel of battle,
[illegible] surging, fighting shapes of men,
Is [illegible] of a finer world.

It's been a hope so long—a desperate dream
Tagged with the label "wishful thinking."
Those days are gone. Washed out by blood,
Wiped out by fire at Cherbourg, Caen,
Falaise and Paris, France.

Not yet the end—too soon for that.
But signposts leading to the end
Read Naples, Rome and Florence,
Marseilles, Toulouse and Lyon,
Jassi, Grodno, Brest-Litovsk.

Along these ways the future can be glimpsed
With liberation for the trodden lands,
Four shining freedoms for humanity—
And for proud homes a soldier coming back
To make the ring of happiness complete.

And so—when we sit down this day
The family table with its vacant seat,
Anxiety still at our board,
Let's look beyond—to a shining future
And most of all for that, give thanks.

CANADIANS PUSH INLAND ON SCHELDE ESTUARY

Make Amphibious Landing To Crush German Pocket

Americans Issue Ultimatum To Nazi Garrison at Aachen

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army, Oct. 10 —(CP Cable)— Canadian infantry pushed inland from their beachhead on the south shore of the Schelde estuary today and also surged west along the Dutch coast to move into the town of Hooldplaat, as other Canadians extended the Leopold canal bridgehead.

This two-pronged operation to destroy the Germans in the Schelde pocket south of the estuary was going satisfactorily.

After a gallant stand by Western Canada infantry on the Leopold canal in which 30 separate counter-attacks were repelled in four days, these same Westerners took the offensive late yesterday and have extended the Leopold bridgehead.

It now has a depth of at least 400 yards at its narrowest point, and troops are closing in on the main road leading north to Aardenburg. There now is no fear that the canal will be lost.

Nazis Take Severe Beating.

The Germans took a severe beating in their efforts to throw the Canadians back into the canal.

All the battalion commanders who have led troops in this battle say it was the hardest fighting they have known in this campaign.

Landing by the backdoor of the pocket seems to have caught the enemy more by surprise than was at first thought.

The Germans did not have many troops in that area and they have been throwing in line-of-communication troops to try to stop the Canadian advances. These are not part of the crack 64th Division which battled so savagely along the Leopold canal.

The beachhead gained in this amphibious landing now has an average depth of 3,500 yards and is about 5,000 yards wide. Enemy guns are still shelling from Walcheren and South Beveland across the Schelde from the beachhead.

R.A.F. craft attacked these guns and observation posts yesterday and heavy Canadian guns also pounded the positions in counter-battery shoots.

No Signs of Withdrawal.

Inside the pocket there still is a considerable German force which has not been committed. The enemy shows no signs of withdrawing from the pocket to Walcheren or South Beveland, and there is no chance the pocket can be reinforced.

On the Canadian sector north of Antwerp German opposition stiffened as infantry and tanks began to push beyond the neck of the spit which runs out to South Beveland and Walcheren.

The road leading from the spit to Bergen op Zoom three miles to the north is not cut yet although it is dominated by Canadian infantry and armor within 400 yards of it.

German tanks have appeared on this sector and yesterday two tanks —or self-propelled guns which looked much like tanks — were knocked out.

On the Tilburg sector the Germans are not so aggressive against British and Polish troops of the 1st Canadian Army, but the enemy continued his feverish efforts to build defences around Tilburg.

By DON WHITEHEAD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Outside Aachen, Oct. 10—(AP) — A doomed city lies before the United States 1st Army. Aachen is under paper bombardment from our 105 millimetre guns which are hurling 200 shells which burst in the air and tell German soldiers and civilians they must surrender within 24 hours or see Aachen obliterated.

Time is running out for Aachen. The messengers demanding its unconditional surrender have been back from their mission for two hours and there has been no reply from the city. A chill autumn rain slants down on its old structures.

There was no middle course for the Nazi commander, whose troops were dug into the rubble of the ancient capital of Charlemagne on orders of Hitler to stand and die in its defence.

After the ultimatum was delivered to the Commander and the Mayor, leaflets were dropped into the city by shellfire declaring the time had come for honorable surrender. The message urged civilians to persuade those responsible to "stop the useless bloodshed and destruction."

Completely Surrounded

"The city of Aachen is now completely surrounded by American forces who are sufficiently equipped with both air power and artillery to destroy the city if necessary. We shall take the city either by receiving its immediate unconditional surrender or by attacking and destroying it.

"While unconditional surrender will require the surrender of all armed bodies, the cessation of hostile acts of every character, the removal of mines and prepared demolitions, it is not intended to molest the civil population or needlessly sacrifice human lives. But if the city is not promptly and completely surrendered unconditionally, the American army ground and air forces will proceed ruthlessly with air and artillery bombardment to reduce it to submission."

Close Aachen Pincers.

London, Oct. 10 (AP)—American 1st Army infantry closed the Aachen pincers with a web of machine-gun fire today and built up pressure on a 25-mile front from six to 10 miles inside Germany for a break-through into the industrial Rhineland.

The British 2nd army beat off a sharp counter-attack on the Netherlands salient west of Arnhem between the Waal and Neder Rhine, activity was reported.

The jaws of the U. S. salient on Aachen could be considered closed, Associated Press War Correspondent Don Whitehead reported, as it would be impossible for the Germans to escape in large numbers through direct fire of American gunners.

CHURCHILL TALKS WITH STALIN ON EUROPEAN FRONT

Views Expressed Were Fully Endorsed by Roosevelt at Quebec Conference

EDEN IN MOSCOW

Moscow, Oct. 10 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill talked with Marshal Stalin for three hours in the Kremlin Monday night and conferred today with the British diplomatic and military staff before starting a second meeting with the Russian Premier.

W. Averell Harriman, United Stats Ambassador was kept fully informed by the British delegation, although he was not present at the Kremlin last night.

Mr. Churchill was understood to be presenting his views on questions in Europe and elsewhere—views which were said to have been fully endorsed before he left the Quebec conference with President Roosevelt.

Latest indications were that his visit would last throughout this week.

His presence in Moscow coincided with two important statements in the Russian press. One expressed flat opposition to altering the principal of a unanimous vote by the four major Allied powers on the International Security Council, in case of agression. The other statement described a Russian plan for developing oil resources in the northern part of Iran.

Controlled a Century.

Some fields of Iran have been controlled by Britain for more than a century. The country now is occupied jointly by British troops in the south and Russians in the north.

One obvious topic of the Churchill-Stalin conversation, was the details of final defeat and occupation of Germany. Another was the general outline of post-war Europe. The possibility was not excluded that the exchange of opinions would include other areas of the world.

Isvestia, praising the Dumbarton Oaks plan for international security, stoutly supported the principle of a unanimous four-power agreement on cases of aggression, declaring:

"The experience of the League of Nations proved useless its talk about high purposes without the guarantee of full harmony and co-ordination among the leading powers, both in the adoption of decisions dictated by the interests of the small nations and in putting these decisions into effect."

FLYING BOMBS HURLED

London, Oct. 10 — (CP) — For the fifth consecutive night, the Germans fired flying bombs against southern England last night as the rescuers still dug for dead and injured in debris caused by Sunday night's raids.

MUST EXPECT SINGING

Indianapolis, Oct. 10 (AP)—Judge John L. Niblack today dismissed a charge of disorderly conduct against a patron by a tavern operator who complained of the patron's singing, when he ruled: "When a person sells beer which is likely to make his customers drunk he can expect singing. If he doesn't want people to sing he shouldn't sell them beer."

Germany's Fate in Next Three Weeks Rests With Three Soviet Marshals

By JOHN KIMCHE
Reuter Military Correspondent

Zurich, Switzerland, Oct. 10 (CP—Reuters)—It is a great mistake to judge the course of the war, and its possible duration, solely by what is happening in Western Europe. A successful break-through into the northern German plain or into the valley of the main in south Germany may decide the war.

But during the next three weeks it is more likely that Germany's fate rests in the hands of three Soviet Marshals: Petrov, Malinovski and Tolbukhin.

On Germany's southeastern front the pattern is almost complete with 16 Soviet armies disposing 120 divisions on the edge of the Hungarian plain.

They are faced by the Carpathian passes, the key towns of Cluj and Oradea, and by the fortress of Belgrade, for which the battle has started.

The 20 divisions of the Hungarian army have been mustered in strength; exceptionally large numbers of German troops have been brought south from Poland to act as stoppers along the decisive passes.

The Russians now are moving to the attack. They have not only mounted a great proportion of their troops down here, but they have been obtaining the maximum support of both the Rumanian and Bulgarian armies. Between them these two provide more than 30 divisions, and cancel out the presence of the Hungarians on the German side.

Armies numbering probably twice as many as those engaged in the west are being into action.

Berlin official circles seem to be conscious of the peril. For more than a week they have been talking constantly of the major offensive in the west which had started and which the Germans were holding in check. But by now the purpose of Allied strategy during the last week has become clearer, even in Berlin.

The Allies are attacking just enough to make a redisposition of the German forces impossible. So long as the attack lasts north of Aachen there will be no troops available to reinforce the Arnhem force, and the same is happening farther south round Metz, where the United States 3rd Army is pinning down the Germans and preventing their removal to a more threatened front.

This also has been happening on the Hungarian front.

It explains why the German High Command did not send troops from the east to the west. It could not do so because, in its way, the situation in the southeast was in no way less perilous than that in the west. What could be spared had to be moved to the protection of Budapest.

Plan Can Easily Fail.

For once any one of the 16 Russian armies has broke through in strength the whole German defence plan fails There are then no lines on which the enemy can fall back, and the combined weight of the Soviet, Rumanian, Bulgarian and Yugoslav troops would pass across the open plain en route for Budapest and Vienna beyond.

Such a Russian break-through not only promises immense territorial gains for the Allies, but threatens destruction of every vestige of plan that the German High Command has husbanded for the final stage of the war.

Marshal Kesselring's 27 divisions in Italy would be lost; Field Marshal Von Weich and his remaining 22 divisions in the Balkans also would be lost; all the remaining occupied and satellite states would be overrun in less than a week; Germany would be left alone with the southeastern flank open, with 70 divisions isolated from the main battlefield and with the defences built up with so much effort in Poland turned by an advance through Slovakia and Bohemia.

BRITISH, GREEK FORCES OCCUPY CITY OF CORINTH

At South End of Isthmus Linking Peloponnesus With Mainland

DRIVE TO PIRAEUS

Rome, Oct. 10 (AP)—British and Greek forces have occupied Corinth, it was announced today.

British forward units entered Corinth without opposition. Two hundred and fifty members of the collaborating Greek "security battalions" surrendered there yesterday morning. No Germans were met in the city, which is at the south end of the isthmus linking the Peloponnesus and the Greek mainland.

Meanwhile, the Allied land forces of the Adriatic began attacking Sarande, the little southern Albanian port which is a supply base for the enemy garrison on the island of Corfu.

The attack started at 4 a.m. yesterday and Allied troops quickly penetrated to the western outskirts of the town after overcoming opposition.

Another unit silenced an enemy battery and took the central defences. Then a parachute company landed and captured a second battery.

Drive For Athens

With the capture of Corinth, the Allied Command announced, land forces of the Adriatic now are in control of many communications in the Peloponnesus. A communique added that "operations continue," presumably a drive on from Corinth by British troops. Athens and Peiraievs (Pireaus) its port, are only 40 miles distant.

In the advance to the isthmus of Corinth the British found that retreating Germans had blown up bridges on the Patrai-Corinth road. However, the official Allied announcement that no Germans were encountered at Corinth itself seemed further evidence of a systematic withdrawal of some three infantry divisions which had been garrisoning Greece and other unit evacuated from the Aegean islands.

German Radio Says Hitler Stresses Determination To Fight to End

London, Oct. 10—(CP Reuter) — Hitler referred to "the hour of danger for our country," and stressed his determination to "wage this struggle with an ever-greater fanatical will" in a message quoted by the German radio today.

The message was addressed to Reich youth leader Axmann who was reported to have told Hitler that 80 per cent of the youth of Potsdam had volunteered for military service.

Hitler's message:

"In the hour of danger for our country, created by our hateful opponents, you have given a shining example of your fanatical will to sacrifice.

"The youth at the front and at home has done what has been expected of them. Hitler youths have shown their unshakeable will for victory by their exemplary deeds in the Volksgreanadier divisions and in all other ranks of the Wehrmacht.

"We know the enemy's merciless plans of annihilation and therefore we shall wage this struggle with an ever-greater fanatical will.

"You as young national socialist fighters must even exceed the whole nation's unflinching and unbendable steadfastness. The reward will be the successful conclusion of the conflict and a free future for our people."

UNPRECEDENTED DAYLIGHT SWEEP AFTER NIGHT RAID

Ruhr Steel Capital Of Bochum Hard Hit After Germans Take Year To Rebuild

BAD WEATHER

By HENRY B. JAMESON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 10 — (AP)—An unprecedented Allied daylight air offensive continued today with many formations going into action at sunrise after a heavy night attack by the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. on Bochum, Ruhr steel capital, which the Germans spent a year rebuilding after the last raid.

The British heavies, reverting to their old tactics of saturation bombing, dumped thousands of incendiaries and tons of high explosives on this German industrial city.

The last big attack on Bochum, Sept. 29, 1943, left it as shattered as any city in the battered Ruhr. The Todt Organization has been able to get some of the major industries in working order again, thus setting the stage for last night's raid.

Bochum also is a large railway centre and the area in which it lies produces about 30 per cent of all the Ruhr's coal.

While this attack was in progress Mosquitos were bombing dock installations at Wilhelmshaven. Both missions were supported by night fighters.

An Air Ministry communique listed seven aircraft as missing on all operations.

Three Canadian heavies were lost in the Bochum raid.

Bad weather over the battlefront yesterday limited ground support activity to the bombing of a railroad bridge at Euskirchen by 9th Air Force fighter-bombers, but 1,100 8th Air Force heavies from Britain, with an escort of 900 fighters, plowing through fog, attacked military targets in the Schweinfurt-Cobblenz and Main regions of southwestern Germany.

Five bombers and three fighters were lost on this three-pronged operation, one of the lightest losses ever recorded by the U. S. Air Force on a major run into Germany.

N.S.S. PREPARES PLANS WITH EYE TO THE FUTURE

Conferences Are Being Held to Discuss Methods of Rehabilitation

THREE-PHASE PROGRAM

By JACK WILLIAMS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 10—(CP)—National Selective Service now is operating on what its director, Arthur MacNamara, describes as a "double-track basis." Faced with the job of meeting a current demand for some 173,000 workers, it is at the same time paving the way for the time when it will have to switch into reverse and look for jobs instead of workers.

That time is not expected to come until after the defeat of Germany but conferences now are being held at frequent intervals between representatives of the armed forces and the labor and pensions departments. Outcome of these discussions is expected to be detailed methods of facilitating the return of men from the armed forces to civilian jobs.

The field staff of some 7,000 Selective Service and Unemployment Insurance personnel will have a basic place in the program and expectations are that it will have to be considerably enlarged. Steps are being taken to locate additional office space, particularly in larger centres.

The rehabilitation of veterans is a three-phase program. The army, navy and air force first give attention to men and women who are about to leave the services. Then the veteran has an opportunity for an interview with a Pensions Department official who outlines the plans the government has made for veterans.

Finally, the Labor Department, through the Unemployment Insurance offices, has made special arrangements for placing veterans in civilian jobs. Veterans' placement officers are being assigned to each region. These men will have an important place in the administration of the reinstatement in Civil Employment Act which requires employers to take back workers who left their employ to enter the armed forces.

ALL THE SAME MAN

Raymondville, Mo., Oct. 10—(AP)—The former Margaretmae Morgan of Los Angeles was engaged to a sailor, married to a soldier, honeymooned with a civilian and now is living with a coast guardsman. But she's faithful to Bill Hamlett. She became engaged to Bill when he was in the Navy, but his Navy enlistment expired and he was drafted into the Army. Just before being released from the Army, they were married, and went on a honeymoon as soon as he was out. He later enlisted in the Coast Guard.

Plan for World Peace Proposes Use of Force To Subdue Aggressors

Washington, Oct. 10 — (CP)—The Big Four of the United Nations yesterday made public a tentative scheme for a world peace enforcing agency backed by powerful land and sea forces and by special aerial armadas ready to jab quickly at any aggressor.

The plan proposed that a quota of air, land and sea force be pledged by each nation to be used to keep peace "on the call" of the council of the future agency and maintain air unity "immediately available."

However, the plan still lacks completion and publication at this time had the effect of summoning world opinion into council to help forge it into its final shape. One big omission was the absence of a decision on the question whether a big power, if accused of aggression, should have power to stymie any action against itself. Russia has been holding out for such veto power.

Question Left Open

A high authority declared yesterday the plan leaves open the question whether use of United States armed might will require Congressional approval each time aggression threatened. Conversations between State Secretary Hull and House of Representatives leaders will resume shortly on this point.

The plan, the outcome of conferences between the British, Americans and Russians and the British, Chinese and Americans at Dumbarton Oaks, divides the structure of the proposed organization entitled "The United Nations," into five parts.

Most powerful of these would be the 11-member "Security Council," which in effect is an executive branch.

Other proposed agencies are the "General Assembly," "International Court of Justice," "Secretariat" and "Economic and Social Council."

Permanent representation on the Security Council would be given Britain, the United States, Russia, China and eventually France, with the Assembly choosing six other nations to serve two-year terms.

Spanish Press Features Decisions

Madrid — (AP) — The Spanish press displayed the Dumbarton Oaks conference decisions prominently today and the morning newspaper Ya commented that if the plans of the four-power parley prevailed "the world may live in a long era of peace and prosperity."

"In Dumbarton Oaks, the delegates drafted plans for a kind of super-league of nations," Ya said. "Since the old Geneva organization failed, this Dumbarton plan tries to correct all the defects and faults which weakened the old league."

Two Other Armies Hurl Weight At City of Tilsit

Cut All Railway Retreat Routes Behind Germans

By DANIEL DeLUCE
Associated Press War Correspondent

Moscow, Oct. 10—(AP)—A storm of Russian artillery fire broke today on besieged Memel, German-held port on the Baltic, while to the south two Soviet armies wheeled and hurled their full weight into a drive on the East Prussian fortress city of Tilsit.

The great Baltic offensive of Gen. Ivan C. Bagramian and Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky, ripping apart the German coastal flank protecting the heart of East Prussia, matched in spectacular success the sweep of Gen. Rodio Malinovsky's forces into Northern Hungary.

There, after cutting the railway retreat routes behind the German and Hungarian forces in the Northern Transylvanian salient, the Russian spearhead thrust into the outskirts of the Magyar Military Training Centre of Debrecen. General advances on the looping front put the Russian forces within 50 miles of Budapest.

Marshal Rodion Malinovsky's northward drive across flat country appeared aimed at the Ruthenian Highlands, where a junction might be made with Col.-Gen. Ivan Petrov's 4th Ukrainian Army group on the Czechoslovak border.

Cross Tisza River.

Malinovsky's southern wing crossed the Tisza River on a wide front in Northern Yugoslaviva and swung westward in an advance which outflanked Belgrade and endangered the third largest Yugoslav city of Subotica (pop: 100,000) on the main Belgrade-Budapest railroad.

Prospects were reported good for bottling up most of the enemy forces in Transylvania and the Carpatho-Ukraine, which Hungary took from Czechoslovakia. This would permit Malinovsky to strike at Budapest from three sides.

Ferocity of the conflict was indicated in Russian reports of 202 German tanks destroyed. The Red army also claimed capture of 8,220 German and Hungarian prisoners.

Capture Railway.

Last escape route out of Transylvania was cut by the Russians with capture of a 25-mile stretch of the Debrecen-Budapest railway.

(The Berlin radio declared today the Russians had launched a new offensive in the Vistula River bend south of Warsaw. Exact locale of the reported offensive was not specified, but the Russians have held a bridgehead across the stream for some time east of Kielce. There was no immediate confirmation of the drive from Moscow.

Poor Weather Holds British To Patrol Duties

Rome, Oct. 10 — (CP) — Poor weather yesterday held British 8th Army activity to patrolling while the Allied 5th Army made only local improvements, in its positions, the Allied command announced today.

German troops yesterday counter-attacked fiercely against British and Indian units of the British 8th Army fighting to hold bridgeheads across the Fiumicino river on the Adriatic front.

Into their defence line south of Bologna they poured fresh and refitted troops in an attempt to hold off the advancing Allied 5th Army, now within heavy-gun range of that vital communications centre.

The 8th Army was reported holding a broad front on the north bank of the rain-swollen Fiumicino and had taken Monte Gattona more than a mile beyond the river and 12 miles from Rimini.

Between this advance and the sea the lower stretches of the Fiumicino — running between 30 and 35 feet wide and about five feet deep with a strong current—kept Canadian, New Zealand and Greek units bogged down in patrol action. They were reported under constant enemy shell and mortar fire.

Latest reported gains in the centre of the front brought U. S. units of the 5th Army two more miles along highway 65 to within 10 miles of the southern outskirts of Bologna. The enemy still held strong hill positions in this area.

A Thanksgiving Day service was held by Christian Science Society, in the I.O.O.F. Hall on the morning of Thanksgiving Day.

The Thanksgiving Proclamation by the Governor General of Canada was read by the First Reader. The lesson sermon for Thanksgiving Day given in the Christian Science Quarterly entitled "Thanksgiving" followed. The scriptural verses included "Make a Joyful Noise Unto The Lord, all ye lands. Enter into His gates with Thanksgiving, and into His courts with praise: be thankful unto Him and bless His name. Among citations from Science and Health was: "Are we really grateful for the good already received. Then we shall avail ourselves of the blessings we have, and thus be fitted to receive more. Gratitude is much more than a verbal expression of thanks. Action expresses more gratitude than speech." (Page 3).

Spontaneous and inspiring testimonies of healings and blessings received during the past year were then given by Christian Scientists in the congregation.

B'Nai B'Rith Show Entertains No. 6 R.D. Airmen

Another of those sparkling shows for which the B'Nai B'Rith Lodge has become war service famous thrilled a large crowd of airmen and air women at the Trenton Air Station theatre on Sunday night.

Sponsored by the Peterborough Lodge of the B'Nai B'Rith organization, the presentation headed by beautiful Pat Bailey, well-known Canadian radio vocalist, was the sixth of its kind to be offered at No. 6 R.D. and Trenton by the Jewish association.

It was a good show, well up to the calibre of previous B'Nai B'Rith productions and received the well-merited acclaim of the capacity audience.

The attractive Miss Bailey, perfectly costumed, stood out in a well-balanced sequence of variety acts. Her numbers, all of them the modern popular sweet variety, gave easy evidence of her popularity with her radio audiences. She appeared twice and generously responded to several encores.

The "Modernettes," Leone Laing, Audrey Hursey and Loreeta Knox, were a clever tap dancing trio with a number of smart routines. Lois Spence, clever blonde dancer, received a fine ovation in two whirlwind appearances, her military number being especially good.

Pat McIntosh, a Scotch comedian with a wide repertoire of ancedotes, jokes and songs, showed versatility in a second appearance as a First Great War veteran. Claire Riddel, youthful juggler, provided outstanding entertainment with his skilful manipulations of tennis bals, dumbbells and plates.

Claire Rouse, the "Musical Hobo" who produces from the cavernous proportions of his costume, a wide variety of musical instruments, and who is a Belleville favorite, gave another sterling performance. Some twenty instruments appeared as if by magic and on each, the performer showed a marked ability. He was given a fine reception on both appearances.

Hardest working member of the cast was Miss Dolly Moncreith, talented pianist who provided the accompaniment for the entire show. Introduction of the various acts was made in his breezy manner by master-of-ceremonies Sergt. Hal Shaw.

A brief address was given by Mr. I. Black, chairman of the B'Nai B'Rith War Services, of Peterborough, who expressed the pleasure of his organization in bringing these shows to armed services camps and stations. The appreciation of station personnel was voiced by a station officer who expressed the regret of Group Captain Bellirving at his inability to be present.

The cast was entertained at the officers' mess following the show.

Motor Accidents Kept to Minimum Over the Holiday

Motor accidents in Belleville were kept to a minimum over the Thanksgiving weekend despite the fact torrential rains fell.

Ernest Mott, 105 Lingham St., reported a minor accident to police Monday evening. Mr. Mott's car was in collision with a youthful cyclist at the intersection of Everett and Bridge Sts. after the motor vehicle had retarded speed in the face of traffic. The cyclist, 15-year-old William Calbury of this city, told police he only sustained a knee abrasion.

Parked Car Damaged

James Trakos, Mount Pleasant Rd., parked his sedan on Victoria Ave. the other evening. When he returned the left rear fender was found to be damaged, apparently having been struck by a passing vehicle.

Matter Amicably Settled

While George McCoy, 12 Ridley St., was backing his motor car out from the Front St. curb last evening he backed it into the face of oncoming traffic with the result a south-bound automobile driven by John Collins, 58 Geddes St., was in collision with McCoy's car. Mrs. Collins suffered from bruises, police reported. The matter of minor damages was amicably settled.

Body of Airman Found in Bay

The body of L.A.C. Pierre P. Bordeleau, 18, of the Trenton R.C.A.F. base, was found floating in the Bay of Quinte near Rednersville on Saturday. When the body was first discovered by residents of Rednersville and Provincial Police notified, some mystery surrounded the discovery, as police authorities of the district had received no information regarding a drowning or the disappearance of a person, that might suggest drowning.

Following speedy investigations, however, Provincial Police learned an airman from Trenton, Pierre P. Bordeleau, had been missing from the station for some time past. The body was later identified as that of Bordeleau by the assistant medical officer of the station. Last seen, Bordeleau had left to go swimming or boating in the bay. No inquest was deemed necessary and the body was released for burial at Ottawa, where his next of kin reside.

The body was found by Stanley Aiken of Rednersville. Dr. Thompson, county coroner, announced no inquest would be held.

Extend Campaign Another Week

Close upon the heels of the release from campaign headquarters that the fund has reached the amount of $11,000, comes word that the Belleville Community Services Campaign will be extended for another week.

With the above amount contributed in two weeks of campaigning and canvassing, campaign committeemen feel that the quota of $15,000 will be reached by the end of the current week.

All this, however, will mean additional work on their part and that of canvassers and a generous contribution on the part of those who have not as yet been contacted or who have delayed their donations for various reasons.

Those intending making donations to the fund but as yet have not done so, are urged to get in touch with campaign headquarters at the Riggs Garage, Pinnacle Street. Canvassers, this week, will speed their work of covering that part or parts of the city as yet unapproached by them. Householders are courteously requested to give their donations at the time of calling to facilitate the inevitable arrangement of many details that accumulate at the closing of such appeal for funds.

In the meantime the work of the Salvation Army; the V.O.N.; the Children's Aid Society, and the Y.M.C.A., goes on apace.

Their work, like the traditional time and tide, waits for no man. It should not be held up in any of its important phases through the lack of finances. A generous public, the committee feels sure, will not let this happen.

Time, however, is getting short. Only a few days remain until the end of the campaign. At the end of the week, campaign officials hope to point with pride to another achievement of the residents of this city. Do not let them down.

Airman Held For Car Theft

Provincial Police are holding an airman from No. 6 R. C. A. F. Repair Depot in connection with the disappearance of a 1937 model Lafayette coach from the Repair Depot last Saturday. Later the vehicle was found abandoned at the depot outside parking lot. The airman being held gave his name to O. P. P. as LAC. R. A. Smith.

Another airman, H. J. Edwards, complained to Air Force authorities on Saturday evening, that he had been held up by an airman and his Lafayette coach taken from the station parking lot. Edwards asserted he believed the man to take his car was armed. Provincial Police subsequently recovered Edwards' coach left abandoned on an outside parking lot and from descriptions given apprehended Smith and are holding him in detention barracks pending further investigation.

Later Saturday night Repair Depot authorities reported an R. C. A. F. station wagon had been stolen from the station grounds. Provincial Police answered this complaint also, but shortly after commencing their investigations the station wagon was found abandoned behind a building, where it had been apparently left by parties who became frightened.

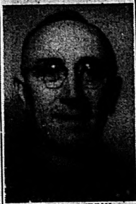
Veteran Anglican Churchman To Visit Belleville



REV. RURAL DEAN T. D. PROCTOR

Veteran churchman of the Northwest Territories and more recently of the Alaskan Highway, the Rev. Rural Dean T. D. Proctor, of the Anglican Diocese of Kootenay, will visit Belleville this weekend as part of a tour of the dioceses of Canada.

He will speak at Christ Church Parish Hall on Friday night, St. Thomas Church on Sunday morning, Oct. 15; St. John's Parish, Herkimer Ave., in the afternoon and at Christ Church at night.

Rural Dean Proctor came from England in 1913 and was ordained in Saskatoon in 1919. At one time he had 42 service centres.

In 1922 he did work along the Skeena River among Indians and whites alike. He was the first white man to be invited to the Kitwancool Reserve, which housed the last heathen tribe in British Columbia. He converted the villagers and built a large church and hall.

He built two churches and a hall in Dawson Creek before the advent of the railway and in 1932 built four more and supervised the construction of three others north of the Peace River. He organized the whole of the Peace River District of British Columbia.

Canon of St. Andrew's Cathedral, Prince Rupert, for several years, he was transferred to the Diocese of Kootenay in 1942. Rural Dean Proctor is doing deputation work for the General Synod of the Church along reconstruction and policy lines.

Christmas Parcels Return Long After Soldier Gets Home

Unintentional guests of the government on a tour of Britain and the Italian battlefronts, two parcels mailed last year to reach Private Andrew Wilson by Christmas returned to their point of origin here yesterday.

The parcels were in good shape and arrived intact. They were sent by Pte. Wilson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. "Scotty" Wilson, Dundas St., and the ladies of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. The young veteran was wounded in action, returned to Canada, discharged, and is now working in a civilian capacity.

One of the parcels arrived via the morning mail, and close on its heels came the second one in the afternoon.

Private Wilson was a member of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment overseas and was wounded while serving with that unit in Italy.

Capt. K. S. Grills Given Majority

Member of a Vancouver regiment now fighting in Belgium, Captain Kenneth S. Grills, 32, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dana Grills, 12 Chatham Street, has received his majority, his parents have been informed. Enlisting the first day of the war, he went overseas two years ago but was returned to Canada for a course at R.M.C., Kingston. He went back overseas with his present unit after having been stationed for a time at Vancouver.

Born in Belleville Major Grills attended Queen Mary School and Belleville Collegiate, officering in cadet corps in both schools. Still retaining his interest in military affairs following school he joined the local 34th Battery and until leaving Belleville ten years ago for Toronto was Captain of the signallers. At the outbreak of war he went "active" and was given his commission. He had received his captaincy before going overseas in 1942.

A brother Eugene Grills, with a Westminster regiment, has been overseas four years and saw service both in Sicily and Italy. For the past few weeks he has been in England taking an officers' training course.

Major Grills' wife is working in Toronto, while their twin daughters, Cynthia and Penelope, aged five, are living with their grandmother in Belleville.

TWO-HOUR RIOT

Glace Bay, N S., Oct. 10—(CP)—Five hundred milling men, swinging fists and hurling bottles, staged a two-hour riot here early Sunday, but civilian and service police finally put down the disturbance with no more damage than two broken windows and plentiful bruises. An attempt by police to make an apparently routine arrest touched off the riot.

The Rt. Rev. John Lyons, Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, announced today the appointment of Squadron Leader, the Rev. J. Grant Sparling, to the Rectorship of Christ Church in this city. He will assume his duties here on Nov. 1st.

In this parish he was eminently successful, being popular with his parishioners and with Brockville citizens in general. POLICE BLOTTER

Two small pigs, being fattened for winter consumption by Frank Foster, 43 Foster Ave., escaped their pen over the weekend, the owner reported to police. Later it was disclosed the pigs were found at Mr. M. Campbell, 51 Murney St. The pigs were running at large on the Dominion Parasite Laboratory property.

Saturday night police answered a call to the intersection of Pinnacle St. and Victoria Ave. where a disturbance was reported in progress. Investigation resulted in a man and woman being held and later charged with intoxication.

Kingston police reported they are holding a man who gave him name as John C. Brewer and who was found to be in possession of a blanket bearing the letters "Y.M.C.A." Brewer gave the Belleville "Y" as his home address, which prompted Kingston police to report their findings. The matter of the blanket is being investigated at this end.

In conjunction with the Provost Corps of the Canadian Army, Provincial Police assisted in the capture of one Robert Gannon, who was reported to be absent without leave from his Army unit since last May. Gannon was discovered in a woodshed at the upper end of John St. after the police and Provost surrounded the premises.

Mrs. Rosalind Robertson, Shannonville, reported to Provincial Police the theft of articles from a parked motor car at the Tyendinaga Reserve Council House over the week end. A window in the car was pried open and Mrs. Robertson's coat and money taken. Also reported missing was a motor rug and beer and wine permits.

Johnson, Point Anne, complained that cattle were wandering at large on Highway No. 33 two miles north of Trenton last night. It's always the first question

People always ask the same question when a man dies—

"How did he leave his family fixed?"

Unless there is life insurance or other special provision, the death of the breadwinner cuts off the family income leaving a string of sad consequences.

Most people want to do the right thing by their dependents. Evidence of this is found in the fact that in the past year 85,000 Canadians bought 125 million dollars of life insurance from this Company.

There is tremendous satisfaction in knowing that your family is assured of financial security. Ask a London Life representative to outline such a program for you.

They're TALKING ABOUT . . . a Ten-Cent Dollar!

They speak of it glibly...but what does it mean? It means that every pay-day if your boss paid you in crisp new one-dollar bills each of them would buy only a measly ten-cents' worth of goods All those savings you've made with ten dimes to a dollar would shrink to the size of one 10¢. That's inflation! So we're lucky in Canada that price ceilings and other anti-inflationary measures have kept our dollar value HIGH. In fact, a dollar goes further to-day . . . buys more goods than the dollar of 1918. Look at these prices, a pound of cocoa to-day 34¢ compared to the 64¢ it was then. The same quality towels $1.00 now, were $1.98 then. Yes, we get a good dollar's worth to-day. And remember - you protect your dollar value when you refuse to pay more than the ceiling price...denounce black markets . . . buy Victory Bonds ..save.. pay off debts and help keep the cost of living down!

Make This Pledge Today!

I promise to give my support to keeping the cost of living down. I will buy only what I need. I will observe the ceiling whether buying or selling goods or services. I will pay off old debts, save for the future, invest in Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates. And I will support taxes which help lower the cost of living.

Keep Your Dollar Value High!

Wendell Willkie

Canadians came to know Wendell Willkie in the days when the Allied cause was passing through dark hours and when Britain stood practically alone against the aggression of Adolf Hitler and the Nazis. That was shortly after the election for United States presidency in which Mr. Willkie contested the fight for the Republican Party against President Roosevelt. Mr. Willkie went to Britain to see and to interpret to the American people the situation in Britain. Now Mr. Willkie has gone and the people of Canada heard the news of his unexpected death with regret. The people of the British Isles and the British Commonwealth of Nations regret the passing of this noble public man in his prime. In Britain Mr. Willkie became immensely popular for he was on a most unusual visit and yet one that was wholly in keeping with the spirit of democracy and the free nations, a visit which the English-speaking world appreciated and the results of which were so freighted with good results. He was an apt interpreter of Britain, his messages cheered the British people and his homecoming and his subsequent utterances lent great strength to the cause of democracy.

Mr. Willkie was a figure who showed the spirit of American democracy and his love of freedom was typical of the American people. Mr. Willkie was therefore able to lend to the democracy of the world his very effective aid which will not be forgotten among the United peoples.

The cordial relationship existing between the President of the United States and Mr. Willkie was one of the deeply affecting touches of democracy which can never be forgotten. Mr. Roosevelt recognized the greatness of Mr. Willkie's contribution to the cause of freedom. Later Mr. Willkie went to the Orient and visited China and Russia among other countries.

Liberating Greece

Weight of enemy oppression is being lifted from Greece, which put up so heroic a struggle in 1941 as to delay the enemy drive against Russia. The Peloponnesus is largely liberated and German garrisons are reported to be quitting Corinth, and also Athens, the capital.

What woes the Greek population has gone through in the past two and a half years the world knows something of by the exposures of German cruelty to this noble people on whom the enemy took its spite for the frustration of German plans. Greece, the first of the European states to develop, has a notable history and none more honorable than the manner with which she stood and fought by the side of the Allies against the towering strength of Hitler's blitzkrieg.

The presence of the barbarians of the north in the city of ancient Greek culture, Athens, was an anomaly and their actions showed their utter hatred of any racial history except the barbarianism of Germany.

Greece held high the light of civilization and developed democracy nearly two and a half thousand years ago and hence her high place of honor in Europe. Her civilization has left its mark upon all succeeding centuries. Now she is being liberated. Her faith was true and with the throwing out of the Hun soldiery Greece will enter upon her freedom and be a power for security in the post-war world and a valient ally in carrying the war to its certain victory.

Hitler's Balkan citadel is collapsing. Allied legions are steadily progressing in the countries of the Axis satellites.

Everyone can recall the time when the overrunning of Greece by the enemy was a heavy blow. Britain had made great efforts to help the Greeks and used troops from North Africa at a time when they were greatly needed in Greece and also in North Africa. Now liberation comes at the earliest moment in coordination with the Allied program in the Balkans. The British Adriatic force under Lt.-Col. George Jellicoe is forcing the enemy out of heroic Greece.

On The List

Mr. Churchill's words can never be pleasant reading for the four Nazi leaders, Hitler, Himmler, Goering and Goebbels. On Wednesday the British Commons was told by the British Prime Minister that these Axis leaders were on the British list of war criminals but he added "it should not be assumed that procedure of trial will be necessarily adopted," which comment the House cheered. The members knew what was meant by the remark and even to Germans the words would convey the suggestion of something possibly interfering with the course of the lives of these Nazis, something unpleasant, or disagreeable.

No Swords

When German General Erich Elster surrendered to American Maj.-Gen. Robert Macon on the banks of the Loire, he made the symbolic tender, not of his sword, but of his pistol, says The San Francisco Chroicle. Generals do not have swords any more, not even to surrender with.

Though in his day generals liked to be pictured waving a sword, Grant refused to be bothered with one. Since his time, being now of no earthly use, officers' swords have gone out so sompletely that in the United States Navy it is no longer required in an officer's uniform outfit.

If General Elster owned a sword, it was probably hanging in some permanent headquarters and solely for use at some grand function. Japanese officers still carry swords into battle, but these are only platoon and company commanders, young chaps still in a medieval feudal fog. Their shiny choppers are not much good against Garands, B.A.R.'s and tommy guns. If Japanese generals, who don't lead charges, cumber themselves with the long blades, they have learned nothing as their years advance. The sword, in days of chivalry considered the "noble" weapon, is now a museum piece companion to the crossbow.

Tax Collectors' Harvest

(Chicago Daily News)

The other day a shy English woman sitting in a Devonshire cottage, not thatched, but undoubtedly vine clad, as all literary cottages should be, received a cablegram from Hollywood.

The cable said that her novel, "Green Dolphin Street," had won a $120,000 prize offered by Hollywood tycoon Louis B. Mayer. The lady, Miss Elizabeth Goudge, didn't know about the prize contest. Her agent had entered her book without saying "by your leave."

She will receive another $50,000 in royalties, and the book also may be filmed. Now for the happy ending. Miss Goudge (what's in a name?) will have about $12,000 after paying income tax. Happy days are here—for tax gatherers!

The whole extent of the front under Admiral Mountbatten is 2,500 miles, the longest in the world. Already in 1944 striking victories have been won which are preponderantly a British achievement.

JUST FOLKS

FREEDOM

Freedom! If you doubt it
Worth its bitter fee,
Go and ask about it
Of some refugee.

Ask some fellow-being
Belgian, Czech or Dutch,
What it is he's fleeing
That he fears so much.

Listen to his story:
Thousands jailed and slain
So in regal glory
Hitler might remain!

Good folks held in terror;
Spied on night and day;
Thinking truth and error
Can be checked that way.

Freedom! Lest it perish,
Land and sea and sky,
All it means to cherish
Free men dare to die.

STAR WITHIN MOON'S CRESCENT

Many people persist in believing that a star may occasionally be seen within the crescent of the new moon.

"The silver arc of the new moon grew light and a star winked within it," wrote Harold Lamb in "Omar Khayyam."

There are numerous similar allusions to this subject in literature.

But astronomers tell us that there is nothing to the notion. The moon, they point out, is a solid and opaque body, nearly spherical in form. Hence it is absolutely impossible for an observer to see a star within the crescent of the new moon, notwithstanding the popular belief to the contrary.

Those who think they see stars within the crescent of the moon are victims of an illusion. It is often explained by popular writers that, owing to the refraction of the light rays under certain atmospheric conditions, a star or planet may sometimes appear to be just within the rim of the new moon.

There is no authentic astronomical record proving that such an optical illusion is ever produced.

Samuel T. Coleridge was a better poet than scientists when he wrote "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner." In Part III he said:

The stars were dim, and thick
the night,
The steerman's face my his lamp
gleamed white;
From the sails the dew did drip—
Till clomb above the eastern bar
The horned moon, with one bright star
Within the nether tip.

One commentator explains, this passage by saying that "star" here probably refers to a lofty lunar peak that, owing to the reflection of sunlight, sometimes appears like a star in the shadowed disc some distance from the bright crescent.

This may be the correct explanation of the popular belief.

WHEN BETTER CALCIUM IS AVAILABLE WHY NOT USE IT?

Because I have noticed that you are never averse to making a retraction or acknowledging error if you make a wrong statement, I should like to ask about your earlier recommendation of calcium lactate (writes Mrs. S. R. F.) More recently you suggested di-calcium phosphate sometimes, other times you suggest calcium gluconate. My sisters take calcium lactate for leg cramps, for dizziness, and Lord knows what, and so we wonder why you have switched to the other salts of calcium.

I switched from calcium chloride and calcium lactate some six or eight years ago because I found that most people more readily take calcium gluconate or di-calcium phosphate. Then, too, I was biased in favor of the latter because it supplies phosphorus as well as calcium, and in nearly all instances if there is calcium shortage or deficiency there is phosphorus shortage or deficiency too, for these two elements occur naturally in chemical combination in the best food sources of calcium and phosphorus, such as milk, cheese, wheat, beans, peas, peanuts, cabbage, lettuce.

Calcium lactate is still a good form of calcium for the treatment of tendency to bleed excessively, tetany, hay fever, asthma, and the like, but calcium gluconate has proved less irritating and equally effective, and di-calcium phosphate, supplying phosphorus as well as calcium, promotes better utilization of calcium—in recent years it has been recognized that phosphorus is required for normal calcium metabolism or assimilation and utilization in the body and vice versa, and further that vitamin D is essential for either or both.

And so I switched from calcium chloride and calcium lactate, which I think are still the calcium preparations of choice for intramuscular or, better, intravenous injection in emergencies such as lead or gallstone or renal colic or the painful cramps of black widow spider bite, to calcium gluconate and di-calcium phosphate—always combined with an adequate amount of vitamin D.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS
How to Gain Weight

I am eager to gain weight. I am 65 inches tall and weigh 113 pounds. Please send me information about the egg yolk powder and diet you mention in your column. (Mrs. G. L. F.)

Answer—Pretty hard to find now—perhaps because powdered egg goes largely to military forces. Send stamped envelope bearing your address, and ask for pamphlet "How to Gain Weight." Readers please notice a clipping is not a request.

Sex Instruction for Young Men

Can you suggest anything at all a widowed mother can give her 17-year-old son for instruction concerning sex?

(Mrs. M. C. E.)

Answer—An excellent pamphlet "Building Sex Into Your Life," by Dr. Paul Popenoe, has just been issued by The America Institute of Family Relations, 607 S. Hill St., Los Angeles, 14, Calif. Send 25 cents to that address for the pamphlet.

Newspaper Doctor versus Real Doctor

.. the doctor said it was his heart .. fell down .. feet and legs swollen, he said don't give me any more of that medicine .. I got the vitamin B complex you said you'd rather take than digitalis and began giving him about eight times as much as he needed .. today he said he never felt so well in his life, he can run many blocks .. when I told the doctor he snorted "Oh, so you're one of those ..". We say thank God for Doctor Brady. (Mrs. S. H.)

Answer—I still say I'd rather take, and certainly I'd rather prescribe or administer, vitamin B complex, for functional impairment of heart muscle (irrespective of the nature of the disease or illness) than digitalis. In this instance I believe the real doctor betrayed his ineptitude. Incidentally, who knows whether the credit belongs to the real doctor, the newspaper doctor or our mutual friend, A. J. Coincidence?

Sailors With Wings Graduate At Collins Bay

By JACK BRAYLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Collins Bay, Ont., Oct. 10 (CP) —The sailor with wings matches the ludicrous picture of the proverbial admiral on horseback but he's no proverb at this unique training station jutting its landing strips into Lake Ontario like the prow of a monstrous aircraft carrier.

On its broad flight deck are training Canada's nucleus of air arm pilots and their Royal Navy counterparts. The first four Canadian navy-selected pilots for their wings Friday. Others are in the making.

The men come to this school after a foundation of naval drill and conduct in Britain and initial training at St. Eugene, Que. Then at this station, a thousand miles inland, they take their service training over the lake, dive bombing floating targets, gunning drogues and getting the feel of flying over water.

The final stage of training takes them back to Britain for operational work for six months before they fire their first shot at the enemy.

School is Paradox

The school is a paradox of RAF and RCAF instructors teaching the senior service the finer points of flying and getting replies like "Aye, aye sir," instead of the conventional airman's "Yes sir." The Canadian, perhaps more than the British instructor, had a tough time getting used to the sailor taking off his hat instead of saluting on entering a flight office, calling his quarters the "ship," and referring to the floor as the deck.

But the two services have got along well and about 30 sailors have shown appreciation of their junior service instructors by winning decorations in flights against the enemy. These were mostly Royal Navy personnel who trained in the school for several years under R.A.F. instruction. Some were Canadians, seconded to the British fleet air arm.

R.C.A.F. Administered

Recently the school was taken over by the Commonwealth Air Training Plan and administered by the R.C.A.F. It is under the command of Group Capt. W. R. Pollock, Montreal, veteran of the battle of Britain in which he fought with the famous first Canadian Hurricane fighter wing.

While the majority of trainees will continue to come from Britain to be turned out for the Royal Navy's Air Arm an increasing number will be Canadians for the distinctive air branch that Navy Minister Macdonald has envisaged.

The need for trained aircrews arose from the desire to man the three carriers which the Canadian navy will eventually take over. The Dominion has already provided staff crews for two Royal Navy flat-tops —Puncher and Nabob—and some of the aircrews are Canadians transferred to the Royal Navy. This group—together with the new trainees scheduled to pass through this school—will some day provide Canada's navy with personnel for its own distinctive air army.

Sqdr. Ldr. W. Roberts, former Cornwall high school teacher, is chief ground instructor at the school.

IT'S A ROAD that must be trod to the end—this road which leads to victory and the return of our loved ones.

There are milestones along the way—such immortal names as Dieppe, El Alamein, Tunis, Sicily, Ortona, Rome, the Normandy beachheads, Caen, Paris, Brussels, Le Havre, Boulogne—each one a decisive step forward along the road whose twin destinations are Berlin and Tokio.

These victories have been won by the courage and devotion of the dauntless fighting men of Canada and her allies—compared with whose sacrifices ours are but small indeed. Now on the battlefields our men are being urged to even greater efforts to bring victory quickly and decisively. At home we, too, are being urged to an even greater effort—Canada's borrowing needs have been increased by $320,000,000. Only you can raise this extra sum—every cent of which is needed to back our fighting men with a steady stream of weapons and supplies.

The struggle has reached a crucial stage—our leaders ask for a maximum and total effort. The objective in the 7th Loan is greater—our share must be greater. If we bought all the bonds we could last time—let's do the same again and then buy one more!

Keep right on to the end of the road!

WEDDINGS

HAMILTON—SCOTT

Christ Church, decorated with a lovely floral array of white and pink gladioli, was the scene of a charming early Autumn wedding on Saturday afternoon, October 7th, at three-thirty o'clock, when Helen Victoria Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Hayward Scott, became the bride of Bruce McCoy Hamilton, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hamilton, Hamilton, Ontario.

The Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne was the officiating clergyman for the impressive occasion. Miss Dorothy Grant presided at the console of the organ and played softly throughout the ceremony and at the signing of the register.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was a radiant picture in her long graceful gown of blush slipper satin, fashioned in long torso effects and made with a softly gathered skirt. Her floor length veil of tulle fell in dainty folds about her head from a cluster of orange blossoms nestling softly in her hair. She carried a cascade bouquet of white Sweetheart roses and white 'mums.

Mrs. W. C. Heim, sister of the bride, as matron of honor, and Miss Barbara Graham, as bridesmaid, were frocked alike in striking floor length models of hyacinthe blue velvet. They wore hats of matching material to their dresses and accentuated with fuchsia and blue ostrich plumes. They carried cascade of bouquets of roses and 'mums in colorful Autumn shades.

Mr. Paul Foley, of Hamilton, was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. J. W. L. Ostler, Hamilton; and Lieut. Norman Granfield, R.C.N.V.R., Ste. Hyacinthe, Quebec.

For the reception at 261 William Street, the bride's mother selected an exquisite ensemble of draped violet crepe complemented with corsage of mauve orchids. The groom's sister, Mrs. R. J. Graham, was wearing an attractive two-tone crepe dress in gold and brown hues accented with corsage of brown orchids.

On the wedding trip to Limberlost, the bride donned for travelling a tweed suit with matching hat and dusty pink corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton will take up residence at Welland, Ont.

Out-of-town guests were Miss Laila C. Scott, Miss Nora I. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Hopkins, Miss Elizabeth Hopkins, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Rutter, Miss Joan Rutter, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. C. Scott, Masters Charles and Kenneth Scott, Miss Marion Stuart, Miss Barbara Elliot, Miss Joan Parker and Miss Jane Rathbun, all of Toronto; L/S. Fred H. IRVINE — LAZARIUK

The Rev. J. G. Hornaby solemnized the marriage ceremony on Saturday afternoon, October 7th, at 2 o'clock, in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, of Ann Lazariuk, daughter of Mrs. R. Lazariuk and the late Mr. Lazariuk, to John Andrew Irvine, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. C. Irvine, of Hamilton.

A profusion of white 'Mums and ferns formed an impressive floral background. The wedding music was played by Mrs. John Deacon.

Entering the church to the strains of the Bridal March from Lohengrin on the arm of her brother-in-law, Flt. Lieut. P. A. Townley, the bride was exquisite in white Algiers satin. It was developed along early Parisian lines, featuring a sweeping fullness with ample use being made of long lace panelling. The neckline was of the sweetheart type. Her floor-length veil of silk net was caught to her hair with a tiny calot fashioned from white feathers. She carried an arm bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Miss Mary Kidd, as bridesmaid, was wearing a delightful frock of pastel mauve taffeta in slipper length. It was made in long torso effects and accentuated with a V neckline and three quarter length sleeves. Her small hat of matching material and hue to her dress, was dusted with a shoulder length veil of tulle. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink roses and mauve bachelor buttons.

Acting as groomsman was Mr. John Haig and as usher, Mr. Frank Marvin.

For the reception at the bride's home, the rooms were decorated with pink and white asters and 'mums. The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake and flanked with tall white tapers in silver candelabra.

The bride's mother chose for the occasion a French blue crepe ensemble, black accessories, silver fox furs and corsage of Sweetheart roses. The aunt of the groom, Miss J. Irvine, wore navy with accessories in the same shade, grey squirrel neckpiece and corsage of Talisman roses.

On the honeymoon to Ottawa, the bride selected a black dressmaker suit, black accessories, Kolinsky fur and corsage of Gardenias.

On their return, they will reside in the city.

Tweed United Congregation Has Anniversary

Tweed — The Fifty-Second Anniversary of Tweed United Church was held on Sunday, October 1st, with large congregations at both morning and evening services. They had for guest preacher for the day, the Rev. A. J. Wilson, B.A., D.D., editor of "The Observer," Toronto, one of the church's ablest preachers. The choir rendered special music, assisted by Mrs. Dorothy Sager Goldie, Peterboro, guest soloist, with Mr. Fred Porter at the console of the organ.

On the evening of October 2nd., a musical concert was sponsored by the ladies of the congregation to send Christmas boxes to the boys in the armed forces overseas from Tweed. Just before the program, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Gordon unveiled a memorial window to the memory of the original board of trustees that built the church 53 years ago.

Mayor Harry Rollins, of Belleville, formerly of Tweed, in his capable manner acted as chairman for the evening and the following artists delighted the large gathering with their vocal and musical selections:

Miss Ruth Blane, concert harpist of Montreal, delighted the congregation with music on her harp; Mrs. F. E. Houston, Belleville, and Mrs. Dorothy Sager Goldie, Peterboro, soprano soloists, were accompanied by Mr. Alec Gordon, of Belleville, at the console of the organ; Mr. Gordon contributed a number of selections on the organ which brought a beautiful and inspiring program to a close.

Mr. Jock Walker of the Ontario Lands and Forests Branch at Tweed left on Saturday for Pembroke, where he has been transferred to the local branch office there.

On Friday evening a few of the members of the Kinsmen Club called on "Kin" Jock and presented him with a fountain pen and extended to him and Mrs. Walker the good wishes of the club.

Mr. Walker was taken by surprise and in a few well chosen words thanked the boys for their kind wishes.

Meeting, the .Old Beau After a Lapse of Years

Lady who has written a suc-ful play and two best sellers es me a letter, which she says ay print if I don't use her name connection with her confession. r experience, she says, may other woman who persist in oring delusions" about their loves.

ar Miss Fairfax:

When I was working my way gh college, I fell in love with ung divinity student. He was ally in love with me. But as her of us had the price of a se or a frying pan, and our lies declined to take us in, we ed, vowing to be true to each r to the end of time and never ry anyone else.

ly F. L. (first love) remained he small town where my uni-ity was situated, and he is, to day, a small-town clergyman with a small-town narrow outlook on life.

"I needn't tell you how desperately poor I was when I tried to get a foothold in a large city, because you know all about my past history. Often meals were scant, or none at all, and clothes were shiny. But I stuck it out with what success you are already familiar. Of course, my F.L. and I both married.

"Last week we met and of all places at a funeral. In spite of being frankly bald and wearing steel-rimmed spectacles, there was something about him that fired that little fluttering candle of romance in my heart.

"Away from our matrimonial partners we faced each other that evening after an absence of years. At the end of fifteen minutes I was wondering how I could get rid of him gracefully. When not handing out platitudes, he would bog down in embarrassing silences. He was smug and a frightful bore. And pleading a headache after the family funeral I excused myself. Isn't it always that way when one meets an old love? I went home to my own family kicking up my heels with delight -- cured.

Older and Wiser."

The bitterest disappointment of meeting one's first love was that of Charles Dickens and Maria Beadnell. Dickens was frantically in love with Maria but she turned him down for someone whose future seemed more promising. When Dickens became the most important literary figure in England, she wrote him and a meeting was arranged. Maria was fair, fat and fortyish, also stupid. And Dickens had to exercise all his imagination to get rid of the early love he would have died for in the beginning.

Meeting these old loves is like rummaging through a trunk of old clothes we wore when sweet and twenty. They wouldn't meet on us now, but oh the enchanting dreams they can evoke. Also, meeting a first love so often has the salutory effect of bringing out the fine durable qualities of friend-husband or the lady-wife.

Dyeing Hair Job for Expert

Rita Hayworth's Hair is Beautiful and Healthy.

By HELEN FOLLETT

You don't hear much about henna these days, but the synthetic red head is still with us. There aren't as many of her as there used to be; women have learned that home dyeing is seldom successful and they seek professional services at the beauty shop.

One of the tough jobs that beauty operators have is toning down "brick" hennaed hair. After henna has been used by the amateur for a certain time, it is likely to show undesirable pink and orange streaks. Another application of henna may make conditions worse. Many a woman has gone through this trying experience, wished she had never heard of henna.

Conditioning Dyed Hair

It is the grey portion of the thatch that shows up queer shades. The expert may apply a weak ash blond dye to subdue the pink or orange strands. Or he may give a bleaching treatment, wait a few weeks, apply a darker dye, all depending of course upon the desires of the customer and the condition of her hair.

Playing with hair dyes may result in pouring troubles on one's head. It is no pastime for the amateur. Changing the color of the hair is difficult, if the results are to be satisfactory. A medium that works successfully on one head won't do for the next one. It is possible of course to touch up a few grey hairs; there are preparations that can be used for that purpose.

Touch Ups Needed

If you are flirting with the idea of dyeing or bleaching, keep in mind one fact. Nature is not an ally. Nature doesn't know anything about it or care, so will go right on pushing out the grey shafts. Hair sometimes grows as much as an inch in two months. That growth must be touched up to match the rest, else the beauty game will be revealed to critical eyes.

The cost of the original treatment is not trifling, and six touch-ups a year come to a considerable total. If the beauty budget can stand the strain, all right.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

TAKE YOUR TIME!

With the resturants crowded to the doors and service slow, eating is not the leisurely pleasure it once was. Just bide your time; be patient. When your prepared groceries are placed before you, make a real effort to enjoy them. And, though time be pressing, don't indulge in the American habit of rapid eating, which is an insult to one's digestive organs. The stomach, empty and at rest after a fast of several hours, awaits the consignment of good food. It likes to receive it in small portions, with waits between, so it can stow it away to its own satisfaction and convenience. Food taken slowly is accompanied on its passage by gastric juices that are necessary for all digestive processes.

Digestion begins in the mouth, with the mastication and insalivation of food. Chewing thoroughly disintegrates the larger portions, prepares them for digestion. In the saliva is a substance known as ptyalin, which acts favorably upon starchy substances.

There are three salivary glands in the mouth and they are influenced by emotions. If food does not appear pleasing and appetizing, if the odor is objectionable, the glands go on strike. It is true that delicious foods make the mouth water. That is as it should be. These fluids make the taste buds keep.

Unpleasant emotions, like fear, anxiety, jealously, and anger have a deplorable effect upon the glands, produce dryness of the tongue and throat. Everyone has experienced that strange happening.

The digestive organs have a complex nervous system; this system is upset and disorganized when food is eaten rapidly.

Business girls suffer more from rapid eating habits than the home lassies. With time limited, they try to do a little shopping during the luncheon hour. They are obliged, many times, to congregate in noisy crowded restaurants where confusion interferes with the pleasures of eating. Breakfast often is a swallow and a nibble. Along about four o'clock in the afternoon they go into a slump. When dinner time comes, they're too tired to eat. All this forms a vicious circle, may bring about a state of malnutrition.

The heavyweights, especially, should eat slowly. By chewing food well, they will be able to do with less, and the adipose cushions won't pile up. Washing down food with tea or coffee is a bad habit.

Every meal, though it consists of nothing more than bread and cheese, should be an occasin of complete relaxation. A well-cooked dinner should be regarded as a festival. Leisurely eating promotes tranquility and well-being, keeps tension from putting its ugly marks upon the countenance.

To one who appreciates well-cooked, daintily-served food, eating is a delight.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DUTIES OF A GODMOTHER

Dear Mrs. Beeckman—

A relative of mine has asked me to be godmother for her baby. I have never been a godmother, and I have never been to a christening where there has been one, and so I am completely uncertain of my duties. What are they? Is there any special gift I should give? I have already given a gift of money.

—P. S.

At the christening you will be asked to make certain responses. And customarily it is the godmother who holds the baby in her arms, stands in front of the minister, and when asked for the baby's name, pronounces it very distinctly so that there is no possibility of mistake. (Or the child's name may be written out and given to the minister just before the ceremony.)

During the child's life it is your responsibility to be an ever-devoted friend of the child, always to be interested in his welfare, his religious training, his education, and so forth. Your responsibilities are spiritual and moral, the willingness to give advice and help if ever needed.

Since you have already given a gift of money, that would be considered a christening gift, and a mighty practical one too. I hope you gave this money with the idea of having it used either to start a savings bank account in the baby's name, or .. to buy a Victory Bond, or for War Stamps to begin a book.

Problems of a Wartime Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman—

1. I read in your column that women in the services are now all allowed to wear wedding dresses. I am wondering if the bridal attendants who are in the services are also allowed to wear customary bridesmaids' dresses. Are they?

2. When in the wedding party there are both service and civilian ushers, and service and civilian bridesmaids, is there any special order-of-march for the procession?

3. At an evening wedding, when the groom and best man are in uniform, the bride in white gown and short veil, two ushers in uniform, two civilian ushers, what is the proper attire for the civilian ushers and the bride's father?

—E. W.

1. No. The bride's attendants who are in the services must wear their regular uniforms. The bride's attendants who are in civilian life may wear bridesmaids' dresses.

2. Yes. Under these circumstances, this is the proper order of the procession: First, the ushers .. those in the Services first. Next, the bridesmaids, those in the Services first. The maid (or matron) of honor. (If there is to be a flower girl, she comes next.) Last, the bride and her father. And, in deference to the uniform, there should be a longer-than-usual distance between the ushers in uniform and the civilian ushers, and between the bridesmaids in uniform and the civilian bridesmaids.

Courtesy Tip

When it's necessary for you to apologise, put some real conviction into your words. "I beg your pardon," or "Please excuse me", or "I'm sorry," or "I'm so sorry." Show you really mean what you're saying. There should be nothing curt, nothing casual or unconcerned about your manner.

WENDELL WILLKIE DIES SUDDENLY IN NEW YORK

52-Year-Old Indianian Had Unique Political Career

VISITED U. K. IN 1941

New York, Oct. 10—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie, 52, Indiana-born lawyer who skyrocketed from political unknown to Republican Presidential nominee in 1940 and subsequent national and international prominence, died unexpectedly at 2:20 a.m., Sunday in Lenox Hill Hospital. Death was caused by coronary thrombosis. Dr. Alexander Ghiselin, a throat specialist, said a sterptococci infection affected the heart muscles and that Mr. Willkie died in his sleep after suffering three attacks, the last of which occurred at 2 a.m.

Mrs. Willkie arrived at his bedside five minutes before his death.

The colorful, 200-pound tousle-headed Indianian, who first gained prominence as president of Commonwealth and Southern Corporation, entered hospital Sept. 6 for a physical checkup and rest. The throat infection developed Wednesday. His condition became critical at midnight Saturday and he was placed in an oxygen tent.

Mr. Willkie, whose brief and sometimes stormy political career was a paradox in United States politics, had been inactive for the most part in the current campaign since he stepped out of the race for the Republican Presidential nomination after his defeat in the Wisconsin primary in April.

He kept Democrats and Republicans alike guessing and never publicly disclosed which Presidential candidate he planned to support, if either. Instead he embarked upon an avowed campaign to force President Roosevelt and Gov. Dewey as far out in the open as possible on domestic and foreign policies. A strong internationalist, he wanted to see what each had to say upon what he considered fundamental issues.

Mr. Willkie's nomination as Republican candidate for President at the 1940 convention in Philadelphia was a unique event in the United States political history. He was a former Democrat. He had the backing of no orthodox political organization. Moreover, some members of the "Old Guard" frowned on him.

Yet, in losing the election, he polled 22,333,801 votes—the largest popular vote ever given a Republican Presidential candidate.

And from this he went on to still greater prominence. In 1941 he went to Britain to observe wartime conditions and left behind him there a message for the German people—that "we German-Americans reject and hate the aggression and lust for power of the present German Government."

In 1942 Mr. Willkie made a 31,000-mile tour of the Middle East, Russia and China as special representative of President Roosevelt. He carried letters to Marshal Stalin and President Chiang Kai-shek. He described his travels in a book, "One World," which sold 1,500,000 copies.

Hoosier Link Remained.

A native of Elwood, Ind., Mr. Willkie had lived in New York since 1933, but never cut himself off completely from his home State. He owned farms in the vicinity of Rushville, where he spent vacations.

THE BLOODY SIEGE OF TENGCHUNG

Inching across the rugged, rain-soaked terrain of the Kaoli mountains to face a heavily fortified Jap force at Tengchung, Chinese troops captured the ancient Jade centre after a bloody, five-week battle. The first Chinese city on the eastern side of Burma to be liberated by the Allies, Tengchung was a battle-seared, rubble-strewn prize when the Chinese moved in. Shown above are a few of the badly wounded Chinese troops who are treated at a first aid station.

CHURCHILL MEETS

London, Oct. 10 —(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill was disclosed today to have plunged immediately into talks with Premier Stalin at Moscow which advices from the Russian capital indicated might continue for a full week.

A communique broadcast by the Moscow radio said Mr. Churchill and Mr. Stalin had met for their conference yesterday only a short time after the Prime Minister stepped from the plane which brought him from London.

Present were Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov, Foreign Secretary Eden and Ambassador Sir Archibald Clark Kerr. Later Mr. Eden and Mr. Molotov conferred at a separate meeting attended by Soviet Deputy Foreign Commissar A. Y. Vishinsky.

The Moscow Bulletin gave no inkling of the nature of the initial conversations. Press dispatches from the Soviet capital said it was believed the talks would deal with the organization of the final military blows against Germany and a multitude of European political questions.

Mentioned among the latter was the dispute between the Polish Government in London and the Soviet-sponsored Polish Committee of National Liberation, which has been brought to fore recently by a new exchange of recriminations.

No Confirmation of Pledge.

On the military side, it was believed plans for occupation of Germany and the possibility of Russia's eventual entry into the war against Japan might rank high on the agenda.

Apropos of the latter topic, the Daily Express printed today a special dispatch from Washington saying it was reported there that Premier Stalin had pledged Siberian bases to the United States as soon as the war in Europe ends. There was no confirmation of this.

While the United States is not represented by a special envoy at the current talks, it was said Washington would be kept fully informed.

Moscow, which said the conference was arranged at Mr. Churchill's suggestion, reported the Prime Minister had delivered a "fighting speech" for Soviet newsreel men who greeted him at the airport.

"I have arrived here on a wave of hope," Mr. Churchill was quoted as saying, "on a wave of certainty that victory will be achieved and in the hope that when it is achieved we will all strive to make the world a better place for the life of the great mass of people."

He paid tribute to the Red Army for being "the first to smash the spirit of the German military machine," and added:

"We also on our side—the United States and the British Commonwealth of Nations—have exerted our forces to the limit and it is for you to judge if we have dealt heavy blows or not."

BUILD UP.

Retreat Corridor Narrowed

The retreat corridor was narrowed to a mile, another field report said, and Whitehead wrote that American machine-guns were on both tips of the gap, which also could be raked with mortar fire.

The bottling of Aachen's "fight to the death" defenders came as the U.S. 3rd Army snapped a German bulge in the Nancy-Metz sector back into a straight line.

Elimination of this pocket was reported by Associated Press War Correspondent Edward D. Ball, who said 3rd Army troops had moved up into new positions extending from Fresnes En Saulnois, 15 miles north and east of Nancy, to Cheminot, 18 miles due north of Nancy.

Savage Counter Blows

Stubborn German defenders, goaded to new fierceness by an order of the day from Field Marshal Rundstedt, mounted one savage counter-attack after another. The German radio admitted "limited breaches" in the Aachen sector but claimed they had been sealed.

Weather-plagued invaders hammered down the counter-blows on both the 1st and 3rd Army fronts and maintained the momentum of their slow-moving offensive.

German losses were heavy and the Nazi commander in the west braced his troops for an even worse battering.

"You have stopped the enemy at the gates of the Reich," his broadcast order said. "The enemy will, however, shortly launch a new grand offensive. I expect that you will all defend the sacred German soil to the last."

Fight on Highways.

The U. S. 1st Army in the Aachen sector has forced a 25-mile front to Duren and Julich, highway keys and was fighting on the approaches to Cologne and Dusseldorf. Americans were six miles from Duren—10 miles beyond Aachen and 20 from Cologne—and seven miles from Julich, where an excellent highway branches to Cologne 23 miles beyond and to Dusseldorf 26 miles away.

They had edged into the southern outskirts of Aachen, once the centre of Charlemagne's government, but the main assault on the city had not yet opened. The enemy garrison there perhaps numbered no more than 1,500 men.

The 3rd Army punch between Metz and Nancy seized at least 10 towns. At Fort Driant below Metz, American infantry still fought to overcome ingenious defences, and had penetrated into underground tunnels guarded by steel doors.

Farther south the 7th Army advancing two miles east of Epinal forced the Germans from the towns of Laveline and Herp-Elmont. Seventh Army forces were also fighting only eight miles from Belfort, guarding the gap leading into Southwestern Germany.

FIGHTING GOES ON IN ATHENS

New York, Oct. 7—The BBC in a broadcast recorded by CBS said today it was reported among Greeks in London that "fighting has been going on in the centre of Athens for several days."

"The Germans have blocked all roads leading to the capital and the life of the city is paralyzed," said the broadcast.

BRACKEN IN WEST

Stonewall, Man., Oct. 7—(CP)—John Bracken, leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, said here yesterday at a nomination convention in Selkirk Federal riding that his party "stands for legalized collective bargaining to maintain industrial wages at a fair level." Lt.-Col. Charles de Pencier received the nomination.

REINFORCEMENTS AND RECRUITING ARE SATISFACTORY

Some Remustering in Army May be Needed Says Ralston

HOME LEAVE QUESTION

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

Brussels, Belgium, Oct. 10 — (CP Cable) — Canada's Defence Minister, Col. J. L. Ralston, told Canadian war correspondents last night there may have to be some remustering in the Canadian Army, which would be a question of taking men from one branch of the service and placing them in another where the need is more imperative.

On the question of reinforcements both for the Italian and European war theatres, however, Col. Ralston said that reinforcements and recruiting were satisfactory, according to his latest figures, and had been working out according to plan.

(Premier George Drew of Ontario in a speech before the Canadian Corps Association in Toronto last week charged that insufficiently trained men were being used as reinforcements for the 1st Canadian Army. Similar statements were made previously by Maj. Conn Smythe of Toronto, who was wounded in Normandy and invalided home.)

Will Study Reinforcement Question

The defence minister said that on his return to Canada he intended to go into the reinforcement question carefully.

Home leave for men with long service overseas was another question which will be carefully investigated, he said.

Col. Ralston was scheduled today to visit several sectors of the 1st Canadian Army front in the Low Countries.

During last night's interview, he cautioned against over-optimism and said the war was not over yet and there was much hard fighting ahead. He declined to say when he thought it would end.

The defence minister yesterday had a talk with Field Marshal Montgomery at field headquarters of the 21st Army group and he said the Field Marshal had unstinted praise for the job done in this campaign by Canadian troops.

CANADA'S VETERANS

The War Service Gratuity and Re-establishment Credit

OTHER BENEFITS AT THE TIME OF DISCHARGE

When the time comes to leave the armed forces, the man or woman in uniform faces a new world. It is a world which has changed in the time they have been serving. For many there will be a choice of many roads, and they will need time in which to make their decision. They will need security also during this period.

The people of Canada, through Parliament, have said that Canada's men and women must have this security and in no country in the world have the wishes of the people been heeded so fully. Canada's veterans will have opportunity and help in making their choice of a lifetime occupation.

THE WAR SERVICE GRATUITY
Passed at the last session of Parliament, this provided monthly payments to those honorably discharged who have enlisted for service in any theatre of war and to those who saw service in the Aleutian Islands for their period of service there.

HOW MUCH IS IT?
There is a basic gratuity of $7.50 for each thirty days' service in the Western Hemisphere and $15.00 for each thirty days' service overseas. A supplementary gratuity of seven days' pay and allowances of rank, with Canadian subsistence or lodging and provision allowance, is paid for each six months of service overseas.

WHAT IS OVERSEAS SERVICE?
Service in Greenland, Iceland, the Aleutian Islands and any other theatre of war, is overseas service. Being in the Western Hemisphere, service in Bermuda and Newfoundland is not. Air crew, flying outside Canadian territorial waters, or stationed outside Canada or the United States, and naval personnel, serving anywhere in seagoing ships of war, are regarded as being on overseas service.

WHEN IS IT PAID?
The Act is to come into force January 1, 1945, unless proclaimed earlier. Monthly payments, not exceeding monthly pay and allowances last received, will start after that time and will continue until full payment is made.

HOW TO GET IT
Application, for those still serving, will be made at the time of discharge. Arrangements are being made for those already in civilian life to make their applications to the service in which they last served.

DEPENDENTS MAY CLAIM IT
There is provision in the Act for dependents of those who die in service, or of those who die before payment is made or completed, to make application for the gratuity.

RE-ESTABLISHMENT CREDIT
In addition to the war service gratuity, a re-establishment credit is set up for ex-service people who are eligible for the gratuity. It can be applied for at any time in the ten years following discharge, and is intended especially for those who do not take advantage of training, education or of benefits under the Veterans' Land Act.

HOW MUCH IS IT?
It is an amount equal to $7.50 for every thirty days' service in the Western Hemisphere and $15.00 for every thirty days' service overseas.

HOW CAN IT BE USED?
It may be used for the purchase of a home, of furniture, of a business, of tools of trade, or for the payment of premiums under any insurance scheme established by the Government of Canada. This does not include private companies. It can be used for modernization or repair of a home, for working capital of a business or profession, and for purchase of instruments or tools for training or education. Provision is made also to authorize its use for other constructive purposes.

EFFECT OF OTHER GRANTS
If assistance is given under training and educational provisions, or under the Veterans' Land Act, the credit is reduced by the amount of this assistance. If the credit is used, training, education and benefits under the Veterans' Land Act cannot be granted until an adjustment has been made.

PAYMENTS UNDER THE RE-ESTABLISHMENT CREDIT WILL NOT COMMENCE UNTIL THE ACT HAS BEEN PROCLAIMED. DETAILS AS TO THE MANNER OF MAKING APPLICATION WILL BE GIVEN IN THE PRESS AT THAT TIME.

OTHER DISCHARGE BENEFITS
Before leaving the service, every man and woman is interviewed by a Veterans' Welfare Officer, and the details of the re-establishment programme are explained. They get a complete medical and dental examination and are eligible for free treatment after discharge for anything which this examination shows to be necessary.
They are allowed to retain one uniform and certain other items of service clothing.
To purchase civilian clothing, they receive a clothing allowance of $100.00. This is paid to all ranks discharged since August 1, 1944.
If they have 183 days' service, and receive an honourable discharge, they are paid a rehabilitation grant of thirty days' pay of rank and one month's dependents' allowances.
A railway warrant is also issued to them to take them to their home or to the place at which they enlisted. Provision is made for those whose home address has changed since the time of their enlistment.

VETERANS' WELFARE OFFICERS ARE STATIONED IN KEY CENTRES THROUGHOUT CANADA. THEY ARE THE FRIENDS OF EX-SERVICE MEN AND WOMEN. IT IS THEIR DUTY TO ADVISE AND ASSIST ALL EX-SERVICE PERSONNEL WITH THEIR RE-ESTABLISHMENT PROBLEMS. IF THERE IS ANYTHING ABOUT THE REHABILITATION PROGRAMME WHICH YOU DO NOT UNDERSTAND CONSULT YOUR NEAREST VETERANS' WELFARE OFFICER.

Boys' Sports

Something new in boys' sports was inaugurated Friday, Sept. 29, after school, when XIC played a challenge football game with XIIB. The game began at four thirty-five and was through at approximately five-thirty, thereby showing the precision with which it was handled by our coach, Mr. Townsend. The first quarter was scoreless, with the only activity calculated to keep the spectators awake being several punishing blows inflicted on the person of Mr. "Zeke" Philp (XIC) by Mr. John Rollins (XIIB). The play began to liven up in the second quarter, however, as Strahan, (XIC) caught a forward pass off a "sneaker" play and went twenty-five yards for a touchdown which was not converted. This did not have a very pleasing effect on XIIB and they started to react. Carefoot caught a twenty-five yard pass, Miles bucked for twelve yards, and on their third successive first down Legate snagged a forward off a "sneaker" play and went ten yards for a touchdown which XIIB also failed to convert. Half-time score, XIC 5, XIIB 5. The third quarter had just begun when Strahan again leaped high to grab a twenty-five yard pass and ran ten yards for a touchdown, which was converted by pass, Locke to Thrasher. Then "Zeke" Philp proved his worth by snatching up a fumbled buck and racing forty yards for a touchdown, which was inverted by a pass, McCarthy to Strahan. The third quarter ended with the score 17-5 for XIC. In the fourth quarter XIIB started to roll once more and several bucks by Miles brought them in a scoring position. Then John Rollins took the ball around the short end for touchdown which was not converted. The final score was XIC 17, XIIB 10.

The junior players on both teams showed up exceptionally well, with the seniors not over-exerting themselves. Locke and Strahan stood out for XIC as did Miles and Rollins for XIIB.

Line-ups:

XIC—Snap, Stebbins; right outside wing, McCarthy; Left outside wing, Campbell; Quarter, Locke; Halves, Strahan, Philp; Alternates, Thrasher, Scott.

XIC are now in the conquerors' spot and will continue to wear the school sweaters in next Friday's match, when XIIG will try to topple them off their lofty perch. However, this department picks XIC as two to one favorites to repeat their victory of last Friday.

Assembly, Sept. 27

Mr. Turner announced that two of our former students have been awarded scholarships amounting to $400. These boys are David Marcus and Tom Woodley, who are at present attending Queen's University.

Another highlight was the announcement of a special rugby game to be held each Friday. For XIC was chosen to begin this series, and their representative, Bob Strahan, challenged any individual form to a game on campus on Friday, twenty-ninth after 4 o'clock.

Mr. Hill read the War Saving Stamp report, explaining how much each form had purchased. Our sales "to date" are $349.50, while the sales through the summer and September amounted to $275.50.

Ah! It is working at last. By this, we mean our Students' Council. Secretary George ("Minutes") Manjuris, announced several suggestions that came up in the first meeting of the council. He said that several forms have not yet elected their representatives, and hinted that the Students' Council may take over the Assemblies in the future.

A special source of enjoyment was provided by a film concerning shipping on the Great Lakes, which was operated on the new moving picture machine with gratifying results.

The band gave an excellent number, all in all, making an enjoyable assembly.

Canadian Concert

With the appearance of Kurt Baum in the Collegiate auditorium on Friday, September 29, the student members of the Community Concert Association thoroughly enjoyed another evening of exceptional entertainment.

A tenor, Mr. Baum sang with feeling and fervor, songs which although unknown to many of us, and sung in several languages were stirring in their beautiful simplicity.

As intriguing as his program, Mr. Baum made a striking figure. Obviously pleased by his appreciative audience his infectious grin was mirrored in faces as far back as the last row in the gallery.

Boys' Sports

On Friday, October 6, after school, XIC played another weekly challenge football game, this time with XIIG. The game began at four twenty-five and was very capable handled by Bill Spafford and Roddy Lyle. The first quarter was only minutes old when XIC, on their first play, sent Strahan up on a long sneaker forward, thrown by Locke, which Bob carried forty-five yards for a major score, which was not converted. Play then see-sawed back and forth till Dodson of XIIG drop-kicked a beautiful field goal, with the first quarter ending 5-3, for XIC. The second quarter produced no score, although the defensive play of McCarthy of XIC was a feature of this quarter. McCarthy opened the third quarter with a fine forty-yard run. Then Locke threw a forty yard pass to Strahan for another major score for XIC, which was converted by a pass, McCarthy to Philp. Dodson made a beautiful run back of the following kick, while Spafford had to be good to snag a long pass from Dodson, although neither play resulted in a score. Then, in the last quarter, Dodson threw a long pass to Freeman behind the line for a touchdown for XIIG, which was not converted. The final score was XIC 11, XIIG 8.

The feature plays were Dodson's first quarter field goal, McCarthy's forty yard run back, Locke's passing and Strahan's receiving in the third quarter, and Dodson's pass to Freeman for a touchdown in the last quarter. For XIC McCarthy's offensive and defensive play was a feature, as well as Locke's fine passing and Strahan's sure receiving of these passes. All of XIIG deserve a great deal of credit for the fine game they played, especially Dodson for his great all-round play.

Line-ups:

XIC—Snap, Stebbins; R.O.W., Strahan; L.O.W., Scott; Quarter, Locke; Halves, McCarthy, Philp; Alternates, Thrasher, Campbell.

XIIG—Snap, Rowland; R.O.W., Pradette; L.O.W., Gibson; Quarter, Dodson; Halves, Spafford, Freeman.

The Columbia Opera Quartet.

For approximately two hours, a wildly enthused audience, composed of students and parents, filled the B.C.I.V.S. auditorium with appreciative applause as they listened to a concert given by the Columbia Oper Quartet, composed of Josephine Tuminia, Helen Olheim, Donald Dame and Walter Cassel.

The program began pleasingly with a rendition of the well known "Quartet" from "Rigo-letto," by Verdi. The beauty of this opening number was matched throughout the whole of the performance, as the group sang solos, duets and quartets of both humorous and serious nature.

A particularly fine number was the humorous "Duet" from "The Barber of Seville," by Rossini, sung by Mr. Dame and Mr. Cassel. This riotous number had the listeners holding their sides, and an encore and several curtain calls were in order.

Mr. Archibald Black provided spirited accompaniments and proved himself to be as excellent a pianist as the others were vocalists.

Try as it would, the rain which fell after the concert could not dampen the spirits of Belleville's homeward-bound music lovers. All those who were lucky enough to attend Thursday's concert will cherish its memory as that of an evening well spent.

Coming Events.

Week of Monday October 9th to Friday October 13th.

Tuesday, October 10th—As far as this column knows up to the present time, there are no special events scheduled for this date.

Wednesday, October 11th—However, the big event of the day takes place on the B.C.I. campus after school hours, when the Collegiate junior rugby team stack up against a Picton squad, in the opening game of the season. There are few reports filtering through concerning the foe, and all we can say is that the B.C.I. juniors this year are bigger than they have been for some years. This is your big chance to size up your team.

Thursday, October 12th—This day will mark the opening of basketball in the school. For the past month, four teams, coached by Gord Bankier, Maurice Rollins, Stuart Wood and Bill Spafford, assisted by Jim Watson, Vince Massey, Silver Cameron and George Wonnacott respectively have been practicing faithfully at noon and after school. The first game, Bankier vs. Rollins, will be handled by Wonnacott. These boys, the players, I mean, are your future junior and seniors. To keep up their interest in basketball, they need moral support. How about helping by being at the clash?

NOT DIVORCE-SEEKER

A central figure in the sensational mystery surrounding the death of Sir Harry Oakes in the Bahamas, Nancy Oakes de Marigny, daughter of Sir Harry Oakes and wife of the man who was tried for and acquitted of his murder, is shown leaving a New York apartment house where she is staying during her visit here. The lady denied that she is here to seek a divorce from Count de Marigny and refused to discuss the unsolved mystery of her father's death.

..Friday the thirteenth!—Unlucky? I should say not. The masters and pupils, and all connected in any way with our great institution are given their big chance to attend an after-supper tea dance. Sponsored by the Glee Club, this dance gets under way at seven-thirty. There will be the usual soft drinks, soft lights, soft music and of course, dancing. With the Quartet and the Collegiate News advertising this occasion, we see no reason why it should be overlooked by anyone.

EXTRA! — XIII-A-B challenges winner of Friday 6th's XIC-XIIG Game

Regrets—This column is very sorry that, because of the time of publication, it is unable to advise you of the Community Concert's Columbia Quartet, which appeared in the auditorium Thursday the 5th, of the marvellous concert which everyone is given the opportunity to see and hear on Monday, the ninth of October, the original Don Cossacks.

The Columbia Quartet surpassed by far any other program provided by the Community Concert Association which it has been our privilege to attend. Their magnificent voices, aided and abetted by their cheerful personalities, completely captivated their audience, one of the largest to attend a concert of this kind.

The Don Cossacks, under their brilliant conductor Serge Jaroff, will also have appeared before this column is published. They are, without a doubt, one of the most widely known groups, not only in North America, but anywhere on the face of the globe. Those who have attended will have realized that they enjoyed the chance of a lifetime for a moderately small admission price.

Off To University

The following students are "off to university" this fall, after successfully completing in June, their entrance qualifications for the university courses selected: Armstrong Boyle; Eileen Cameron; Bill Coulby; Eleanor Davidson; Elinor Finkle; Don Hubble; Clark James; Jim Jenkins; Ward Ketchson; Dave Marcus; Jack Marsh; Don Mason; Joyce Morton; Stella Morton; Joan Watson; Stan Wiggins; Tom Woodley.

Assembly News—October 4th

Mr. Turner read the announcements and Mr. Hill gave us the stamp sales report, and said that he would like to see a sale of $300 per month in the school. Ruth Blatherwick of 12-B presented $26.00, the proceeds of 12-B's tea dance, to Pat Thurston of the Red Cross Club, and then Pat read a letter from Jim Sisler to the students. Secretary George Manjuris read the minutes of the Students' Council meeting, giving several items of interest. Stew Wood announced another game in the "rough & tumble" league, between XI-C and II-G, and also the game between Picton juniors and B.C.I. to be played on Wednesday.

Highlight in this week's assembly was the miniature wrestling match between Billy Anderson (Whipper Billy Watson) and Harry Abbott (Killer John Katan) with Percy Marcus, (Cliff Fox), B.C.I.'s protege, as the announced Don Beavis called him, refereeing. The fight was very realistic and these two students got plenty of applause when, at the end of th fight, the referee was removed by the two contestants.

Last but not least, came our quartet, with a song and dance routine and a bit of wise-cracking thrown in, to advertise the Glee Club tea dance on Friday 13th.

MELROSE W. I.

The September meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Thos. Leslie recently with a good attendance.

Business period was conducted at which time the delegates to attend the area convention in Belleville were appointed: Mrs. J. C. Milligan, alternate, Mrs. A. English.

The Christmas boxes for the boys overseas are to be packed very soon. Mrs. Leslie gave the monthly report of Red Cross work, also stating that the sum of $21.50 had been received in prizes on articles of sewing and knitting shown at Belleville fair.

Mrs. McMechan gave her report on other war work and made an appeal for the filling of ditty bags. It was decided to apply for six ditty bags to fill.

The program on Health was under the leadership of Mrs. Jno. Milligan. After community singing with Mrs. Chas. Bates presiding at the piano, Mrs. Fred Jeffrey gave a reading on Health Habits.

Mrs. Milligan then introduced the guest speaker, Dr. Lily B. Mathieson, of Belleville, who gave a health talk which was much appreciated by all present. Her subject was Physical Fitness, in which she stressed many health habits. Daily exercise. Rest periods. Avoid worry. Be happy. Happiness is so essential to health as is evidenced in the fact that forty-five per cent of men and women discharged from the airforce have been neurotic cases. Have a hobby. Have an active interest. This keeps you young. In conclusion, she said "Major Ian Eisenhardt, Director of Physical Fitness for the Federal Government, hopes to win abandoning of health and happiness for young Canadians within a period of from ten to fifteen years. This program, to be promoted largely through camps in summer and recreational centres during the rest of the year, will include arts, handicrafts, drama and song. One way in which we all can help in Canada's Physical Fitness campaign is to each look after our own personal health."

A hearty vote of thanks was extended Dr. Mathieson.

Mrs. Chas. Bates gave a piano solo. The president, Mrs. Roy Badgley, thanked all who had contributed to the meeting.

The hostess, assisted by her committee of ladies, served lunch and a social time was enjoyed.

HOLLOWAY ST. W.M.S.

In the ladies' parlor of Holloway St. United Church, the members of the W.M.S. Auxiliary met for the October meeting on Thursday afternoon.

The president, Mrs. Reid, opened with a brief worship service. In the business period which followed, the Community Friendship secretary reported 35 calls made, and favorable reports were received from all the departments, including the Supply Secretary, who reported a very fine bale. Mrs. Cordes and Mrs. Stewart were chosen as delegates to attend rally at Foxboro.

Mrs. Denton presented a resolution, brought from the W.C.T.U. Convention, recently held in Woodstock. A pledge is to be signed by women of the churches to abstain from serving intoxicating beverages in their homes. A report of the Study Book was given by Mrs. Weese.

The program for the afternoon was in charge of the group leader, Mrs. Stoneberg. She was assisted by Mrs. Bowers and Mrs. Dilts. The topic for the afternoon was taken by Mrs. Stoneberg, who chose as her subject "Thanksgiving," stressing the need of praise and gratitude.

Mrs. Houston sang "Teach Me Thy Will." The offering was received by Mrs. Wickett and Mrs. McMurray. The meeting closed with prayer.

Saco Marines Defeat Fort Erie In Second Game of O.A.S.A. Int. Finals by 8 to 3 Count

Third and Final Game Will be Played in Toronto on Thursday

NEW DIAMOND USED

It's all even in the Intermediate "A" finals for the O.A.S.A. championship between the local SACO "Marines" and the Fort Erie "Industrial Foods" today. On Saturday the "Marines" booted the spheriod around in the late stages to lose a ten-inning decision 3-2 at Fort Erie.

However, on the home diamond Thanksgiving Day before some 500 faithful fans the Belleville "Marines" were at full value for the 9 safe blows they racked up to win by the decisive score of 8 to 3 with "Elongated Jim" Hunter scattering eleven hits and being given fine support in eight of the nine frames played.

The third and final game for the Intermediate "A" softball title of Ontario will be played between these two teams at Toronto on Thursday.

Game Late in Starting

Owing to inclement weather the second game of the series played here yesterday was over an hour late in starting as officials had to lay out a new softball diamond in the centre field of the oval at the Exhibition Park, the local softball diamond taking on a lake-like appearance as it was submerged from the morning's deluge. The delay resulted in but one game, although O.A.S.A. regulations had previously announced in case of a tie in the series the third game would be played directly following the second here. Conditions were so that such was impossible and the deciding game will be played in Toronto.

Phil Loft Delivers

Max Peoples' Marines got off to a flying start on a playing field that was just as strange to the locals as to Fort Erie, when they scored three runs in the initial frame. Jim Barriage opened with a sharp single to left, Ted Henn beat out a bunt for a hit as did Carson and the base paths were filled to capacity, when Gene LaBonne struck out swinging. Up stepped Phil Loft to deliver the moneyed blow, a hard single to deep left centre, that scored Barriage and Henn, Loft going to second and Carson to third on the throw in. The latter scored after Whitehead's long fly was caught in left. A single by "Heeb" Lake, the Fort Erie pitcher, a passed ball and Teal's single to centre gave the visitors a singleton in the top half of the third, but the Marines got that one back the next turn, when Carson opened with a double, moved up after Loft skied to right centre and scored on Valvo's error at the plate. A walk and hits by Wardaugh, Barriage and Henn's double gave the homesters two more in the fourth and they picked up the marbles.

The game's oddity came in the bottom half of the sixth, when Belleville scored two runs and had three left on base without the resemblance of a hit. Two errors, two walks and a brace of fielders' choices did the trick.

Made Bid in Seventh

Fort Erie made their big bid in the seventh when Pearson, Morris and Valvo all bunted in succession to jam the runway. Barnhart did likewise to squeeze in a run before Henn booted Lake's infield hit and over went another. Henn got Valvo at the plate and Wardaugh nailed Barnhart and also took Teal's line drive to end the visitors' big rally that saw eight men face Hunter.

Although Fort Erie touched Hunter for 11 safeties, most of them were of the infield nature. Hunter's control was good as he walked but one to Lake's three. Feature defensive plays were made by Whitehead's running catch of Valvo's drive in the fourth, Wardaugh's leap for Barnhart's smash in the second, Loft's running catch of Reid's fly in the third, Teal's catch of LaBonne's foul back of first in the third also stood out.

Numerous O.A.S.A. notables were present at the Intermediate O.A.S.A. final game here yesterday including President George Spooner, Secretary Frank Feaver, Mr. Alger, Ernie Simpson of Kingston and First vice president Harry Rollins.

"It looks as though the boys are working up for a real fight, so why not let them go to it?" commented Promoter Frank Tunney today after listening to Ivan (The Mad Russian) Rasputin expound as to how badly he would beat "Strangler Bob" Wagner at the Hume Arena Wednesday night. "Wagner seems to have other ideas regarding this business of disecting wrestlers. Don't forget both Wagner and Rasputin have decisions over Billie Watson and both are eager for a bout with Longson, that's just how important this meeting is", remarked Tunney, who also have Jack Kennedy and John Katan in the semi-final along with Karl Davis and Pierre de Glane to open the show.

Casual Comment

by K.J.C.

"Can you tell me the difference between a Scotsman and a coconut?" asked the life and soul of the party.

There was no answer.

"Well, you can get a drink out of a coconut, but not a——"

"Excuse me," butted in a voice in the group, "but I happen to be a Scotsman. Would you like a drink?"

"Sure," was the eager answer.

"Then go buy yourself a coconut."

All is Even.

After losing a tough ten innings struggle at Fort Erie on Saturday, the SACO "Marines" bounced back to even the series here yesterday, beating Fort Erie 8-3. Owing to inclement weather, that resulted in the teams being lucky to play one game on an improvised Fair Grounds diamond, the advertised third and final game could not be played here. It will be played at Toronto on Thursday.

Umpires Reg Fair and Geo. Campbell of Oshawa, had the large and handsome Intermediate "A" O.A.S.A. trophy here with them to present the winner. It was intended such honors should have been taken care of by President Geo Spooner, of Galt, Secretary Frank Feaver and our own Harry Rollins.

To even the series the "Marines" helped themselves to three runs in the first inning and were never headed. Fort Erie out-hit the Marines 10 to 9, but Jim Hunter scattered the visitors' hits well. Only in the seventh, when Fort Erie successfully bunted four times in succession, did Hunted experience any trouble as he was given grand support, especially by Whitehead in right. There was one for the book yesterday when the Marines tallied two runs and had three men left on base in the sixth and without registering anything that resembled a hit. Maybe they were saving their base hits for the third and final game in Toronto.

Cards Champions.

Billy Southworth's St. Louis Cardinals chalked up their second world series triumph in three years of big league baseball winning the 1944 series four games to two over their fellowtownsmen, the St. Louis Browns. For sentimental reasons the fans were favoring the Browns in their first attempt in a series, but the Cardinals possessed too much power and good pitching, which is a dividend-paying combination in baseball. The 41st world series, completed yesterday when the Cards won 3-1, was a better series than most had anticipated, or even hoped for. For instance a new world series record of strikeouts was established when the pitchers on both teams whiffed a total of 92. The previous series record strikeouts was in 1929 with 87. Showing they had good defensive power the Cardinals committed but one error, that being a questionable scoring against Stan Musial. YeYsYYt eyrY'aatgsrdeeYc went to American war services for the purchase of favors and sporting goods for the American fighting forces.

Holway Named.

"Toots" Holway, coach of junior hockey in Belleville, was named to represent Belleville at the Toronto Maple Leaf Hockey Club luncheon at Toronto today.

Boxing Comment.

With another of those popular boxing bouts coming up Friday night, here is a little comment regarding the fight show over at Oshawa last week. The Motor City press had the following to say: "Joey McPhee won the best bout of the card, in one of the semi-final go's when he defeated Jerry Downs of Belleville. The Belleville lad didn't want to meet Coy Wheeler so he switched to McPhee and perhaps later wished he stayed where he had been spotted. McPhee fought a lovely fight, using straight left lead with telling effect and concentrating on head blows. Downs, on the other hand, beat a tatoo on McPhee's ribs every time they came to close quarters. He also landed the odd overhand smash that could be heard in the back row. However, McPhee kept carrying the fight to Downs and his victory, by decision, was popular with the fans."

Remember When.

In one of the daffiest finishes in all world series history the New York Yankees defeated the Cincinnati Reds 7 to 4 in a ten inning game five years ago yesterday to win their fourth straight world championship in the fourth game of the series. The Reds fell apart in the ninth and tenth innings with the Yankees scoring five times on four hits and four errors.

Trouble Ahead.

Maybe Ivan Rasputin, the turbulent mad Russian of the wrestling ring doesn't know it, but Bob Wagner decisioned Bill Watson down in Ottawa last summer and is just as entitled to a bout with Billy Longson as is Rasputin. However, the hairy Russian says he is the No. 1 contender for a battle with Longson after decisioning Watson here last week. Apparently Promoter Frank Tunney out-guessed both Wagner and Rasputin, but what will Marse Tunney come back with if either win here? No matter which wins Wednesday night it's an assured fact that the winner will demand a match for the world title, which makes this meeting all the more important.

Juniors Out.

Well, Columbian Squires lost a title on the holiday in Windsor but they were far from disgraced. It is the first team that ever got to the junior final series in this city and it took an umpire to lose their chances for a title. Losing the first game the kids came back to win the second in thirteen frames and then were ordered to start the third and deciding tussle. Boyle, tired from his efforts in the first game, could not hang on and the umpire awarded the contest to Windsor, when he charged the Belleville team was stalling for time. Belleville is developing some good junior players that will be heard from in near future on senior squads. Congratulations to a game little team that got to the finals the hard way.

London Majors stayed in the Ontario Senior Baseball finals with a 3-0 victory over Welland Atlas Steeles at Welland Saturday behind the sparkling four-hit pitching of Tommy White. In the Intermediate section of the O. B. A., Chatham Arcades eliminated Toronto Baers from the playoffs Saturday by taking the second game of the best-of-three series 7-2 after winning the first by default. The Junior title went to Windsor Ottawa Cartage in straight games. Windsor copped an 8-6 victory over Hamilton Boosters Monday after taking the first game of the series.

Windsor also won the Junior Ontario Amateur Softball championship when the second game of a doubleheader yesterday with Belleville was forfeited to the Border City crew by the umpire. He claimed Belleville was stalling. The first game of the best-of-three final for the Intermediate Softball crown was taken by Fort Erie 4-3 at Fort Erie Saturday.

The Kibitzer

For the safety of your slam, use peppy ace-and-king showing signals. Like The Kibitzer's convention. A slammer should not jump to conclusions. He should coast there.

Get yourself comfortably seated in the south and deal out these cards:

♥7 4
♦A K 2
♣6 5 4 2

WEST

The bidding shows signs of wealth right off the bat. You open with three spades. Partner responds at once with three no trump. With luxury pouring out of both bids, you must get slambitious.

In response to a three bid, anything but four in that suit is a signal for showing two sure tricks. And with two sure tricks in partner's hand, a three bidder has visions of a slam.

Naturally, your suit will finally be the trump. It remains only for you to learn what? That you and your partner hold enough aces and kings to make reasonably sure that a slam is safe.

So here you bid four no trump; the ace-and-king asking signal. To this, north replies with a bid of five spades; the signal used for showing only one ace and two kings.

You now know that your side holds all four aces. But you are disappointed in learning that opponents have two kings. If the kings in partner's hand are not in the black suits, a slam may fail.

However, the two sure tricks promised by north will surelly wipe out some of the danger. Those two sure tricks of his are either A K of diamonds or the ace of diamonds and K Q or hearts.

With another king to toy with also, this has all the earmarks of being a good small slam until you see north's hand. Even then it looks as if the small slam depends on a successful club finesse.

If you are not expert at playing the cards, stop at five spades. With a heart lead, how would you go for 12 tricks? In a taxi?

Toronto Indians Eliminated in Ontario Rugby Football Union

FIVE GAMES PLAYED

By The Canadian Press

Sparkling displays by several football veterans featured the five-game holiday weekend football program in Ontario which saw Toronto Indians suffer elimination in the Ontario Rugby Football Union race and Hamilton Wildcats and Toronto Navy strengthen their respective grips on first place in the O. R. F. U. and the armed services league.

Indians met their fourth straight defeat of the season yesterday in the second game of a doubleheader in Toronto, being crushed 33-11 by Ottawa Trojans who racked up their first triumph in three starts and took over third place in the Ontario Union standing. Hagersville R. C. A. F. downed Camp Borden R. C. A. F. 15-12 in the opening game of the double bill to take second place in the services league.

In another Toronto doubleheader Saturday, Navy won its third straight triumph at the expense of the St. Thomas R. C. A. F. Hornets, 11-4, and Toronto Balmy Beach defeated Indians 26-5. It was the second win in two starts for Beaches who are in second place in the O. R. F. U.

The fifth game was at Hamilton where Joe Krol continued his sensational point-getting pace—he has 28 in three games—and led the Wildcats to a 12-7 conquest of the Trojans.

Tommy Daley and George Fraser were the biggest point-getters in Ottawa's rout of the Indians. Daley scored two touchdowns and Fraser got six points with three converts . four tries and one field goal. Emil Dagenais, Frank Dunlap and Ted Edwards got a touchdown apiece.

Could Not Hold Ottawa

Indians scored more points than in their previous three games put together but they were unable to hold the fast Ottawa halfbacks in check. Jack Harris pitched touchdown passes to Jim Cumming and Len Cassidy and the convert also came on one of his forward throws, Jack Becker being the receiver.

Sgt. Joe Richman and FO. Bill Douglas tallied touchdowns for Hagersville, FO. Art Stollery kicked a field goal and LAC. Doug. Smylie and Sgt. Doug. Ecott had converts. Sgt. Doug Pyser and LAC. Bobby Porter collected touchdowns for Camp Borden and Sgt. Fred Kljek converted each of them.

Krol scored 11 of Hamilton's 12 points Saturday, the other going to veteran Mel Lawson. Al Leach, George Fraser and Arnie McWatters shared Ottawa's seven points, Leach getting a touchdown.

Although he only scored one point, LS. Annis Stukus featured the Navy victory over St. Thomas by pitching touchdown passes to OS. M. F. Egan and LS. Tom Waldon. Stukus converted Waldon's touchdown. LAC Ray (Moon) Mullins kicked two singles for St. Thomas and LAC. Ed Morin collected two points with a safety touched.

Earl Selkirk kicked four converts and two singles for six Beach points and Pete Titanic, Leo Deadey, Sam Sward and Ross (Red) McKelvey had a touchdown apiece. Jack Jarvis got the five Indian points with a touchdown.

Windsor Wins Junior Softball Title From Columbian Squires, Taking Third Game by Forfeit

Winners Win Sunday but Locals Even Series on Monday in Thirteen Frames

Windsor, Oct. 10—(CP)—Windsor won the Ontario Amateur Softball Association Junior title in a weekend best-of-three series with Belleville, taking the deciding game by fortfeit, when umpire Arthur Ray ruled in the fourth inning, that the visitors were stalling.

Windsor was leading 11-0 when Ray stopped the game. Windsor had won the series opener Sunday 12-6 and Belleville tied it up yesterday with a 6-5 victory in 13 innings.

There were 20 errors in the Sunday game—nine being charged to Belleville and 11 to Windsor. Leading figure in the comedy of errors was Evon, Windsor shortstop, with five while Culkin topped the visitors in that department with three.

Windsor, getting their 12 runs from eight hits and nine walks along with opposition errors, was never headed in the first game. The locals collected one run in the third inning, added five in the sixth and then got four in the seventh and two in the eighth.

Belleville's six runs came on four hits and the 11 Windsor errors. Two were scored in the eighth inning and four in the ninth.

Stepowski went the route on the mound for Windsor and Boyle and Bunton shared hurling duties for Belleville. Fairhurst of Windsor was the game's leading hitter with three in five trips.

Tight Pitching Duel

The second game of the series yesterday was a tight pitching duel between Boyle and Rudling. Boyle allowed six hits over the 13 innings and Rudling eight.

Belleville staged a thrilling rally to tie the game in the ninth inning. The visitors had scored first with a run in the first inning. Windsor replied with two runs and then added one in the fifth and two in the eighth for what looked like a comfortable lead.

However Belleville opened up with a vigorous assault in the ninth inning for four runs to even things up. Then in the 13th they squeezed the winning rally across with a single, two walks and an error.

Windsor errors figured in the Belleville victory, the local team committing six misplays to three for the visitors.

Belleville Objected

Belleville openly objected to starting the third and deciding game . However, the original arrangements were carried out and the game got under way. Boyle, tired from his winning effort in the 13-inning game, was back on the mound and his offerings were no puzzle to local swatsmiths, who collected 11 runs with ease before umpire Ray decided in the fourth inning that Belleville was trying to delay the game so that it would be postponed because of darkness and awarded it — and the title — to Windsor.

INABILITY TO HIT IN PINCHES COSTS MARINES CONTEST

Fort Erie Lucky to Beat Sacos in Ten Innings at Home Saturday

SERIES ALL SQUARE

Although today it is just so much water under the bridge, the 4-3 loss which the locals sustained in Fort Erie on Saturday afternoon was really a tough one to take inasmuch it was a combination of errors and inability to hit in the pinch which cost the locals their chance to take the provincial championship with their win on Monday.

Eight men left on base during the early innings dispelled a chance for the locals to build up a substantial lead, while after gaining a two run advantage, it was errors on the part of the locals which allowed the Fort Erie nine to chase in the tieing and winning runs.

Although nicked for a total of nine hits over the ten inning route Jim Hunter deserved a better fate than was his. Not until the tenth inning did he permit more than one hit in any one inning, while on two occasions during the early part of the game the locals got three men aboard only to fail to hit in the pinch.

Both sides went down scoreless until the fifth inning when Carson got a life to advance on a passed ball and a fly to the outfield and crossed the plate as LaBonne flew to centre. The same player accounted for the locals' second run when in the seventh he homered to left putting SACO's two ahead.

Get Run Back

Fort Erie got one run back in the bottom half of the seventh as Reid doubled off LaBonne's glove. He advanced on a fly to the outfield and scored when Carson bobbled Lake's drive through short. In the ninth Fort Erie evened the score as Les Cunningham went all the way around as J. Barriage after a hard run mussed up his fly to left. The same batter proved himself a moneyed player in the tenth, when after Belleville scored without a semblance of a hit, he cracked out a single with two aboard to knock in the tieing and winning runs.

52,833 PERSONS SEE LOUISVILLE BEAT BALTIMORE

Series Squared at Two-All Due to Excellent Hurling of Ray Patton

Baltimore, Oct. 10 — (AP)—Their Little World Series squared at two-all, Louisville Colonels and Baltimore Orioles meet tonight in Municipal Stadium, where last night a record minor league crowd of 52,833 persons saw Louisville take a 5-4 decision.

Ray Patton was credited with the victory for the American Association champions, but his cause was aided considerably by some great relief hurling on the part of Dwight Simonds, who entered the fray after Patton weakened in the sixth.

The crowd, first to see a Little World Series in Baltimore since 1926, topped Sunday's 1944 world series throng of 36,568.

Manager Harry (Nemo) Liebold named the ace of his staff, Jim Wilson, to face the International Leaguers tonight. Wilson handcuffed the Orioles in the opener at Louisville 8-3. Ambrose (Bobo) Palica, who started that game for Baltimore, was manager Tommy Thomas' choice.

Louisville took the lead in the 1st inning last night, but the issue was not decided until Simonds pulled out of a hole by striking out three Oriole batters in the ninth.

Baltimore used four pitchers, starting off with Lefty Kleine, who didn't last the first inning. He was followed by Johnny Podgajny, Sam Lowry and Rolland Van Slate.

Had Four-Run Lead

Kleine was taken out as the Colonels scored a run in the first on three singles and an outfield fly. Nick Polly, Louisville third baseman, clouted one of Podgajny's fast balls into the left field stands for a home run with one on in the third. Steve Barath hit another to give the visitors a 4-0 lead in the same inning. Louisville added another in the fourth on two singles and a sacrifice.

St. Louis Cardinals Show Superb Pitching and Perfect Play To Win World Series

92 Strikeouts Sweeps All Series Records Off the Books

WIN 4 GAMES TO 2

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

St. Louis, Oct. 10 — (AP) — The best team in baseball won the world series and that's as it should be.

Superb pitching and perfect infield play by St. Louis Cardinals with an occasional flash of plate power called off the Browns' hot streak and left them losers 4-2 in games after a tough struggle.

Overshadowed by the total of 92 third-strike victims that swept all series records off the books was the routine destruction of American League rallies engineered by shortstop Marty Marion and the other Cardinal infielders. The Red Bird quartet handled 124 chances without a boot while the Brownies' inner circle bobbled seven of 126 tries.

It was pitching again in yesterday's finale played before a crowd of only 31,630, when Billy Southworth's crew regained the world championship they lost to the Yankees a year ago. Outstanding in the National's 3-1 clinching victory was the relief pitching of freshman Ted Wilks who failed miserably on his only start in the third game.

Stopped Browns Cold

He stopped the Browns without a hit in 3 2/3 innings after starter Max Lanier went on a wild streak in the sixth.

Wilks fanned four and Lanier whiffed five, making it 49 strikeouts thrown by the Card staff for another new record. The previous high for a six-game set was 44 hung up by the Chief Bender-Jack Coombs-Eddie Plank trio for the Athletics against the Giants in 1911.

Three singles mixed in with a costly error by Vern Stephens and a walk in the fourth inning scored three runs, overcame the Browns' 1-0 lead and meant the ball game.

Attendance held up satisfactorily, and the first all-St. Louis classic drew 206,708 paid to become the 5th successive million-dollar series with the help of $100,000 in radio rights that boosted the receipts to $1,006,122.

Individual player cuts were below the standard of recent years. The Cards' approximate winning slice of $4,334, and the losers' cheques for about $1,842 was reminiscent of 1933 and 1920 for respective previous lows.

McQuinn Leads Batters

Although the victors outhit the Browns, .240 to .831, George McQuinn, Luke Sewell's only consistent performer at the plate, led both teams with a .438 average and drove in five of his club's 12 scores. Emil Verban, the Cards' weak-hitting 2nd baseman picked up three for three the last day for a .412 mark that topped Walker Cooper's .318 and Stan Musial's .304. They were the only .300 hitters among the regulars.

There was no standout hero and nobody wore the goat's horns. Mort Cooper's feat of striking out 12 men, only one short of Howard Ehmke's all-time record in Sunday's game probably was the biggest thrill. For the Browns, Mary Christman's failure to hit was a major disappointment.

The Cards started swinging loosely for the fences Saturday as Harry (The Gate) Brecheen pitched himself in and out of trouble to come up with his first series victory 5-1. Cooper's 2-0 win over Denny Galehouse in one of the prettiest duels in recent years was the payoff. Even the most rabid Brownie fans were prepared for yesterday's defeat.

Turned in Fourth Game

The series tide turned in Saturday's fourth game, when Stan Musial found his batting eye and hammered a home run, a double and a single to spark a Card attack, which saw starter Sig Jakucki driven from the mound and 2 successors roughly handled.

Cardinal power continued to make the difference Sunday as Ray Sanders and Danny Litwhiler punched a pair of Galehouse's slants into the bleachers for the only two runs of an otherwise air-tight mound duel.

Only four home runs were registered in the six games and three of them came off Cardinal bats. Laabs of the Browns and W. Cooper of the Cards hit the only triples. Each team had nine two-base blows. The Cards outhit the Browns 49-36 on the series.

Sport Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, Oct. 10—(AP)—Chick Meehan, who was a good college football coach before he blossomed out as promoter of a new pro league, can't see why other college coaches are worried about the professional "threat" . . . As Chick sees it, the pros should make a special effort not to detract from the college coaches' importance . . . They're all in the same game, he argues, but in different sectors. Of course, they all depend to some extent on the same fans, but Meehan says his Trans-America League is steering shy of cities where Sunday afternoon school or college ball is a big thing . . . That, of course, might be merely showing that Chick is a smart promoter.

The Two-bitter End

Walt Woods and Harold Bradbury, who work together in Canton, Ill., had a two-bit bet on the opening game of the World Series, reports Scribe Jimmy Murphy. Woods won. Next day Bradbury wanted to get even but Woods refused to listen until his pal said: "I'll bet you two bits the Cardinals score in the 11th inning today." . . . Woods, of course, jumped at that one and displayed a red face when the game went into extra innings and the Cards finally won in the 11th.

SALMONBELLIES BEAT ST. KITTS IN SECOND GAME

Ike Hilderbrand, 17-Year-Old Forward,, Scores Four Goals

SCORE IS 13-4

By ERIC SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Oct. 10 — (CP)—Captain Bill Wilkes of New Westminster Salmonbellies, British Columbia lacrosse champions, today feels that his coaching efforts of the last season have not been wasted.

Reason: his best prospect, 17-year-old Ike Hildebrand, last night scored four goals as the coast titleholders downed St. Catharines Athletics, Ontario champions, 13-4 here in the second game of the best-of-five series for the Canadian championship.

The victory tied the series at one game apiece. St. Catharines won the first game 17-10 here Saturday night. Third game will be played here tonight.

Ike, a shifty player and fast on his feet, drew his check out of position each time to count. He scored three in the second quarter, added another in the fourth and passed to Frank Richardson, who sank the final goal of the game.

Athletics were unable to organize the same passing attacks they used in winning their first game and their defencemen left goalie Bill Whitaker unprotected on many occasions. During the match Whitaker stopped 29 direct shots and Walt Lee 21.

New Westminster, last year's champions and finalists for the national crown 16 times in the last 25 years, outplayed Athletics in every quarter except the first when St. Catharines finished on the long end of a 2-1 count. The Fishmen held them scoreless in the second while netting five and were ahead 8-3 going into the last quarter. Three of the second-quarter goals were scored while Bob Nelson was serving a minor penalty for slashing.

Other goal scorers for Salmonbellies were Bill Wilkes and Ritchie McPherson, with two each, Berty Bryant, Bill Dickinson, Ralph Douglas and Johnny Dale. Nelson, Bob Thorpe, Norm MacDonald and Roy (Pung) Morton scored for St. Catharines.

CHAPTER 17

"At that," he countered, a little dubiously, "you don't seem very excited over the ribbon."

"Well, frankly I'm not," she told him. "Of course it would have been exciting to have been there, but it was, after all, rather small fry. I'm out for bigger things. With this win behind me, I'm entering her in the Morris and Essex."

"You're what?" he expostulated.

"Entering Rowdy in the Morris and Essex," she repeated.

"Oh, come now, you've never been to the Morris and Essex. That's a stiff show, out of Rowdy's class. She's only a pup. You mustn't do that."

"Why not? Aren't you going to enter Gretel?"

"I might," he acknowledged.

"Well, then?"

"Look here," he said, a little desperately, "you've talked enough."

"I think," said Ann grimly, "that I'll have to change my mind. You're not a good loser at all."

Christopher looked so upset that she didn't know whether to cry or giggle. It was all she could do not to put her arms around him and give him a hug. But at the same time she had no intention of letting him spoof her with that blue ribbon yarn....

* * *

"You musn't talk with a thermometer in your mouth," Miss Drew reproved. "However, it's been in two minutes," she conceded, glancing at her watch. "You can take it out now."

She squinted at the little glass stick, and professionally, said nothing.

Ann asked, "What would you do if I died?"

"Why Miss Rivers, what a perfectly dreadful question! It makes my blood run cold!"

"No, but really."

"Why I—" Miss Drew faltered. "I'd have nothing more to do — here—"

"Very well, consider me dead," Ann announced, and swung her legs out of bed. "In other words, I'm cured, I'm going back to New York today."

Miss Drew was horrified. "Dr. Matheson wouldn't hear of it," she protested. "He's watching you very closely!"

Ann snorted as she thought of her stolen ride to Crestview the day before. "All right, telephone him and say that I threw a shoe at you and you can't manage me and you won't stay another minute."

"Dear me," Miss Drew murmured, floundering a little.

She said dear me again when she returned and found Ann completely dressed, even to her hat.

"Dr. Matheson said that since you'd had no fever for three days," she proclaimed formally, "it would be all right for you to be without a nurse. But under no circumstances are you to go back to New York. And he's absolutely right." Miss Drew puckered her brows anxiously.

Twenty minutes later, Ann was making her way across the lawn toward the kennels to pick up Rowdy.

"What's your hurry?" Christopher caught up with her in three long strides.

"Oh, hello." She tried to seem casual. But even though she was angry with him for fooling her about Rowdy, she couldn't help a lift of joy that he hadn't gone back to town before she wakened. "Don't you ever work?" she asked.

"Only under the most adverse circumstances. You and Smith would make a fine pair of slave-drivers. No, I waited over for Paul Freund this morning. He's coming to take the braces off the puppies' ears, and I want to see how they look befor they go on splints."

"Good! It saves me leaving you a note."

Christopher came to a halt. "Look here, you don't think you're going back to a stuffy city and live on salads or whatever it is that women live on when they're alone, do you?"

"Tom'll see that I eat proper dinners," she reminded him. "Tom loves good restaurants; he makes a hobby of them. He's got them all written down in a little black book."

"That's enough of Tom! Why not stay here?"

"Don't be absurd."

"I'm not absurd. I only come up weekends, and I'll use the guest cottage."

"You really are sweet," she admitted. "But it's impossible, thanks just the same."

"Why?"

"It just is," she said a little lamely.

He smiled with an incredible smugness. "Maybe you're afraid you're falling in love with me?"

Ann gave a small gasp. "You appear to forget," she heard herself saying, "that I'm going to marry Tom Barton."

He kept on smiling. "You wouldn't marry Tom Barton if he were the last man on earth."

She opened her mouth to reply but she couldn't find any words sufficiently scathing to put him in his place.

Then he remarked pleasantly. "Here comes Paul now."

He whistled as Paul climbed down from his shabby station wagon. Paul started toward them.

"Well, you don't look any the worse after yesterday," he began jovially, smothering Ann's hands in his warm grasp.

She trod on his foot. At the same moment, Christopher trod on Paul's other foot and put in quickly, "Why should she, after a win like that?"

Paul looked confused. "Sure, sure," he hastily agreed.

Ann controlled her mirth. Poor Paul- He didn't know what it was all about. "Christopher and I had an argument last night," she hurried to explain with a widening of her eyes which, decoded, meant, Just listen and look dumb. "When he brought me the news that Rowdy had won at the sweepstakes, he expected me to be all puffed up over such a piffling triumph."

Paul had sudden difficulty with his breathing. "Excuse me, I swallowed wrong," he apologized. "Go ahead."

"He tried to persuade me not to enter her for the Morris and Essex," Ann continued. "He says she's too old for the puppy class and too young to meet the competition in American Bred."

"I never mentioned the American Bred class," Christopher expostulated. "Even the Novice would be too tough for her."

"Wait a minute, wait a minute," Paul grinned. "Let me get this straight. You mean that on the strength of Rowdy's win yesterday, Ann wants to scratch the Novice class and put the pup right up in the big time of the American Bred?"

"That's it," Christopher acknowledged. "Tell her she's crazy, will you?"

Paul's grin widened. A wicked gleam came into his round blue eyes. "Why not, if Rowdy won? You intend to enter Gretel, don't you?"

Christopher looked as if he wanted to punch Paul's nose. In another moment Ann knew the cat would be out of the bag, and for reasons of her own she preferred the cat to remain in retirement. Besides, a brilliant idea suddenly struck her.

Ann was perfectly aware that going back to New York was not the most sensible move at this point.

"Paul, listen," she digressed "How about taking a boarder for a week or two? A couple of boarders?"

Christopher was ahead of her. "Nothing doing," he firmly ordained. "You stay right here."

"It's Paul's place or salad lunches," she returned with equal firmness.

Paul's face lit up. "Say, you've got something there. I'll drive you back with me today. Mom'll put ten pounds on you before you know it." He winked broadly. "And at the same time, we can get Rowdy in swell shape for the Morris and Essex."

"Exactly," Ann approved "That's just what I had in mind."

"No, but joking aside, we've got a dozen cabins standing empty."

"You'll need them," Christopher said dryly. "Ann has a retinue that follows her about. I ought to know."

"Don't pay any attention to him, Paul."

"It's all right with me. The more the merrier."

"The more the less merry," Christopher corrected. "Wait till Ann's sister, Helen, and Ann's Mr. Barton descend on you."

"Go ahead, pull my leg some more," Paul invited with sublime good nature. "I can take it."

Christopher grunted. "You'll think it's yanked off when they get through with you," said he. "Come on, let's get started on those ears. No, not you, lady. It's drafty in the kennels. You stay out here in the sun."

Ann watched them go. "I've only odds and ends to pack, Paul," she called after them. "I'll meet you in your car."

She saw Christopher waver. He looked back in indecision. He wanted to get Paul alone, that was obvious, but at the same time he felt that Ann wasn't safe to be left to her own devices. She waved blithely and hurried toward the house.

"I almost busted out laughing," Paul confided with relish, as his station wagon bounced laboriously toward the smooth pavement of the Post Road. "'If you make a liar out of me,' he says to me, 'I'll knock your block off'."

"I hope you were sufficiently resourceful to assure Mr. Christopher Wain that nature had saved you the trouble," Ann murmured. "Say, look here," she sat up abruptly. "You didn't, by any chance, make me out the liar, did you?"

"You mean, did I let on you were there yesterday? Not on your life. It's too good. Wait'll I tell Carol. She'll get a kick out of it. You and Wain are just like a couple of kids. It's great to be in love, huh?"

HOW TO RELIEVE
PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is natures' warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

Coldwell Quotes Gen. Simonds As Saying Reinforcements 'Satisfactory'

Ottawa, Oct. 10 (CP)—M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader said at a press conference today he had been informed by Maj.-Gen. Guy Simonds of Kingston, Ont., a Canadian Corps Commander in France, that reinforcements being received are "satisfactory."

Mr. Coldwell said he had not known of charges that insufficiently-trained Canadian troops were being sent to the front line until he returned to Canada yesterday, but he had questioned Gen. Simonds on the matter for his own satisfaction.

"Gen. Simonds told me that both reinforcements and supplies received by the Canadian troops are satisfactory," he said in reply to questions.

(Major Conny Smythe of Toronto charged in a statement on his return from overseas three weeks ago that reinforcements being received overseas were "green, inexperienced and poorly trained.")

Mr. Coldwell went to London by air last month to attend a conference of British Commonwealth Labor and Socialist Parties and went on to visit Canadian troops in France and Belgium.

The C.C.F. leader said:

1. The Canadian Army Medical Service is regarded "as perhaps the best in Europe." Men wounded in Belgium or France in the morning are carried to England in air ambulances and are in comfortable hospital beds by evening.

2. Some soldiers asked questions about the home defence army of men called for compulsory military service who have volunteered to go overseas. They wondered if such men would be made available for service overseas if the need arose. Mr. Coldwell said he told them his party would support whatever was considered necessary to win the war.

3. He saw 17,000 German prisoners at Dieppe, who were transferred to England in landing barges.

4. 1,918,000 houses in southern England, including London, have been reported damaged by robot bombs but the actual total is less as houses were put down as damaged each time they were hit and some had been hit several times. A house was counted damaged if only a window pane were broken.

5. All parties in the United Kingdom are anxious to obtain close international co-operation. Even in their infancy robot bombs have caused so much damage that it has been recognized international control is essential if destruction is to be prevented when they have been enlarged and their range extended.

Mr. Coldwell said Canadian soldiers were interested in developments in the Japanese war and he had been told a considerable number would enlist for service against the Japanese. They expected they would be given the opportunity of enlisting for service in that theatre.

Allied Press Section Moves To Paris Office

London, Oct. 10 (AP)—The press section of Allied Supreme Headquarters moved to Paris today with 45 war correspondents.

The correspondents attended the regular morning "briefing" at old Shaef headquarters in Britain and had one hour to write their stories before boarding special planes for France. The customary afternoon conference was scheduled for 5 p.m. at the new press headquarters in a Paris hotel.

"Moving closer to the front will shorten our lines of communications many miles and should considerably speed up the relay of official news," a headquarters spokesman said.

For the initial move, press services were permitted to send two correspondents and individual newspapers one. The Associated Press is represented by James M. Long and Lewis E. Hawkins.

Report Says Cody Will Resign As Pres. of U. of T.

Toronto, Oct. 10 (CP)—It was reported today in university circles that Dr. H. J. Cody will submit his resignation as President of the University of Toronto to the University Senate Friday.

Dr. Cody who has been President of the University since 1932, declined to discuss the reports which say that the resignation is linked with the appointment of a Chancellor to succeed the late Sir William Mulock who died Oct. 1. Just before Sir William's death he had been confined in his office for another four years by the University Board of Governors who arranged that in the event of his death the President would discharge the duties of Chancellor until a successor was appointed.

Now 75, Dr. Cody is a native of Embro in Oxford County, Ont. One-time Ontario Minister of Education, he resigned the rectorship of St. Paul's Anglican Church in Toronto to become President of the university. He had served St. Paul's parish from the time of his ordination in 1894.

He was elected Bishop of Nova Scotia in 1904 and Archbishop of Melbourne, Australia, in 1921 but rejected both to continue his service to St. Paul's.

22 Injured When Trains Crash

Philadelphia, Oct. 10—(AP)— At least 22 persons were injured and hundreds of others dazed when a crowded commuters' train, its brakes reportedly failing, crashed into the rear of a parked train in the Pennsylvania railroad's suburban station in mid-city Philadelphia today.

Most of the 350 passengers in the five car Chestnut Hill local were thrown to the aisles in a spray of shattering window glass as the trains came together with a roar that rumbled through the building and sub-surface concourses.

Women passengers screamed and fainted. Passengers standing up waiting to disembark tumbled over in piles. Seats were wrenched loose and the first coach of the moving electric train and the rear of the parked train were wrecked. The shock shattered windows even in the doors of coaches.

Railroad porters and other workers wheeled some of the injured to the surface in waiting wheel chairs.

LONDON WANTS OLYMPIC GAMES

London, Oct. 10 (CP-Reuter) — Three British members of the International Olympic Committee today went on record as putting in a bid for the next Olympics to be held in the "scarred and battered" city of London.

The three, Lord Aberdare, Lord David Burghley, a famous pre-war athlete, and Sir Noel Curtis Bennett issued a statement to that effect and suggested the games could be held in London with even greater efficiency and with far wider facilities than would have been possible before the outbreak of hostilities.

They said the bid for the next Olympics was in reply to an American statement published here in which Avery Brundage, United States member of the Olympic committee, advocated early resumption of the international games after the war.

Brundage was reported as saying "London, half-destroyed by bombs, will have a lot more important things to do than stage an athletic meeting after the war," adding "I know that Los Angeles is ready to hold the Olympic games at any time."

Air Cadets Will Hold Church Parade Sunday

Ottawa, Oct. 10 — (CP) — Air cadets will hold church parades throughout Canada next Sunday, it was announced today at the headquarters of Air Cadet League of Canada. It is estimated here that more than 31,000 cadets will attend the indoor and outdoor services.

FO. M. Reeves, Madoc, Destroys Enemy Plane

London, Oct. 10 — (CP Cable) — More than 200 Canadian heavy bombers dropped tons of explosives on the German industrial city of Bochum last night and returning crews reported the entire city seemed ablaze.

Numerous enemy night fighters circled the city but its searchlights were unable to concentrate on the bombers because of cloud cover.

Among squadrons participating were the Lion, Moose, Ghost, Thunderbird, Goose and Bison.

During weekend battles over southern England and western Germany Canadian Mosquito squadrons met German night fighters in strength for the first time in a month and destroyed four. A delayed dispatch from Holland described how an R.C.A.F. Spitfire squadron last Thursday pounced on 15 German planes, destroying five and damaging another. The air duel was fought 15,000 feet above the tip of the Allied corridor pointing through the Netherlands to Germany.

The Germans were so surprised they could fire only twice at the Canadian fighters and missed both times.

Sqdn. Ldr. E. P. Wood of Toronto was credited with 2 1/2 kills. FO. F. W. Thomson, Windsor, Ont., and FO. M. Reeves of Madoc, Ont., each got one enemy plane and FO. S. A. Tush of Almonte, Ont., was credited with a "damaged" when the Messerschmitt he was attacking spun earthward but was not actually seen to crash.

ATTACK LORIENT, ST. NAZAIRE

London, Oct. 10 — (CP-Reuter)— The German radio said today the Allies have begun strong attacks on the Brittany ports of Lorient and St. Nazaire.

The radio, quoting a front dispatch, did not specify whether the attacks on the former U-boat bases where pockets of Germans still are holding out, were by land or air.

Hold Funeral Services For Wendell Willkie

New York, Oct. 10 —(CP)— Funeral services will be held today for Wendell L. Willkie, the 1940 Republican candidate for the presidency of the United States. His body lay in state at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church here while messages of sympathy continued to pour in from many parts of the "one world" in which he took such a vital interest.

The man who polled 22,333,801 votes in his losing campaign against President Roosevelt died early Sunday at Lenox Hill Hospital, which he entered Sept. 6 for a rest and physical checkup. Death resulted from coronary thrombosis after he contracted a streptoccic throat infection last Wednesday which affected the heart muscles.

His family said the body of the 52-year-old former public utility executive would be sent to Rushville, Ind., where burial will be in the family plot. Date of burial will be determined by the return of Mr. Willkie's son, Lieut. Philip Willkie, U.S.N.R., now on convoy duty in the Atlantic.

Mr. Willkie's death left unanswered one of the moot questions of the presidential campaign—which candidate, if either, he intended to endorse.

A few days before he entered hospital Mr. Willkie told an Associated Press reporter he had not yet made up his mind whom he would support.

ARMED TRAWLER SUNK

London, Oct. 10 —(CP)— British light naval forces sank a German armed trawler off the Hook of Holland early Sunday and damaged three other enemy ships which retired inshore, the Admiralty announced today.

Original Don Cossack Chorus Gives Brilliant Performance Of Russian National Music

Russian music and folk song which have for many generations exercised a powerful influence on music outside of Russia, retain its great charm for people of other lands today because in truth it expresses the soul of the vast Russian Empire of many people. Proof of the power of Russian music and song and of the response of an audience to this national music was given at the Belleville Collegiate on Monday night when under the auspices of the Students' Council one of the greatest and most responsive audiences in the city's musical history heard the Original Don Cossack Chorus under the brilliant direction of Serge Jaroff. The performance is one that will linger long in memory for the supreme merit of the performance.

From the moment when the dashingly-clad singers, wearing the black and red dress of the Don marched upon the stage to set the atmosphere of the night of song, to the last note it was a festival of song, of folk music, of the stately and mystic sweep of the church music of Russia. Barriers of language offered no obstacle to the enjoyment of the numbers chosen with a delicate sense of appeal in order to give a thoroughly satisfying program. The performance was majestic in its sweep of passion and emotion, from the most delicate notes, which at times were almost less loud than a breath and yet easily heard, to the mighty sweep of other numbers.

Russia is a land of song and the Russians are natural singers. It is land rich in folklore, ballad and lyric. So the audience found when they heard the Original Don Cossack chorus. Like the lyric these singers themselves possess spontaniety and intensity in their art in every musical phrase and expression. Theirs is a hearty, lifelike robust and virile sense of art whether its expression be in the softest and most delicate tones or more passionate parts.

The chorus is like a vast organ responding to every touch of the master direction of the conductor, but it is an organ of human voices of great range and gifts. Every mood finds in the Don Cossack's a complete expression. In any one of the numbers it seemed as if a thousand blended notes were sung and woven.

The program opened in a religious mood in which the majesty of Russian church music and the depth of Russian faith found apt interpreters of the music of the great Russian composers. The four numbers of this section were really portions of the religious service of the Russian church. The second group of numbers ran a wide range from the music of Shvedoff in "The Exchange of Diplomatic Notes" to the light and naive "Who Knows?" to "Tachanka" "the machine gun cart in action

In the third group were marching songs, folksongs, a recruiting song, "Dark Eyes" (a Gypsy song), well known abroad, and "Cossack Song" which further revealed the wealth of music in the chorus.

At the close of the second and third groups, Russian dance music was sung while two adept dancers thrilled the audience with their rhythmic whirling measures. As an encore at the close, the chorus sang in a subdued mood the Russian words of a hymn, forming a fitting finale to an evening of great music sung by a brilliant ensemble.

Through the medium of this chorus the audience could come to know something of the spirit that animates Russia so deeply. It was a revelation of the nation's music in the field of song.

The public owes a great debt to the Students' Council of the Collegiate on their enterprise in bringing this great chorus aggregation to Belleville.

DELUGE OF EXPLOSIVES HURLED AT AACHEN

Attack Follows Refusal To Accept Surrender Demand

Americans and Germans Fight in Ft. Driant Tunnels

By DON WHITEHEAD
(AP War Correspondent)

Outside Aachen, Oct. 11 —(CP)— The fate of Aachen was sealed today when the German commander of the garrison there declined to accept the U. S. 1st Army's 24-hour ultimatum to surrender the city.

At exactly noon the attackers began hurling a terrible weight of heavy shells and aerial might against the ancient city of Charlemagne. Eight-inch Long Toms and 105-mm. rifles unloosed a thunderous assault.

The cacophony signalled a warning to the rest of Germany that cities will be destroyed if they are turned into fortresses.

Dive-bombers roared out of the sky and dumped their explosives about the enemy—hiding in cellars and the rubble of buildings battered by previous shelling and bombing.

Not All Wanted to Fight.

Not all the German troops inside Aachen wanted to stay and fight to the death as their Fuehrer had ordered. Before noon more than 100 slipped through their own lines. They said many more wanted to accept the ultimatum, but their officers would not let them.

At dawn the attackers saw hundreds of white sheets hanging from Aachen windows—obviously placed by civilians who had defied Nazi orders for evacuation of all towns in this area.

If he accepted the ultimatum, the German commander of Aachen was to send a representative under a flag of truce to the railway on the outskirts of the city and arrange the surrender.

At 10:50 a.m. no one had appeared. Automatically the plans for battering Aachen by artillery and air began to take shape. Noon was set for the opening of the gun crews. They stood in readiness.

Dive bombers were alerted and within a few minutes were winging toward Aachen.

"Yesterday we told the Germans in Aachen to surrender or we would destroy their city," a high ranking officer said. "This morning they decided to let us do it. The officers refuse to surrender. Now we have to break the will of the officers.

Many Surrender.

"This ultimatum is not without its mixed blessings. We got a lot of prisoners. Each one of them was carrying a copy of the leaflets we dropped. There were about 100 in one group who came out of their pillboxes—and that is a lot of men when they are inside pillboxes. It saves us the trouble of digging them out."

In a cage nearby were 19 prisoners taken out of Aachen. A Nazi lieutenant was sleeping off the effects of a spree which resulted when all troops inside Aachen yesterday were issued whisky and wine rations—one bottle of whisky to three men, and a bottle of wine for each two men.

Many of their comrades wanted to surrender without fighting for Aachen, the captives said, but the officers threatened to shoot any who did not stand and fight. The Aachen garrison had S. S. officers commanding troops to keep them at their posts.

Hear Each Other's Orders

South of the siege site, 3rd Army men and Germans battled underground in a winding tunnel at Port Driant before Metz, ricochetting bullets off the walls. Americans and Germans were so close they could hear each other's orders.

Farther south, Americans virtually cleared the enemy from Parroy Forest, and scored gains east of Luneville and Epinal. A house-to-house fight was on for Maiziere six miles above Metz.

The U. S. 3rd Army was fighting house-to-house in Maizieres Les Metz, five miles north of the French fortress city of Metz. East of Luneville, 3rd Army troops advanced about a mile.

Positions were improved east of Epinal despite increased German cannon fire.

A substantial bridgehead was reported established across the Moselotte river in the Le Thillot sector, where "heavy losses were inflicted by the enemy." The Longagoutte and Gehan forests were largely mopped up.

West of Belfort, where the U. S. 7th and French 1st armies are striving to drive through the Belfort gap between the Vosges and Alps, "progress has been made in the Champagney region," headquarters said. The last Allied position reported was within eight miles of Belfort.

Aachen Test Case

Many high in Allied military circles consider Aachen a test case for all Germany. The action of the Aachen garrison may well set the pattern for sieges of other German cities as they are approached. A quick surrender or overwhelming of Aachen might mean a speedier termination of the war.

Headquarters disclosed the presence of another full Allied army on the western front — the French 1st Army, commanded by Gen. Jean de Lattre de Tassigny, which has been linked with the U.S. 7th Army in the 6th Army group on the southern flank.

All But 10 of 520 In Burgundy Village Massacred by Huns

New York, Oct. 11 —(AP)— The Paris radio said today that German S. S. troopers had massacred all but 10 of the 520 inhabitants in the Burgundy village of Comblanchien, in reprisal for an incident in which the villagers were innocent.

The broadcast said six German soldiers had clashed one night with some of their comrades, and shots were fired. The report said S. S. men from an armored train near the village held the inhabitants responsible, threw incendiary grenades into houses and machined-gunned those trying to escape the flames.

Canadians Land Fresh Forces Behind Nazis

London, Oct. 11 — (CP-Reuter)— The 1st Canadian Army has landed fresh forces behind the Germans in the Schelde pocket at Breskens, the German overseas radio said today.

The German radio gave this picture of the situation:

"The dramatic battle for the Schelde estuary grows in intensity from hour to hour. Under cover of artificial fog the Allies have landed new forces in the rear of the German Schelde bridgehead, 20 miles northeast of Bruges. Apart from the 9th Canadian Infantry Brigade other English and Canadian formations participated in the battle in this area. The first wave consisted of about 3,000 Canadian soldiers who landed in small assault boats."

13th Tanker From Shipway, 13 Persons at Table, 13 on Launching Program

Portland, Ore., Oct. 11 — (AP) —There's nothing halfway about Henry J. Kaiser's Swan Island shipyard, even in the way it flaunts superstition. Friday the 13th the yard will deliver the 13th tanker from shipway No. 1. There will be 13 persons on the launching program, and 13 diners at the sponsor's table.

CHARGED FOR RAISING RENTS

Kitchener, Oct. 11 — (CP)—Mrs. Mary Richardson, convicted last Friday on three charges of illegally raising rents and of failing to give proper notices was fined $200 by Magistrate H. R. Polson on the rentals charges and $25 and costs for violating the Prices Board's regulations regarding notices.

'Let Our Thoughts, Prayers, Efforts Be on Final Clinch in West'—Smuts

Johannesburg, Oct. 11 — (CP) — Prime Minister Jan Christiaan Smuts said tonight that "the war is now everywhere at or near the doors of Germany and the last phase has now been reached in the west."

"The German people are desperate and are led by desperadoes who expect no mercy and to whom none will be shown," the Field Marshal said in a speech opening the Transvaal Provincial Congress of the United Party.

He continued:

"The bitterness and horror of this final struggle in the west may well surpass anything that has so far happened in this war.

"Let our thoughts, our prayers and our efforts be concentrated on that final clinch in the west."

Memel, East Prussian Port, Surrounded by Russians

BRITAIN'S FORTRESSES ON STILTS GUARD HOME SHORES

Here are three of the "island fortresses" that have guarded British shores unsung during the hectic days when the war was on Britain's doorstep. It was revealed that such fortresses are guarding the Thames Estuary, they are manned by Royal Artillerymen and their functions include protection of east-coast shipping. Note how the three are connected by catwalks. Each tower is heavily armed with anti-aircraft guns and machine-guns.

BRITISH TROOPS CAPTURE TOWN OF PORTO EDDA

German Garrison on the Island of Corfu Now Isolated

500 PRISONERS TAKEN

Rome, Oct. 11 —(AP)— British troops in Albania have captured the port of Sarande (Porto Edda), isolating the German garrison on the island of Corfu, it was announced today.

Allied Headquarters said also that "patrolling is active" in Greece, but there was no indication whether the land forces of the Adriatic have moved beyond captured Corinth toward Athens.

Sarande, supply port for the Germans on Corfu, was captured after a hard battle, it was said.

About 500 prisoners were taken.

With the port in British hands there appeared little possibility that the Germans in Corfu, last reported to total a regiment, would be able to escape to the mainland.

Stiff Resistance.

"The troops who first penetrated into the western outskirts of the town met with stiff resistance but the launching of a big attack with artillery support resulted in the taking of the area," said the official description of the Sarande battle.

"Pockets of resistance continued but by 10 a.m. Oct. 10 these had been overcome and consolidation in the town and on the hills overlooking the port was completed."

Balkan air force Beaufighters with Mustang escort attacked barracks and railyards at Kriz, in Yugoslavia 30 miles southeast of Zagreb. The escort shot down a Dornier-217 and two single-engined biplanes.

At Senj, on the Dalmation coast southeast of Fiume, an enemy ship was left afire when Beaufighters hit it with 25 rockets.

The British destroyer H.M.S. Wilton and a heavily-armed landing craft shelled German troops and gun positions on the Albanian coast north of Corfu Oct. 8 with good results.

WIDEN BEACHHEAD TO FOUR MILES ON SCHELDE RIVER

Canucks Then Push 3 Miles Inland In Backdoor Attack On 20,000 Huns

BEACHHEAD STRONGER

By ROSS MUNRO
(C.P. War Correspondent.)

With the 1st Canadian Army, Oct. 11 (CP Cable)—Canadian infantry operating north of Antwerp swung a column west today and pushed 1 1-2 miles along a narrow spit leading to South Beveland island on the north side of the Schelde Estuary. Veteran Ontario troops led the way into this new advance.

East of the neck of the spit, western and Quebec troops cleared woods along the Antwerp-Breda road and mopped up a wide area.

Canadian infantry on the south side of the Schelde struck out from their beachhead, which now is four miles wide, and pushed it three miles inland in the drive to trap perhaps 20,000 Germans barring their way to the great port of Antwerp.

Unable to Bring up Nazi Crack Troops

The Germans were unable to bring up any of their crack troops of the 64th division to block the advance because these forces now are committed to the Leopold Canal battle, where they have suffered heavily, or are held in reserve in the western side of the schelde pocket.

The Canadians still are lightly opposed by line-of-communication and coastal garrison troops on the main perimeter of the beachhead, but in the coastal town of Hoofdplaat street-fighting continues between Ontario infantry and some tough Nazis.

Canadian Forces Grow Steadily

More Canadian forces have passed into the beachhead, however, and the position there is becoming stronger every hour. A day and night ferry service is running along the coast taking supplies and equipment right under heavy German coastal guns.

Canadian infantry last night launched another attack against the German Schelde pocket, striking through a gap between the eastern end of the Leopold Canal and the head of an inlet which runs south from the Schelde. The Germans today were strongly opposing this attack which is in an area four miles south of the beachhead.

Battered German forces crowded around the Leopold Canal bridgehead south of Aardenburg today were not showing any inclination to make further serious attacks.

Western troops in this bridgehead have their second wind now and are in firm position to withstand any more assaults.

SOVIET LEADER WARMLY PRAISES BRITISH, U.S. AID

Moscow Talks Moving Forward on New Note of Harmony

BANQUET IS HELD

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Oct. 11 —AP)— Talks between Prime Minister Churchill, Premier Stalin and their aides moved forward today on a new note of harmony sounded at a state luncheon yesterday at which the Soviet leader warmly praised British and American contributions to victory and toasted post-war Allied collaboration.

Twice during the elaborate 3 1-2-hour luncheon in Spirodonovka Palace, Stalin rose to emphasize the ties binding Russia and her Western Allies.

The first time, he emphasized the need for post-war co-operation in the interests of international security, declaring that "peace-loving nations are never prepared but aggressor nations always seem ready." This, he said, must in the future be avoided.

Later, after other speakers had acclaimed the Red Army's triumphs, Stalin asserted that Russia could not have done what she has done without the aid of the Allies.

Praised Military Might.

He praised the military might gathered by Britain and the United States, singling out for particular comment the high quality of British-American planning and the work of the merchant marine of both countries. He said Canada had given "much assistance" to the Soviet Union.

Turning toward United States Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, seated on his left, the Premier emphasized Russia's gratitude for material aid given by the United States. Previously Mr. Stalin also had paid a special compliment to State Secretary Hull.

Mr. Churchill was visibly moved by Mr. Stalin's acknowledge of the British-American war effort.

"It is a sign of a great nation and a great man to be magnanimous and generous," the Prime Minister said. "I have always thought, and I think now, that it was the Red Army which clawed the guts out of the filthy Nazis."

Harriman Spoke Twice.

Mr. Harriman, who spoke twice in response to Mr. Stalin's remarks, said the United States was not prepared for war but that Japan had rendered a service by "throwing us into it."

Stalin was clad in a light khaki uniform and wore no medals or decorations, but the star of a Soviet Marshal gleamed from each shoulder. Mr. Churchill wore a red-tabbed colonel's uniform and a row of ribbons on his left breast.

RYUKYU ISLANDS, 200 MILES FROM JAPAN, RAIDED

58 Surface Craft Sunk or Damaged And 89 Planes Wiped Out by Task Force

NO U.S. SHIPS LOST

Pearl Harbor, Oct. 11 — (AP) — In the boldest naval stroke of the Pacific war, delivered 200 miles south of Japan, the American 3rd Fleet has launched carrier planes against the Ryukyu islands.

As the climax of powerful blows delivered since Aug. 30 in the Philippines, Palaus and Bonins, Admiral Halsey's task force wiped out 89 planes and sank or damaged 58 surface craft — every vessel sighted — in the Ryukyus, 500 miles from the China coast, Monday.

Not one American warship was hit by the enemy in an operation which, in ways, was more daring than the 1942 carrier-based raid on Tokyo inasmuch as the carrier in that case retired while the planes flew on to China.

A communique yesterday said the U.S. planes swept over the 570-mile-long chain "in great force." They shot down 14 planes, wiped out 75 on the ground and could find no warship bigger than a destroyer. It was among 12 sunk. Japan's home fleet kept out of sight and the home-based air force did not come to Ryukyu's aid.

Task force raids, which have overwhelmed such strategic areas as Manila, have resulted since August in knocking out more than 1,100 enemy planes and 500 surface craft ranging from destroyers and big cargo vessels to luggers.

In all these raids not a warship has been damaged.

Significantly in demonstrating how the American fleet can disperse its units in strength, this blow fell one day after battleships spent all day Sunday blowing to bits Japanese defences on Marcus Island, more than 1,500 miles east of the Ryukyus.

A Japanese Imperial communique today said 400 United States carrier planes made Monday's attack on the Ryukyu islands.

Tokyo claimed that "more than 26 of the enemy planes were shot down and asserted only "slight damage" was done.

Berlin Says Twin Thrusts Directed Toward Prussia

Ten Divisions Are Trapped In Pocket North of Memel

London, Oct. 11 — (CP) — The East Prussian port of Memel is surrounded by Russian troops who have reached the Baltic Sea north and south of the city, the Berlin radio announced late today.

Earlier, the enemy said that the Russians had launched two heavy attacks north of Warsaw and that the German Army had abandoned its frontier bastion of Taurage, just across the border in Lithuania from East Prussia.

Memel is the northernmost town of Germany. It was taken from Prussia by the Allies after the last war. Hitler seized it from Lithuania in a bloodless coup on March 21, 1939.

Eight-mile Gain

One of the new Russian drives north of Warsaw gained six miles toward the southern boundary of East Prussia, the Germans said. This was in the area of Rozan along the Narew river. Rozan is 33 miles from the wild, Masurian Lake country of East Prussia and 43 miles northeast of Warsaw.

"The autumn offensive is in full swing," Berlin said. "It may now be said that the general attack on E. Prussia has opened. This offensive was expected. The thrust past Lomza (in northern Poland) is directed toward Allenstein and Danzig, and the thrust from Memel is toward Tilsit and Konigsberg," capital of East Prussia and a city of 368,000.

The new Russian drives were located north of Warsaw and south of Roman, which lies near the Narew river northeast of the rubbled Polish capital. The Germans acknowledged local breaches which they said were "cleared or liquidated."

Taurage lies on the Jura river 20 miles from Tilsit on the road between that city and besieged Riga, capital of Latvia. It is in an area where from three to five German divisions were shattered and threatened with entrapment, on the basis of Moscow reports.

Lightning Move

Advancing along the last 50 miles separating them from the sea south of Memel, the Russians swept along the Niemen River in a lightning move which appeared likely to cut off from three to five enemy divisions between Taurage and Kirieches Haff.

Ten German divisions, totalling perhaps 150,000 men, were trapped yesterday in a Latvian pocket north of Memel when Gen. Ivan C. Bagramian's battering ram overran the Baltic beaches 15 miles north of the besieged and shell-rocked port.

Red Army forces southeast of Memel were less than 18 miles from the German communications centre of Tilsit, in East Prussia, and eight miles from East Prussia's northern frontier. Only 48 miles of the Niemen River—the Germans' defence line along the entire north of East Prussia—remained in German hands. Red artillery began shelling Tilsit.

Move Down Two Highways.

The Army newspaper Red Star reported Soviet tank forces pushing down two highways toward Memel—one leading into the port from the north from captured Palange, and the other the Memel-Tilsit highway north of the Niemen.

German forces being compressed into the triangle formed by Memel, a tiny strip of southwestern Lithuania and the Niemen north of Tilsit included a large number of tankmen and crews of self-propelled guns, who have lost their weapons. Battered infantry forces also were believed in the newly-developing pocket.

Attack German Shipping.

Red air force bombers and fighters attacked German shipping at Memel and Riga, with low-flying Stormoviks joining the assaults on transports and warships in both harbors. Other aircraft bombed and strafed convoys and individual vessels off the coast from north of Memel to Konigsberg.

Many Rumors Heard In Neutral Capitals

London, Oct. 11 —(CP)— With Russian and Yugoslav armies closing in on Hungary, a new flock of rumors sprang up today in neutral capitals and the Moscow radio relayed these unverified reports from Stockholm:

1. Disturbances in Vienna over a cut in food rations have spread to other parts of Austria.
2. Graz, capital of Syria, was captured by insurgents and the Germans now are threatening to bombard the town from the air.
3. The Hungarian government has decided to evacuate Budapest's civilian population to Western Hungary.
4. Diplomatic missions are quitting Budapest.
5. A number of Vienna professors have been sent to concentration camps.

Lion-Hearted Western Troops Clung To Bridgehead in Savage Fighting

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians on the Leopold Canal, Belgium, Oct. 9—(Delayed — (CP Cable) — During four days and three nights Western Canada infantry clung heroically to their precariously narrow bridgehead along the north side of the Leopold Canal and tonight (Monday night) enemy pressure seemed to be slackening.

(Later dispatches said the Canadians have consolidated their grip across the canal and that the depth of the bridgehead is nowhere less than 400 yards.

This strip of ground along the canal, sometimes only 10 yards deep in places, has been a grim battlefield. By superhuman effort these lion-hearted western troops didn't give up the bridgehead through all this savage fighting. Sometimes they were pressed right back to the edge of the canal but they hung on "with their finger nails," to quote Maj. Larry Dampier of Toronto.

This (Monday) afternoon as the pressure eased I got to one of the western units. As a little farmhouse shook from the blast of Canadian guns firing from fields and orchards around us, officers and men talked of the bridgehead fight which ranks with the toughest they have been through.

Maj. Desmond Crofton of Salt Spring Island, B.C., who got the first troops across the 170-foot-wide canal in a pre-dawn attack with flame throwers Friday, said: "We got over the canal all right by going in right behind sheets of flame laid down by flame throwers."

Wipe Out M.-G. Post.

"One whole German machine-gun post was wiped out by the flames. Our men scrambled up the dike on the far side of the canal and gained their first objectives quickly. Then the Germans came at us. They counter-attacked time and time again. They mortared, shelled, machine-gunned and sniped us. Even some huge coast guns swung around and pumped great shells into our positions. Sometimes it was tougher than other battles we have been in, for they were using heavy guns and heavy mortars.

"Some of our companies got north of the canal about 5,000 yards despite all the fury blazing around them but we couldn't prevent the enemy from infiltrating right among us. At night they would counter-attack straight into our positions and I have never seen anything like the fighting that went on in those fantastic melees.

"We would clear them out of some buildings and they would come right back into them. Those Germans fought cleaner than S. S. troops but they were just as tough."

Supplied Over Bridges.

The Canadians were supplied over bridges which were under constant fire and sometimes temporarily were knocked out during the struggle. The westerners were kept in food and ammunition but for three days they had practically no sleep.

"Every one of our men over there had all the guts in the world and throughout the battle we only had one or two cases of battle fatigue," Maj. Crofton continued. "This morning I made a trip to all our company positions and the men were amazingly cheerful, even after this marathon ordeal and a night of heavy shelling. One group had a Dutch gramaphone playing loudly and others were plucking chickens which you had better say were killed in the fighting.

"What struck me most were the terrific German casualties. I have never seen so many dead enemy soldiers in one small area. The Germans certainly came off second best. We have taken it in that bridgehead for four days and every time they came in at us they were rocked back on their heels. I think they have had enough."

New York, Oct. 11—(AP)—Holding up a half-dollar, a man charged with feeding the bears in a park in Brooklyn told the court: "I have a wife and three children to support and 50 cents is all I have." "You can feed the bears but not your family. Either pay the dollar or go to jail for a day," replied the magistrate. The man sheepishly produced a dollar bill.

EXCEPTIONAL YIELD TOMATOES REPORTED

With district tomato growers in some instances reporting exceptionally heavy crops this season, a report has reached this city from Prince Edward county of 2,730 bushels being grown off three acres of tomatoes. The tomatoes were grown on the farm of Ross Hunter, Hillier township.

According to officials of the Canada Packers here, the yield reported above is exceptional but in view of the season "not impossible." This is 150 bushels per acre less than that reported from the Hunter farm.

The average yield for tomatoes in the Bay of Quinte district over a ten-year period is approximately 250 bushels per acre, according to canning factory officials.

Shriners' Club and K. of C. Members Show Oneness of Aim in Philanthropy

Joint Meeting of Good Fellowship Addressed by Albert A. Gardiner

Evincing a show of inter-denominational fraternal friendship not before demonstrated in this city, members of the local Shriners' Club and Knights of Columbus met in the latter's club rooms on Tuesday evening to enjoy an hour of good fellowship and to lay the foundation for possible future joint charitable efforts by the two organizations.

Guests of the evening were officially welcomed to the council chamber by Grand Knight George O'Brien with following speakers by candid illustration of the work being done by their organizations presenting a feeling of oneness possible only through realization of the same goal.

Getting Along Together

Guest speaker for the evening was Albert A. Gardiner, general passenger traffic manager of the Canadian National Railways, who stressed the importance of men of different denominations and of different faiths, "getting along together." Speaking as a Roman Catholic and as a Knight of Columbus, Mr. Gardiner told of his admiration for the Masonic order and of his regret that as a member of the Catholic Church he could not become a Mason.

Continuing his discourse he pointed out the similarities and the differences between the Masonic order and the Knights of Columbus and assured that many of the virtues claimed by the one were practised by the other.

Differences Provide Opportunity

Canada, he said, was possibly stronger because it was made up of men of different faiths and religions. But these differences presented an opportunity of coming together which would not be the case if all were of the same beliefs. He claimed there was no reason why differences should divide people. "We are placed in this world to be good citizens," he concluded, "and there is a great work before us."

Past State Deputy A. B. Collins introduced the guest speaker to the combined audience of club members with appreciation being expressed by J. B. Boyce. Other speakers heard during the evening were President D. Storey of the local Shriners' Club who introduced Illustrious Potentate Bill Riley of the Rameses Shrine Club in Toronto. Also heard were District Deputy George Lee and Mr. Espy, secretary of the Shriners' "Ladder of Baby Smiles" project.

Mr. Riley gave a brief resume of Shriners and their work indicating there were nine temples across Canada and 159 in North America. Assistance for the crippled and underprivileged children was the principal charitable effort of the club, he said, their hospitals for this purpose on the continent representing a value of $40,000,000. Since the outbreak of the European conflict war endeavors had been added to their program.

Lecturer T. Mascaro had a varied program lined up for the enjoyment of members and guests with Miss Maloney being heard in a reading. Arthur Duncan of Batawa demonstrated his ability as a story teller with LAC. Lough and Harold Barrett being heard in song. During the refreshment period J. Cowan acted as song leader with Leo Riggs at the piano. Mayor Harry Rollins was heard briefly at the conclusion of the meeting, he also emphasizing the necessity of good fellowship between members of different faiths and fraternal organizations. The toast to The King was proposed by Chas. Dolan.

Waste Paper Vital Commodity In Modern War Urgently Needed

On Monday, October 16, starts the Emergency Waste Paper Drive. In the piping days of peace, waste paper was a nuisance. It cluttered up the attic; the garage, spare rooms and cellars. The family, at times, held bonfire parties to rid the home of the accumulated mass.

Now, the humble newssheet, paper bag, and their fellow paper products, have an important job to do.

Came the war and paper filled an important post. Millions of tons have been utilized to manufacture vital war materials. Many more are needed.

This former waste material, food for bonfires and headaches for housewives, is now an urgently needed ingredient.

Without it, containers for blood plasma, medical supplies, repair parts and shells, parachutes for food and equipment and many other war jobs, cannot be manufactured.

Victory is in sight. Over the hills of the darkness of war, the faint light of Peace is slowly but surely breaking. Soon, it is hoped it will break into the full brilliancy of a new era, of an enduring Peace that will encompass the whole world.

Paper will play its part in hastening the dawn. Residents of this city, can also do their part by saving every scrap of paper in their homes. No matter how small, save it for the war effort.

Paper is needed. And needed now. Do your part.

Kiwanis Confers Life Honorary Membership on W. H. Morton, Publisher Ontario Intelligencer

Plaque is Presented by Kiwanis International in Observance of Newspaper Week

MANY GUESTS PRESENT

Highlighting its observance of National Newspaper Week, the Kiwanis Club of Belleville today awarded a Certificate of Citation to the Ontario Intelligencer as a testimonial of appreciation for its contribution to the nation's war program.

The certificate was presented to W. H. Morton, publisher of the Ontario Intelligencer, by I. L. Moore, of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville. It was signed by J. McVeigh, Club Secretary R. Stiver and Ben Dean, Grand Rapids, and O. E. Peterson, Chicago, President and Secretary, respectively, of Kiwanis International. Mr. Morton was also made an honorary member of the local club by the President, Jack McVeigh.

National Newspaper Week has been observed for several years by Kiwanis International's clubs and members throughout the United States. This year, however, Canadian clubs also are participating in the celebration by awarding certificates of citation to their local newspapers.

The context of the certificate states that it was presented "in recognition of the service which this newspaper and other newspapers of the United States and Canada have rendered our two nations during these critical war years. For accurate and comprehensive reporting of the war news, for generous and unremitting support of wartime activities on the home front, for fostering sound morale, for fearless and independent editorial opinion, and for unrelaxed vigilance in safeguarding the basic liberties of free speech and a free press."

Plaque Presented.

In making the presentation Mr. Moore stated:

"The first week of October was observed as National Newspaper Week, giving people of Canada and the United States occasion to recount many things we owe to the press, and a time to acknowledge our dependence on, and our appreciation of, the services newspapers are rendering.

"We all know the meaning of free choice, free thought, free individual action. We all claim the right to originate an idea, foster it, develop it and build it into something tangible, great and of service to humanity. The newspapers of Canada and the United States are advocates and defenders of free expression and free enterprise.

"Kiwanis is an organization that was born, has lived and grown because its members are men who exercise their freedom of thought and action in developing their own ideas. Therefore, Kiwanis can appreciate what the press has done and is doing. We can raise our hands and voices in support of the freedom of the press—one of the great freedoms!

"You, Mr. Morton, are the owner and publisher of a newspaper that has (in peace time and in war time) rendered high service to the public. In the war, your paper has helped to maintain public morale by keeping people informed. It has given us the bad news with the good news. It has never published anything of aid and comfort to our enemies. You have given much display space, editorial space and news columns to all sorts of welfare aims—war loan drives, scrap collection, recruiting for war services, and you have done this and more in the face of restrictions, shortages and difficulties too numerous to mention now.

"Kiwanis International, therefore, in appreciation of your generosity and fine public service, given through your newspaper, wishes you to receive a token of the high esteem in which you are held. All of us in the Belleville Kiwanis Club join in asking your acceptance of this testimonial."

Thanked for Honors Conferred.

In thanking the Kiwanis Club for the presentation of the plaque and the conferring of an honorary membership in the club, Mr. W. H. Morton said, "While I am deeply conscious of the honor conferred on me by the Kiwanis Club and the very complimentary and generous reference in regard to myself, I feel that this is an honor, which is mostly undeserved and unmerited as I have done nothing out of the ordinary to merit this tribute. However, I appreciate this kind and friendly gesture and the sentiment which inspired this generous tribute of esteem.

"I have been quite familiar with the aspirations and the activities of this club since its inception between fifteen and twenty years ago and I can think of no group of men who have worked more zealously and unselfishly in support of the various projects of a benevolent nature in which you have become interested over a period of years.

"The results of your efforts speak for themselves and are reflected in the measure of financial assistance you have been able to contribute to the various projects you helped to sponsor and is a record of which you can be justly proud.

"I, as publisher of your local daily newspaper in association with our editorial staff, have felt that it was part of our responsibility, as a sort of junior partner, to see that our reader audience was kept as fully informed of your activities and achievements as our facilities would permit.

"To this small extent our editorial staff and myself feel that in small measure we are lending our co-operation in a community effort in the very commendable service your club is rendering to the community. I like to feel that it is in recognition of this small contribution to this community of purpose that I am indebted for this honorary membership which I accept in grateful appreciation and express the hope that your club will have the same measure of success in the future that you have enjoyed in the past."

Duck Hunters Enjoy Pot Luck, Bear Tangled In Barbed Wire Fence

It may be a far cry between a tender roasted wild duck and a bear steak, but Bancroft district hunters' wives are beginning to resign themselves to having pot luck when the hubbies return from a hunting foray.

Take for instance, Walter Mullett and Hugh Vance of the North Hastings village. Returning from a "duckless" hunting expedition they spotted a large bear ambling across a road in front of them.

Bruin saw them headed in his general direction, and apparently did not know that all they carried was a light gauge shotgun. In his haste to get away he became entangled in a barbed wire fence. They "let go" at him from close range, and the respective families dined on "fur-coated duck" the next day.

IN MEMORIAM

HARKINS — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Eugene Harkins, who left us suddenly October 11, 1943.

We little thought when leaving home, you would no more return,
That you in death so soon would sleep and leave us here to mourn.
We do not know the pain he bore, we did not see him die,
We only know he passed away and never said goodbye.
The blow was great, the shock severe,
We little knew the end was near.
It is only those who have lost can tell
The sorrow of parting without saying farewell.
—Always remembered by Wife and Family.

GREEN — In loving memory of a dear mother, Emma Jane Green, who passed away October 11th., 1943.

When days are dark and friends are few,
Dear mother, how we think of you.
Friends are friends if they are true
We lost our best friend when we lost you.
—Ever remembered by daughters, Gertrude Lewis, Leatha Hill.

GRAY—In loving memory of my dear mother, who passed away October 11th., 1943.

One year has passed since that sad day

City Council Accepts By-Law For Submission to People Respecting Term of Office

By-Law Provides Seven be Elected Next Year for Two-Year Term

The City Council at their regular meeting on Tuesday evening approved a by-law to be submitted to the ratepayers at the next municipal election, that the first seven Aldermen elected serve for a two-year term and the remainder elected serve for one. In the succeeding years only seven candidates for Aldermen can be elected and these will also serve for a two-year term. There was no dissension, when the by-law was tabled for approval. The Notice of Motion, introduced by Alderman Pringle at the last meeting, requesting a vote of the electors to close the gas plant when the time was opportune and if closed those using gas utility be recompensed when switching from gas to electricity was also passed without discussion or dissension.

There was no particular important business to be discussed although the session was lengthy due to the number of by-laws submitted for consideration. Eleven of these dealt with the transference of property purchased by citizens and all went through the regular channels, while another allowed the city the right to close a street after proper advertising and the other was to amend the building restriction by-law in order that a warehouse be built in the West Hill district.

Delegation Appears

C. M. Nixon of the Department of Pensions appeared before the council to explain the Veterans' Land Act passed by the Federal government in 1942. Members of the Rehabilitation Committee of which Dougall Marshall is chairman was present to hear the explanation of this act. Mr. Nixon explained the workings of the act and what a veteran was allowed if he wished to purchase a farm or a piece of land, when he had other employment. It was shown that in the purchase of a farm the veteran would be allowed by the government $2,320 on a $6,000 outlay and the initial cost to the veteran would be $480. Only those who served on the active force would be eligible for the grants. The committee was given some useful information during the question period and will be able to inform their clients.

Only Mayor to Attend

After some discussion only the Mayor will attend the Mayors' convention for Ontario, which will be held in Toronto in the near future. The original recommendation tabled favored the Mayor and Alderman Hyde to go to the convention but Ald. Woodley took exception and moved an amendment which was carried. Ald. Woodley in speaking to the recommendation stated that Ald. Hyde had consistently voted against wasting the taxpayers' money by delegates going to conventions and he would like to know what caused the change of heart. "I was surprised that Ald. Hyde accepted the offer to go to the convention because he has been consistently against this spending of money," said Ald. Woodley. Ald. Pringle thought Ald. Woodley was not being fair because Ald. Hyde had favored sending delegates to the Ontario convention but not to the Dominion convention. The Alderman stated that much good could be obtained by attending and probably if Ald. Hyde went to one it would change his views on the entire matter.

Ald. Follwell was also surprised that Ald. Hyde accepted the offer to go and stated he would support the amendment that only the Mayor be allowed the expenses for travel. After a close vote the amendment was carried and Mayor Rollins will attend at Toronto. The council approved sending two delegates to the flood control convention, that will be held in London on Thursday and Friday of this week. Aldermen McDougall and Woodley were the delegates chosen. Mr. O. H Scott of the Public Utilities Commission notified the council there was no surplus in the waterworks department and therefore there was no money to deposit with the treasurer.

Committee Appointed

A committee was appointed to inspect a sewer and the report respecting the widening of Mount Pleasant Road was turned back to the City Engineer with the notation that the figures again be checked as to the city's cost in this work. Ald. Clapp proposed that the work could not be done for the amount mentioned in the report.

Allowed to Elevate Sign.

Mr. J. N. Wood was allowed to elevate his sign two feet from the original position set at a previous meeting. This sign, to be erected near Evans Street, has been the matter of controversy for some time in the council. Ald. Allin opposed the report of the committee after Ald. Clapp had suggested that the committee could not give a verbal report and be accepted by council. It was shown that the committee giving the report was the same committee that approved and recommended the location of the sign in the first place. A number of booklets will be purchased by the council on town planning on the recommendation of Ald. Pringle, who stated that the information contained would be of value to the town planning committee in this municipality.

Ald. Woodley enquired as to what action had been taken in cleaning up the harbor and Ald. Allin explained that no report had been yet received from the engineers who inspected the harbor some weeks ago. Ald. Chamberlain thought the only way to get action was to go directly to Ottawa and with this in mind introduced a motion that a committee be named and that accompanied by the Harbor Commission the delegation should go to Ottawa and present the City Engineer's plan for the harbor waterfront and try to get some action. The council unanimously agreed and the Mayor will name the committee to make the trip to the Capital. Ald Woodley also wanted to know if the road on Wallbridge Road was properly guarded while work was being done and Ald. Armstrong promised the matter his attention.

Place Street Lights.

Two street lights will be placed one near 59 Pinnacle Street and the other south of the Canadian Hotel. An automatic fire alarm system will be installed in the fire hall for the protection of Canada Packers with all expenses to be borne by the firm and the system to be installed under the direction of Chief Lynch. A new sign will be erected at the junction of highways 37 and 7, north of Actinolite, to advertise the City of Belleville.

This sign will be comparable in size to that erected by the City of Peterborough and will be lighted at night. The offer of William Neilsen and Company for lots at the corner of Burton and Wellington streets was accepted as also an offer by Benjamin Lodge L. O. L. No. 274 for a lot on Church Street. The lodge promised to erect a lodge hall on the property within one year. The City Engineer was instructed to obtain prices from painters for painting the standards and railings on the Upper, Lower and Foot bridges, the work to be done by hand. A guard rail will be built along the walk on the overhead bridge on North Front Street, the type to be left with the Chairman of Public Works and the City Engineer. The City Solicitor was asked to furnish at once to whom the title of park property in the city was vested and what, if any legal authority the Parks Commission has to sell or purchase lands.

Sidelights On Quebec Parleys Told Kiwanians

Interesting sidelights on the conferences held in Quebec by the Allied leaders, Winston Churchill and President Roosevelt were given to the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon held Tuesday at the Quinte Hotel by Albert Gardiner, Traffic Passenger Agent for C.N.R. for Canada. The speaker was introduced by O. W. Duff, C.N.R. Superintendent at Belleville and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Albert Jones, locomotive foreman at this terminal. Many high officials connected with the C.N.R. at this divisional point were in attendance and the members heard one of the most interesting and at the same time instructive addresses that has been their privilege for some time.

Mr. Gardiner, with rich humor told of many incidents prior to and during the conferences, which had the members convulsed with laughter. The odd story was thrown into the address, which showed that even leaders and assistants, who held the fortune of nations in their hands, had time for recreation and a "spot of wit." The speaker told of the arrangements made to bring the Winston Churchill party from the boat to Quebec, explaining that only a few in the Dominion of Canada knew of his coming and that the strictest secrecy had to be kept. Mr. Gardiner met the boat 60 miles out to sea and his narration of climbing the ladder and being rescued at the top by a burly seaman was one of the highlights of the talk.

Members Went Fishing.

The speaker told of members of the conference going fishing and how much they enjoyed seeing the City of Quebec lighted and many of them sat all night on the Terrace just watching the lights of the city. Mr. Gardiner stated that many of them did a great deal of shopping at the conference and it was a common sight to see high ranking officers coming to the hotel carrying large parcels, which I am given to understand is not the correct procedure for an officer. He explained the workings of the police guarding the great personages and also told how the secret got out that Churchill was to visit Quebec and how large crowds gathered at the stopping places to get a glimpse of the Prime Minister.

It was explained by the speaker that the atmosphere of the two conferences was entirely different. At the first conference there was a tenseness and anxiety for victory was not certain but at the second conference there was a feeling of confidence and that the war could be wound up in a short time but there was no optimism that it was all but over. "I spoke to many," said the speaker, "as to the probable length and none opposed my opinion that a grand armistice on November 11th., 1945, was not out of possibility and it was shown that none could relax in the war effort." Mr. Gardiner predicted there was a lot of dirty work yet to do and showed that Mr. Churchill did not tell his wife everything that was going on in the war because she was seen on many occasions during the conferences down street reading the bulletin boards of the newspapers to get the latest information.

Churchill Praised.

He praised Mr. Churchill for his quiet confidence, his supreme leadership and his great humanity and hoped he would long be spared to see peace and goodwill again upon earth. The character of the man was shown when he met the President and said, "There is victory all along the line, Franklin." He told of an instance when one of the party was to give an address on robot bombs but while he was taking a bath a woman with her husband came into the same room for some refreshments and incidentally sat down on his clothes, which kept him more than an hour late for his appointment. The many stories told by the speaker fitted perfectly into the entire narration and it was an extreme privilege to be present at such a fine talk.

The club will take part in the salvage drive on Oct. 16th. Seven trucks and 25 men will be the Kiwanis quota. The bingo was a success, Jack White told the club. Jack McVeigh presided. Vic White led the community singing and Leo B. Riggs presided at the piano.

City Council Accepts By-Law For Submission to People Respecting Term of Office

By-Law Provides Seven be Elected Next Year for Two-Year Term

The City Council at their regular meeting on Tuesday evening approved a by-law to be submitted to the ratepayers at the next municipal election, that the first seven Aldermen elected serve for a two-year term and the remainder elected serve for one. In the succeeding years only seven candidates for Aldermen can be elected and these will also serve for a two-year term. There was no dissension, when the by-law was tabled for approval. The Notice of Motion, introduced by Alderman Pringle at the last meeting, requesting a vote of the electors to close the gas plant when the time was opportune and if closed those using gas utility be recompensed when switching from gas to electricity was also passed without discussion or dissension.

There was no particular important business to be discussed although the session was lengthy due to the number of by-laws submitted for consideration. Eleven of these dealt with the transference of property purchased by citizens and all went through the regular channels, while another allowed the city the right to close a street after proper advertising and the other was to amend the building restriction by-law in order that a warehouse be built in the West Hill district.

Delegation Appears

C. M. Nixon of the Department of Pensions appeared before the council to explain the Veterans' Land Act passed by the Federal government in 1942. Members of the Rehabilitation Committee of which Dougall Marshall is chairman was present to hear the explanation of this act. Mr. Nixon explained the workings of the act and what a veteran was allowed if he wished to purchase a farm or a piece of land, when he had other employment. It was shown that in the purchase of a farm the veteran would be allowed by the government $2,320 on a $6,000 outlay and the initial cost to the veteran would be $480. Only those who served on the active force would be eligible for the grants. The committee was given some useful information during the question period and will be able to inform their clients.

Canada's Fire Record

Canada's fire loss is stressed at this time when fire week is being observed throughout the Dominion in order to bring to the attention of the people the importance of prevention which is worth so much in material and in life to this country. Last year the fire loss by destruction or damage amounted to $31,464,000 an increase of ten per cent above the 1941 figure. Trend of losses is toward higher levels. In the United States and Canada the total of such losses is estimated at $414,000,000. Loss of life in these two countries for the year 1943 is estimated at over 10,000 while Canada's share in this mortality was 310 lives of whom 149 were children.

This is not the whole story, for the number of people injured or permanently crippled is believed to be far in excess of these figures—two or three times as many. Recently the Readers' Digest remarked that the casualties caused by accident (and fire) over the North American Continent compared with those sustained in war.

According it, is fitting that this week should be set out by Royal Proclamation as Fire Prevention Week—that every effort be made to prevent fires and so remove the menace to life and property.

Fire touches the home very closely. More than half the fires in North America occur in the homes of the people. Some 7,000 persons were killed in the two countries and about twice that number asphyxiated or trapped by smoke, fire gases and flames, it is estimated.

Everyone has a fairly good idea of what causes fire and yet for all that fires do occur. The main causes are—rubbish, defective chimneys, sparks on combustible roofs, defective heating equipment, careless smoking, the use of matches, the use of inflammable liquids, and electrical defects. After reading this list of causes of fires, everyone should ask himself or herself, Am I making certain that none of these defects or shortcomings can be laid to my carelessness? The question is a personal one as well as a national matter. Fire hits individuals, the community and the state.

35,688 dwelling fires were reported in Canada last year. The fire loss from all causes laid a tax on the shoulders of every man, woman and child of $2.67, besides the cost (a somewhat lesser amount) of insuring, payment of losses and the expense of fighting and extinguishing fires.

Smokers should take exceptional care with lighted matches or discarded cigarettes, for the record shows that 14,460 of the 47,594 fires in Canada last year were caused by carelessness of smokers. These fires and others from defective and overheated chimneys and flues, electric wiring and appliances, matches, hot ashes, coals, and open fire places, made up 68.5 per cent of all fires in the Dominion. All these causes are preventible.

Six municipalities in Ontario had per capita losses last year over ten dollars. This Province paid to Dominion Licensed insurance companies fire premiums amounting to $16,449,480. They claimed for losses and were paid $7,618,554 or 46.31 per cent. In Quebec fire losses caused claims which were paid and amounted to 59.28 per cent of the premium.

It is an unsettling fact to realize that current statistics show that the number of fires throughout the Dominion is increasing, that property values destroyed are rising. This tendency, coupled to the figures produced during last year, indicates an attitude of mind toward fire losses on the part of the public which is fraught with peril to the welfare of the Dominion. In times of peace these figures and trends would be sufficient cause for uneasiness—in times of war when every brick, every article, is doubly and trebly more precious for the sake of prosecuting the war to a victorious finish, they become alarming. Fires hamper the war effort for burned properties do not produce revenue, the usable qualities are taken out of production and supply. Fire is always a loss, it destroys natural resources and impairs security.

In short, losses by fire are not paid by insurance—they are entended to and influence many matters of life and death important to every soldier, sailor and air man, every man, woman and child, in Canada or overseas.

It is clearly the duty of every citizen to see that as far as within the power of each lies, fires be prevented during the coming year.

Dog as Plane Detector

The acuteness of hearing of the dog is well known and each succeeding age seems to find the dog using that perception of his and other senses to new uses. For example, there is a dog, Black Beauty, sailing the high seas on a U. S. war vessel and the crewmen claim that the ship could do without its aircraft detection apparatus since Black Beauty, that has made 27 convoy trips, can detect the sound of a plane engine long before the human ear can pick up the vibrations. The dog is rated "airplane detector, first class." When he hears a plane he barks. There was a time when dogs did not have planes to bark at. But in this age of planes this dog has put his endowment to good use.

Motorists who own dogs know that their dogs know the sound of the engines of their cars as distinct from those of others. A dog will lie unalert while a cavalcade of cars sweeps by but let him hear the familiar throb of his master's machine and he is all ears and comes completely to attention. He knows the hum of that car.

Dogs by their ability to associate with mankind through the ages have been always closely touched by the civilization of their own day. He is everywhere that his master is. He is the subject of jokes as men are. There is the story of the watch dog that sleeps and will let a burglar rifle a house but dogs pay no attention to these yarns for dogs fit into every age and condition of humanity. The dog has won a wide recognition of his tender care for children—many a dog has saved a child's life through his alarm in time. He is ever a faithful guard. Who has not seen a dog, little or large, near children, with an air of casualness about him as if to say that he was not watching the children though his master knows differently. Now if anything should happen to the youngsters there would be an instant alarm. Dogs are so modest, they appear not to make a show of this loyalty though they will if necessary run the risk of losing their own lives.

In many instances dogs have given the alarm of fire for they have an uncanny sense of realizing danger to those to whom they are devoted and have saved life only to lose their own.

So it comes about. A dog gets a chance to go to sea on an American naval craft. His alert mind finds something new and applies his age-old mentality to things that are unusual—in this instance the sound of approaching planes. And a bark is the result.

Death to Mosquitoes

(Montreal Star)

The aerosol bomb has proved so effective in combating mosquitoes in war zones that it will be made available for civilian communities, but probably not until after the war.

The aerosol bomb is a poison gas dispenser, a small metal container of Pyrethrum and other insecticides. When opened a fine spray brings instant death to all mosquitoes that come in contact with it. The spray remains suspended for a long time in the air like fog, and is harmless to man.

Fisherman General

(New Yorker)

General Mark Clark has his post-war world all mapped out, we see by the papers.

He intends to retire to an island in Pugent Sound and fish for the rest of his life.

A good program. All we ask of him is, if he should notice any Japanese fishing boats in the vicinity, and they seem to be taking soundings, to let us know.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

FOOLISH WISE

I've been laughed at; I've been jeered at;
I've been sneered at and derided,
But the fact is, in their practice,
Most have done the same as I did
And when questioned will admit:
Cried, as I, a little bit
And went out with eyes aflame
On the day the grandchild came.

Once they thought I was the only
One who tramped the hall and waited,
Watched and worried, anxious, flurried,
While the doctors operated.
They could face it calmly, maybe!
And as coolly greet a baby
Just arrived through hours of danger
As they would some grown up stranger!

They so wise and I so foolish!
And perhaps I shouldn't doubt them.
I'm the duffer born to suffer,
But I've learned this truth about them:
Those who sneered at me the loudest
Of their grandchild now are proudest,
And for weakness can be chided,
For they cried a bit, as I did!

SNAKES AND HAIR ROPE

There is a popular notion that snakes will not crawl over a rope made of hair.

Because of this belief it was formerly a rather common custom for cowboys, shepherds, ranchers, prospectors and explorers in the West, when they slept on the ground, to surround their beds with old-time horsehair or cowhair ropes, confident that no snake would cross the rope to molest them.

Experiments with rattlesnakes, as well as harmless snakes, show that no protection whatever against snakes is afforded by encircling camps with hair ropes as such.

Repeated trials proved that snakes would crawl over such ropes without hesitation. Rattlesnakes crawled over a hair rope when by going only a few inches farther they could have gone around it.

Still the hair-rope notion may be based upon fact, although the usual explanation is erroneous.

There is some evidence to the effect that most snakes avoid the odor of human beings. They give people a wide berth as a general rule. Therefore it is possible that rattlesnakes would be inclined not to crawl over a rope which had been handled and which consequently carried the odor of human beings.

But if this is true, a person sleeping in the open could protect himself by encircling his bed with old clothes just as well as with a hair rope. It would be the human odor rather than the particular material that acted as a snake repellent.

Another popular notion is that snakes will not crawl over anything prickly or thorny, such as a Manila hemp rope. This belief has also been disproved by tests.

Snakes do not hesitate to crawl over prickly substances and their skins are not injured even by the sharp spines of the cactus.

According to traditions handed down by the Indians and superstitions common among the Negroes of the South, certain ornamental plants have remarkable attributes as snake repellents.

It is said that the mountain ash is especially obnoxious to snakes because of its odor or certain emanations from its dead leaves on the ground. For generations many colored families in the Southern states have planted the snake calabash and the snake gourd and trained the vines to grow over their houses and along their garden fences in the belief that the odor of these gourd vines would drive away snakes.

But so far as known no plant will drive away snakes or cause them to avoid places where it is growing.

American Troops Slowed by Rain And Deep Mud

Rome, Oct. 11 — (AP)—American troops, still slowed by rain and deep mud, have reached the southern outskirts of Livergnano, 11 miles due south of Bologna on highway 65, and advance elements there are meeting fierce German counter-attacks, it was announced today.

Pace of the fighting along the entire Italian battlefront including the British 8th Army sector near the Adriatic was reported retarded by adverse weather.

After several days of bloody fighting British troops of the 5th Army drove the Germans off Mount Cece and took possession of the little knob of ground. British units also managed to put troops on Mount Freddo, where the Germans had reacted violently for days to any attempt to advance.

South African troops were reported locked in bitter fighting on Mt. Stanco, just west of Grizzana on the American left.

The 8th Army appeared to be making slight progress in the hills of the Adriatic front despite almost constant rain. British and Indian troops reached the summit of a new ridge extending from Montigallo to Mount Farneto, northwest of San Marino, and threw the Germans out of a few houses they attempted to hold in the villages of Roncofreddo and San Paolo.

Heavy fighting continued a mile east of Langiano.

Air operations again were restricted by the weather, but there was some activity against rail, bridge and gun targets by fighters and fighter-bombers. Five Allied planes were lost from about 800 sorties.

Lake Freighters Helped To Win

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 11 — (CP) — When the war is done and sailors' yarns honor brave ships, there'll be stories about how Canadian Great Lakes freighters took to the ocean lanes and fought their battles.

A glimpse of the service given by these ships was granted today by the Canadian Shipping Board in figures prepared for Trade Minister MacKinnon. Between 50 and 60 of them have gone from the lakes since the war began. Some of them will never come back, but board officials said the list of castalties cannot yet be told.

But these officials, who recall the dire days of 1940 and 1941 when they sometimes were called from their beds in the dead of night to hear new calls for ships, any kind of ships, to keep arms and food moving across the Atlantic, will say that the lake freighters helped to turn the tide of war in favor of the Allies.

NOTHING ORGANICALLY WRONG

In the golden age of quackery when stomach complaint, liver complaint and female complaint pretty well covered the field, the almanacs generally carried the joke about Jones telling Brown that old Smith had passed on—so Brown asked "What complaint?" and that was Jones's cue to quip "No complaint at all—everybody satisfied."

A correspondent says he recently went through the hopper—or, as he expresses it, the clinic, and when the examinations were all completed and the big shots toted up all the reports from the various hands, the Scotch verdict was "nothing organically wrong except low blood pressure."

No doubt the head man at the "clinic" gave the gullible customer—and when I say gullible customer I do not mean to imply that the "clinic" is a quack affair in the common sense of the term; indeed it is one of the best advertised of the "ethical" rackets doing business in Yankeeland under the imposing name of "clinic"—no doubt the chief on duty at the time gave the customer some sage advice about his diet—such as cut down on starches, fried foods, coarse foods, red meats, and all that nice sounding malarkey.

But the customer was impressed by the remarkable finding that his blood pressure is low, for that is the inspiration which made him write to me.

If low blood pressure is "organically wrong" then I've been recklessly carrying on for all of my adult life with such "organic" trouble. Whenever my blood pressure has been measured, if I had enough curiosity to ask or the insurance, army or civil service examiner mentioned it at all, it has been lower than the average. That has never interfered with my bowling nor have I ever failed to pass a medical examination—except when I tried to get into the Army Medical Corps in World War I, as a young doctor and was spotted as a defective right off the bat—the darned army doctor plugged my good ear and then I could not deduce whether he was speaking quietly or just pretending to. Then, too, they wanted to know where Mt. Shasta was—though what that had to do with a doctor's fitness for the army I never could understand—and from the name I confidently placed it in Russia.

Low blood pressure, I gather, is normal to some peculiar persons, or peculiar to some normal persons—as you will.

In young adults low blood pressure is not so good, according to observations of many medical examiners. But after middle age poor geeks with low blood pressure have a better life expectancy than those with normal or high blood pressure. So have another cup of coffee or light up your pipe and let's leave our low blood pressure to the doctor — only he will know what if anything there is to do about it.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Saccharin

You would do well to look into the effects of saccharin before bragging about taking it in your coffee as a substitute for sugar. Dr. Wiley, the most eminent authority on foods, ruled saccharin out of the Food and Drugs Act he had passed by Congress nearly 40 years ago, declaring it was deleterious to health.

(C. P. D.)

Answer — I revere the memory of Dr. Wiley, as I do that of Dr. Osler, but we cannot recognize either of them as authorities today. I believe the daily use of not more than 5 grains of saccharin a day is perfectly harmless, and I do not suggest and would not approve the use of saccharin in any amount as a substitute for sugar in canned or preserved foods. I merely assure readers that in my opinion a quarter-grain or perhaps a half-grain tablet of saccharin in a cup of tea or coffee is harmless, if one wishes to use it instead of sugar.

Polish Minister Asked To Join Moscow Parley

By ALEX H. SINGLETON
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 11 — (AP) — Polish Prime Minister Stanislaw Mikolajcayk has been invited to the momentous Moscow conference as Prime Minister Churchill of Great Britain gained the first objective in his effort to end the long-standing Polish-Soviet dispute and mend a potentially-dangerous rift in Allied relations.

The cabinet of the Polish government in London, hurriedly summoned into special session, approved acceptance of the invitation in principle, and it is probably that the peasant-born premier and his foreign minister, Adam Romer, will start shortly on their second mission to Moscow.

The invitation and the fact it was extended little more than 24 hours after Mr. Churchill and Foreign Secretary Eden arrived in the Russian capital underscored the importance which the British government attach to a quick solution of the difference between Russia and Poland.

It was learned that the Polish government in London will stand squarely upon Mr. Mikolajcayk's memorandum to Moscow, outlining his desire for long-term friendship between Poland and Russia and sketching a proposed coalition government for establishment after return to his homeland.

Drew Announces No Special Session Of Legislature

Toronto, Oct. 11 — (CP)—Premier Drew announced last night there will be no special session of the legislature this fall, since "nothing has arisen since last session which calls for a special ession of the House."

Mr. Drew made the announcement after the first Progressive Conservative party caucus since his return from overseas. The caucus will be followed today by a joint meeting of elected and defeated candidates in the last election.

"We had a most satisfactory caucus," the Premier said after the meeting, during which he reported on his overseas trip and discussed the performance and plans of his administration. "All members were in complete agreement on the subjects discussed."

At a testimonial dinner last night Mr. Drew was presented with a silver desk set inscribed with members' names. The presentation address was delivered by W. B. Reynolds of Brockville, member for Leeds.

Party's Policy To Be Outlined By Harry Nixon

Toronto, Oct. 11 (CP) — The possibility of Mitchell F. Hepburn's return to the leadership of the Liberal group in the legislature was discussed yesterday at a caucus of party members, it was learned from Liberal sources.

The official announcement as to the result of the deliberations of the 16 membres said only that "complete unanimity and the greatest enthusiasm aprevailed" and that Ontario leader Harry Nixon will outline the party's policy in a broadcast tonight over a CBC network.

W. L. Miller of Bruce Mines, member for Algoma-Manitoulin and caucus chairman, said that Mr. Hepburn, who resigned as Liberal Premier two years ago and was re-elected in Elgin riding as an Independent Liberal, was given an enthusiastic welcome.

He declined to say whether the leadership was discussed although he said that another caucus will be held in about six weeks and it may be under discussion then.

Keen to Have Hepburn.

It was learned from other sources however, that the members are keen to have Mr. Hepburn, who served as Ontario leader for 12 years and Premier for eight, return to the leadership and that Mr. Hepburn himself is willing to resume that role.

These sources consider it likely that by the tme the next caucus is held Mr Nixon may be elevated to the Senate to clear the way for the appointment of Mr Hepburn as House Leader by the Liberal M.P.P.'s. A convention of Ontario Liberals would be necessary to name an Ontario party leader.

While the former leader has not made any direct rapproachment with Prime Minister Mackenzie King, of whom he was a caustic and sometimes bitter critic, it is said that peace overtures have been made and these may reach fruition in a few more weeks

Carnival Spirit Still Rules In Liberated Paris

By MARGARET ECKER
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Paris, Oct. 11 (CP)—Sunday in the park is the same in Paris as it is in New York or Vancouver, B.C. Paris has only had a few Sundays since her new life began, and since September days have blue skies and golden sunshine here, the whole city is all out for fun.

It might be the gay nineties in the Champs Elysees with shiny carriages everywhere drawn by handsome, high-stepping horses and driven by bowler-hatted coachmen in white coats.

Usually, it seems to be Madame who rides in a carriage—Madame very chic in black with lots of jewelry, and daughter pretty as a picture in a gay print and saucy hat, trying to sneak a smile to the soldiers when mamma is looking the other way.

At the Trocadero, that symphony of gleaming, modern architecture on a hill atop the Seine, an American band played French and American music, while a gay and chattering crowd promenaded about and filled the stairs and balconies that lead up to the Trocadero itself.

The sidewalk cafes are low in stocks but they do a good business in citronel, a lemon drink, indifferent white wine, and sometimes some cognac.

On the Champs Elysees, the customers are chic and sophisticated, usually in black with a dash of red, enormous handbags that fly from shoulder straps, red shoes with soles of wood, two or three inches thick. Their escorts wear light suits with vigorously gay ties, showing a preference for bright yellow.

Gaiety Less Pronounced

Across the river near the Sorbonne, the clothes are less smart, but the conversations are more intense, and often a long-haired youth in the Paris version of plus fours will detach himself from the group to invite you to go to a political meeting.

But, on Sunday, it's the Bois de Boulogne that seems to be the soul of Paris. Sunshine flickers through the trees, and the deep green of the grass gives the enormous sprawling park the look of a musical comedy set. The little, artificial lakes are full of rowboats with lovely ladies, very sure of their charm trailing their hands in the water and coquetting at their rowing escort.

The winding lanes and the sidewalk cafes here don't shatter the musical comedy atmosphere either. This is the heyday of the bicycle and the girls of Paris exploit it to the full.

Their clothes are gay as chorus dancers. Their hats are fantastic. The favorite costume seems to be the brilliant skirt of yards and yards of plaid, worn with a bright matching jacket, and topped by about a foot of hat, which is felt and piled with bows and loops of colored ribbon.

Canadians and Americans in Paris stand on the streets or in the Bois and gape.

"It's a wonderful relief from two months of mud and ruined towns," sighed one Canadian here.

WEDDINGS

McKIBBON-HOULDING

Trenton — Colborne St. United Church, Brantford, was the setting for a pretty wedding on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 7th., when the Rev. Beverly L. Oaten united in marriage Carmen Elizabeth Houlding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Houlding, Brantford, to Captain John H. McKibbon, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McKibbon, of Trenton.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was wearing an exquisite portrait gown of white slipper satin, fashioned with full sweeping floor length skirt and with shirring accentuating the long torso line of the appliqued bodice. Her long veil of silk net fell from a coronet headdress fashioned from white rosebuds. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses.

Miss Marion North, of St. Catharines, as maid of honor was wearing a street length ensemble in fuchsia shade and Miss Cherry Hemsworth, Brantford, and Miss Frances Carroll, Toronto, as bridesmaids, wore similar afternoon dresses in aqua crepe. They carried bouquets of fuchsia and gladioli.

FO. Nelson McKibbon, Victoriaville, Que., acted as groomsman, and the ushers were Lieut. Robert Thompson, Kingston, and Boris Sibolsky, Hamilton.

The bride's mother selected for the occasion a purple wool crepe model with matching velvet hat and corsage of yellow roses. The groom's mother was attired in a blue grey ensemble complemented with hat of the same shade and corsage of red roses

The bride's travelling costume for her wedding trip was a dressmaker suit of red with a black topcoat and accessories.

Women's Activities

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Bridge Street United Church was held in the ladies' parlors on Friday last with Mrs. Davidson presiding. Mrs. Trusdale read the minutes of the last meeting owing to the absence of Mrs. Cronk.

Mrs. Baker spoke of the efforts being made to combat the spread of the liquor evil.

Miss Browne presented Mrs. J. W. Platt with a life membership certificate.

Mrs. Thomas' group was in charge of the program, which was the study of a chapter in the mission book. The theme was "The Law of the Kingdom, Love Thy Neighbor."

Mrs. Baker and Miss Reeves read from the scriptures, and Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Baker offered prayer.

Mrs. Barclay pleased greatly with the solo "Thanks Be to God."

Miss Browne introduced the subject, "The Church in the South Sea Isles," and traced on the map the spread of Christianity through the many islands.

Mrs. Adams traced the origin of these island peoples and the spread of health education among them.

Mrs. Gerry spoke of the many Christians found in these islands by the soldiers, and told of the work of the 5 outstanding missionaries who first went to these places.

The problem of 'coolie' labor being brought in to work on the big plantations was described by Mrs. Adams. These newcomers were mostly Moslem and were increasing faster than the native Christian population.

Miss Browne gave the ladies a short quiz on points brought out during the program. Mrs. Thomas offered prayer, and Mrs. Davidson closed the meeting with the Benediction.

THE MARRY-GO-ROUND

Post-War Marriages

With everybody talking about post-war houses and post-war automobiles and a beautiful post-war world, I suppose I should be thinking about the post-war marriage and making suggestions for its improvements and its perfection.

But I have such faith in the marriage of today—the partnership marriage—in which men and women pool their interests and try to understand each other, that I don't think it will need many improvements.

The average marriage already has as many modern improvements as canned goods and kitchenettes and comes in as many varieties as pickles do. It has as many safety devices as a helicopter, and is almost fool-proof.

There are so many kinds of marriage these days, that if you can't fit yourself into one of them you must be a terrible misfit! First, there is the solid common or garden variety of marriage, the sweet, old-fashioned "kind that Mother made." The settled, comfortable suburban domestic sort, with bungalows and babies and embroidered guest towels and regular meals, and nothing to worry about but the Christmas bills and the installments on the mortgage.

Then there is the fifty-fifty brand, with two jobs, two latchkeys and two pay-envelopes, and mutual ambitions and a studio apartment where you can play at housekeeping, with sketchy breakfasts and gay studio parties and all that. The love-nest marriage!

And for specially temperamental people or geniuses there is the part time marriage, in which you have separate apartments and separate artistic careers, and meet only for romantic evenings together on Tuesdays, Fridays and holidays.

Oh yes, there are so many kinds of marriage—many more kinds than we have space for. And some are good for one kind of person, and some for other types. Marriage is no longer the hard and fast mold into which you must pour yourself like filling into a pie-crust. There is nothing set about it.

There is really nothing wrong with marriage itself. It is the men and women who go into it carelessly and then can't adjust themselves to it who are all wrong. But after the lesson of this war it looks as though the post-war marriage will be built as sanely and wisely as the new post-war houses.

HIGHEST PRIORITY RATING GIVEN SAYS PRIME MINISTER

Fashion Flashes

QUICK CHANGE tricks to give a dress a new look are useful. One such trick is a tie-on apron of black net studded with blue sequins in a scroll and flower design. Tied onto a plain black crepe dress, it is perfect for important after-dark wear.

PERFECTLY DELIGHTFUL little suits designed for little eight-year-olds are featured by one shop. We fell in love with a cardigan suit of gray flannel, the little jacket bound with bright red flannel binding, the little skirt pleated in novelty effect.

IT'S OPEN SEASON for gals who like color around the house. A new dining pyjama suit has trousers of black crepe made on smooth tapering lines, topped by a lime green cummerbund and a sequin-studded fuchsia wool bolero worn over a bow-neck white crepe blouse.

OUR NOMINATION for the loveliest cloth and fur coat of the season goes to a full-length boxy model in rose pink woolen with collar, wide tuxedo panels and sleeves of nutria. The sleeves are full and ease into wide turn-back cuffs.

THE RETURN of the cape is noted in both cloth and fur versions. A lovely mink cape, made with tuxedo revers, has the skins worked so that the sides look like sleeves. It is below-waist length.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By ALAN RANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

With the R.C.A.F. in England, Oct. 11 — (CP) — Two hundred miles north of the Arctic Circle, six aircrew of a Liberator which crashed spent 60 hours huddled together in three one-man dinghies before being rescued by a Catalina flying-boat. Among them was W.O.1 J. H. E. Contant 6th Street West, Cornwall, Ont.

The Liberator was badly damaged in action and caught fire. With flames blazing from one engine and a petrol tank afire the captain had no alternative but to send out an S.O.S. and then "ditch" his aircraft. The Liberator broke up on hitting the water but six of the crew of 9 managed to clamber out into the icy sea and swim away from the sinking wreckage. Three five-feet by three-feet one-man dinghies had been thrown clear in the ditching. By almost superhuman efforts they managed to swim to the dinghies which they opened and clambered into as they tossed about in the swell of the ocean.

They tied the dinghies together and, two to a dinghy, they sat to await rescue. They had no drinking water and only two pocket-sized emergency packs between them.

"They seemed like a normal pleasant family, except that they were the King and Queen and the Princess," said Flt. Sgt. Russell Fogg, of Winnipeg, who drove the royal party on their recent tour of R.C.A.F. bombing stations in Britain.

The King and Queen shook hands with Fogg who holds the B. E. M. Fogg told the Queen he had been overseas since Feb. 1940. The King inquired how many miles they had covered and was told 85.

So badly damaged by anti-aircraft fire was a rocket-firing Typhoon which PO. Charles Benn, Napanee, Ont., brought back to his R.A.F. airfield in Normandy, that ground crews just dismantled it and sent it back for rebuilding. At least one-third of the port wing had been blown off, the oil tank was punctured, the fins on his rockets were perforated with shrapnel, an aileron dangled by one hinge, and the fuselage was dotted with other holes.

"Grand achievement which stands as a record for any squadron in this war" was the signal sent to a Polish Mustang squadron by a group who commands the A.D.G.B. sector in which they are stationed. The congratulations concerned their success against the luftwaffe when they attacked a formation of 60 F.W. 190's as they were taking off from an airfield in the Beauvais area and in 16 minutes sent 16 crashing. The Poles had dived to the attack from such a low level that not one of the Nazis could bail out. Two of the Poles downed three each and two others shot down two each.

A ranker in the R.A.F. ground staff in France four years ago, John Baldwin is now back there as a wind command leader of a Typhoon wing and top scoring Typhoon pilot with 16 1/2 kills. Holder of the D.S.O., D.F.C. and Bar, Baldwin had developed into a skilful and daring exponent of the new rocket weapon. He was a civil engineer in his native city of Bath in peacetime.

LONDON LETTER

By RONALD BARRY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 11—(CP)— Milady purchasing a cheap fur coat this autumn may find herself wearing a fur mixture of her own and her neighbor's cats. For cat-stealing has broken out again in the capital and elsewhere, causing the fur trade many headaches and evoking protests from societies for the care of animals.

With the new dim-out regulations, people are letting their pets out of doors for a late-night stroll and thieves, apparently well organized, have stolen a number of them.

This form of racketeering began in 1940 when the German occupation of Holland and Belgium closed the main sources of cat pelts and opened up a new field for black market operations. These gangs set out to meet the shortage with furs suitably dyed. Their favorite victims are pedigree Persian cats.

Outbreaks of "cat-rustling" began in Surrey where more than 100 cats disappeared within a few weeks. There also were thefts in Cornwall. In one Cornish town a prize-winning Persian was found skinned after it had been missing for three days.

In 1941, officials found 20,000 cat skins in a warehouse in a London suburb, waiting to be dressed. Dyed pelts in Britain now are worth about $1 apiece if sold in the right markets.

Keith Robinson, secretary of the Dumb Friends' League, said: "People who part with their pets with the thought they are finding a good home would not be so pleased if they realized their cat might be helping someone with a slender purse get a cheap fur coat."

Influenza also has led to a reduction of London's large cat population, a member of the Royal Society for the prevention of cruelty to animals said.

He said this ailment "is caused indirectly by explosions of the doodle-bugs" and added that the earlier blitzes on London might account for some of the catch which were reported missing at that time.

TORONTO LEAFS AT OWEN SOUND FOR TRAINING

Forty Members Enjoy Luncheon at Royal York Before Leaving

BIBEAULT ABSENT

Toronto, Oct. 11 (CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs, 40 strong, yesterday headed for Owen Sound to start their training for the 1944-45 National Hockey League campaign for which their prospects—in the words of coach Clarence (Happy) Day—"are the best since we won the championship in 1941-42."

Members of the squad which left for training camp were introduced to newspapermen at the Leafs' annual get-together luncheon.

Day said he based his hopes for a successful season on the return to the Toronto roster of Nick Metz, recently discharged from the Canadian army, and Sweeney Schriner "who will round out our team." Neither Metz nor Schriner were at the luncheon but they will join the team at Owen Sound later on.

Most of the members of last year's team were in the group which left for camp, the most notable absentee being goaltender Paul Bibeault. He is the property of Montreal Canadiens and Leafs are still negotiating for his services.

Davis meets the popular Pierre DeGlane to open tonight's wrestling show at the Hume Arena. There's also a semifinal, but the big show is the main attraction that brings together Ivan Rasputin, the mad Russian with the bear-hug hold, versus Bob "Strangler" Wagner, the octopus hold exponent.

DOERR, MARION MOST VALUABLE AWARD WINNERS

Marion, Shortstop for Cards and Doerr, Second Baseman for Boston

NEWHOUSER NAMED

St. Louis, Oct. 11 — (AP)—Martin (Slats) Marion, star shortstop of the newly crowned world champion St. Louis Cardinals, and Bobby Doerr, Boston Red Sox second baseman, today were named as the most valuable players in the National and American leagues, respectively, for 1944.

The awards, made by the Sporting News, went to Marion on the basis of his great fielding ability and to Doerr because he not only was the defensive ace of the Red Sox, but paced the American League in hitting with a .325 average before leaving Sept. 3 to join the army. In the final batting averages Doerr finished second to the .327 of Manager Lou Boudreau of Cleveland.

Marion was a dominant factor in the Cards' winning their third straight National League pennant. Although his play in the world series was not taken into consideration, Slats came up with many brilliant plays and batted .227 as the Cards whipped the St. Louis Browns in six games.

The Sporting News also singled out two pitchers, Hal Newhouser of the Detroit Tigers and Bill Voiselle of the New York Giants for special merit. Newhouser, with a record of 29 victories and nine defeats was largely responsible for the Tigers staying in the American League pennant race until the final day. Voiselle, a rookie right hander, won 21 and dropped 16 for the fifth-place Giants.

SGT. JOE LOUIS BACK IN U.S.

Champion Toured Army Bases and Gave Exhibitions

New York, Oct. 11 (AP)—Sgt. Joe Louis just back from the European and African war theatres, expects some good fistic talent to emerge from the armed service.

The champ, only seven pounds over the 207 1-2 at which he made his last title defence against Abe Simon in 1942, said he ran into some "real tough boys" as he appeared in 7? exhibitions in England, Scotland, Ireland, Africa and Italy. More than 1,000,000 servicemen saw the shows "for free."

Louis said Ezzria Thompson of Cleveland, whom he first met in a three-rounder in Reading, England, gave him so much trouble that he met him four more times. Then came Johnny Eberb, an air corps mess officer from Oakland, Calif., whom he met in Italy twice, and George Culberson, a Brooklyn boy.

CARDINALS BEST IN EVERY DEPT. FIGURES SHOW

Team Made Only One Error in All Six Games of Series

BETTER PITCHING

St. Louis, Oct. 11—(AP)—Superior hitting, pitching and defense by Shortstop Marty Martin swept St. Louis Cardinals, eight times champions of the National League, into their fifth world's series title.

This was convincingly shown today in the statistics of the six-game series as the 1944 baseball classic passed into history, leaving half of St. Louis happy, the other half sad.

With the Browns leading two victories to one, the Cardinals suddenly rocketed out of their faltering start, and swept through the fourth, fifth and sixth games to a series victory, four games to two. The Browns won the first and third games.

The Red Birds went through the six contests with only one error to tie the mark made by Boston Red Sox in 1918. The Birds' .996 fielding percentage also tied that of the Red Sox. They outhit the Brownies, 49 to 36, and excelled in home runs, three to one.

The Browns, lacking power at the plate, had the dubious distinction of fanning 12 times in one game, one under the record, and striking out 49 times for a new series record. The Browns nicknamed, "The Hitless Wonders of 1944," came within .008 point of the lowest batting mark ever made by a team in a six-game series. They hit only .183. However, the Cardinals couldn't brag too much with their .240 average.

The Cardinals' one error in the six games did not cost a run. The Browns made 10 errors. As a consequence, seven of the Cardinals 16 runs were unearned and that's partly an explanation of the Browns' defeat.

Billy Southworth, manager of the Cards, left tonight for his home in Sunbury, Ohio; Luke Sewell, pilot of the Browns, plans to return to his home in Akron, Orio, tomorrow to prepare for his assignment overseas with a group of baseball players and writers to enterain men in the armed services.

Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals for the last 26 years, said this year's triumph in the string of Cardinals' world's series victories was the most important.

Southworth, whose contract runs through 1945 and 1946, said Sylvester (Blix) Donnelly, freshman righthand pitcher, had earned a starting job next year. Donnelly, in a relief role, struck out seven in four innings in the second game.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Oct. 11 — (CP) — The brightest bit of news to come from the sport front during the past week was confirmation that the National Hockey League is definitely against any haphazard signing of hockey urchins below the age of 16. Anything above that, yes, but the smaller fry will have to be thrown back no matter how good they might look.

After all, some dignity has to be preserved, or else the youngsters might take the league over in its entirety. As it is, the big-time pro loop every season is coming more and more into direct competition with Canada's top memorial cup-seeking teams. Even if the N. H. L. doesn't pay much more to the urchins, the glamor of being in the big tent is enough to take the cream of the crop from the Juniors.

The pro loop's self sacrifice came to light when Andy (Toronto Star) Lytle reported that Hap Day of Toronto Leafs had signed up two of the Chin brothers from Lucknow, Ont., but had to leave 15-year-old George for further seasoning despite the glamor allure of the three Chinese brothers.

From here to there:

Stan Stronge, one of Vancouver's outstanding soccer goalies before he was struck by a falling tree and paralyzed, is making a gallant fight to regain his health. He has been taking treatment at a United States Paralysis Correction School and is making good progress . . . Surveying the hockey scene from Winnipeg, Frankie Boucher calmly opened up a fertile field for argument when he remarked that the greatest improvement in hockey the past 25 years has been in goaltending. There's no argument with his choice of Frankie Brimsek and the late Chuck Gardiner as the greatest of the modern era, but Frankie couldn't have been looking at the goalies of the past year or so when he spoke about that improvement . .

Joe Krol, backfield star of the Hamilton Wildcats in the Ontario Rugby Football Union, leads scorers in both Ontario's football leagues, it is shown in statistics compiled by The Canadian Press.

Krol scored 11 points Saturday against Ottawa Trojans to bring his total to 29 points, four more than leading Seaman Annis Stukus of Toronto Navy, leader in the Services League.

Second to Krol in the O. R. F. U. is Earl Selkirk, Toronto Balmy Beach, with 15 points, and second to Stukus in the Services League is Sgt. Doug Pyzer, also with 15 points.

A program studded with rich events is scheduled for Los Angeles Santa Anita track, which has been granted permission by the California Horse Racing Board to hold a 55-day meet beginning the last week in December. Feature races will be the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap and the $50,000 Santa Anita derby. There will be two other $50,000 stakes, two $25,000 stakes and nine $20,000 stakes.

Lester Patrick, whose New York Rangers finished a dismal last in the National Hockey League last winter, sees better things in store this season. At Winnipeg, where Rangers open pre-season training Thursday, Patrick admitted the team might still be "a little weak" on defence but looked forward to "a vast improvement in the club's all-round play." Patrick said Grant Warwick, forward who suffered a fractured skull last winter, would be back in the lineup.

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

Chummy

One night at a theatre a man who had dined rather too well stood up in his seat right smack in the middle of the play and cried: "Is there a doctor in the house?"

The actors faltered slightly, but the play bravely went on, although it was a bit of a blow to those concerned.

A moment later, the same man still standing, repeated his question.

At this second call, another man arose and said: "Yes, I'm a doctor," whereupon the other nearly finished off the performance for that evening by asking, in a tone of great bonhomie: "How do you like the show, doc?"

Softball Situation:

Belleville "Marines" and Fort Erie "Industrial Foods" will clash in a third and deciding game for the Intermediate "A" championship of the O.A.S.A. at Kew Beach in Toronto tomorrow afternoon. Queen City umpires will call 'em and there won't be the squawking heard in the initial two games of the series. Convener Harry Rollins stated today that Sault Ste. Marie had challenged the "Southern" winners and it has been suggested if the Marines win, the All-Ontario softball finals be played here Friday and Saturday. If Fort Erie happens to win the venue has been suggested at the border town on Saturday and Sunday. Although neither Fort Erie or the Marines are keenly interested in a north-south series, owing to war-working conditions, why Fort Erie can play Sunday softball and not Belleville is one question that may be brought up at the next annual O.A.S.A. meeting. In the meantime all the Marines are interested in is winning the Intermediate "A" title.

As for the junior fiasco at Windsor the local kids weren't home at an early hour this a. m. Reports from Windsor indicate the first game was a comedy of errors with the Squires out-doing the Mic-Macs in this particular effort. There will be more said about the unfortunate climax of the junior finals tomorrow.

Hope for More.

Now the St. Louis Browns have tasted the sweet morsels of world series money no doubt they'll be after more. When the Browns won their first American League pennant this year it put the Mound City in a tie with Cleveland as a one-time winner. The Yankees have won the championship 14 times, with the Athletics ranking second with nine. The Tigers missed their seventh flag when defeated on the last day of the season. The league's pennant standings follow:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
New York	14	28	.333
Philadelphia	9	35	.205
Detroit	6	38	.136
Boston	6	38	.136

Ring Ramblings:

The Hume Arena ring will take quite a beating for the remainder of the week. Tonight it's professional wrestling headed by a ruffian bout between Ivan Rasputin, the mad Russian, and "Strangler Bob" Wagner, the Oregon octupus. Both Wagner and the Russian boast of decisions over Billie Watson and the winner of tonight's bout here will definitely demand a bout with Bill Longson for the world title, as they contend Watson is no longer a contender for the crown.

Tomorrow evening Matchmaker Bill Crawford's Reliance Club boxers will hold their final workout at the Market St. sports palace prior to their second big mitt show here on Friday. Maybe Promoter Crawford is an optimist staging a show on Friday the 13th, but judging from the calibre of leather-pushers Crawford has lined up for his second show the patronage should be even better than last month's attendance. The show will be headed by a go between Ted Stephens and "Jibber" Ellis, the pride of Trenton. "Dynamite" Wheeler will be back as will the ambitious and slugging Doug. Day, Jerry Downes and enough good mittsters to assure another nine interesting bouts.

Remember When—

Lord Hawke, famous English cricketer, died six years ago today. The 78-year-old baron captained Yorkshire County Cricket eleven from 1883 to 1910. During the first Great War he was president of Marlebone Cricket Club, the governing body of the game.

Football Opener.

There'll be many a new face on the B.C.I.&V.S. junior Interscholastic grid squad when the Church St. collegians pry off the Junior Bay of Quinte lid on their home campus this afternoon. Coach "Red" Townsend had to move practically his entire 1943 junior squad up to the senior ranks to replace vacancies left due to enlistments, so when the "tri-color Collegians" trot out against Picton Collegiate this afternoon only the parents will recognize the players.

The Quinte Senior Interscholastic rugby football season opens tomorrow afternoon with the champion St. Mikes squad playing at Albert College. The personnel of the latter squad is unknown, Coach Pepper having been working secretly with some new students at Albert.

Joe knows the importance of owning and keeping Victory Bonds. He knows that when peace comes his Bonds will mean far more to him than they do today. He knows that when radios and refrigerators, automobiles and washing machines once more are available, his Victory Bonds will enable him to buy what he wants when he wants it.
Joe doesn't think he is making any sacrifice when he buys Victory Bonds. The men and women in the fighting forces are the ones who are doing that. And he is grateful to them! He knows that by their blood and sweat and toil they are keeping him secure and free. He thinks they are great. So, he cheerfully digs down and buys one more Bond than he did last time. Horse Sense Bridge

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Alibi Aleck is quite a character. He keeps explaining: "I play the cards as well as the next guy. But I'm unlucky with my finesses. I always find the king on the wrong side."

Aleck misses more contracts than a lawyer can break. And he fails to realize why. Because there are a number of plays in bridge which he never thinks of using.

As declarer in the south with spades as trumps, attempt to win 12 tricks in this deal:

NORTH
♠ K 9 8 7
♥ 7 4
♦ A K 2
♣ 6 5 4 2

WEST
♠ None
♥ K Q J
♦ 9 8 7 6 5 4
♣ K J 8 7

EAST
♠ 6 5
♥ 10 9 8 6 5 3 2
♦ Q J
♣ 10 9

SOUTH
♠ A Q J 10 4 3 2
♥ A
♦ 10 3
♣ A Q 3

The opening lead from west is the heart king. When dummy hand goes down, only the club suit worries you. Because you can easily keep from losing any tricks in the other three suits.

If you take a club finesse and it wins, your troubles are over. You can then salt down your desired 12 tricks and concede a club at the end. But if the club finesse loses, two club tricks will die.

Before taking a doubtful finesse, always see if you have any hope of pulling a strip-and-end play. In the strip-and-end principle of plays, 22 combinations of methods may be employed.

One of the easiest of these methods is too often overlooked. It involves giving up a trick that you can trump. Its purpose is to throw an opponent into the lead while you sluff a loser thereon.

The success of an endplay depends on finding the thrown-in opponent forced to lead what you want him to. In preparation for such a situation, you must first strip as many suits as possible.

Take your top heart, two trumps, trump a heart, take two diamonds, and then lead the last dummy diamond. When east shows out, refuse to trump it. Sluff your tiny south club and let west win that trick.

Now in the lead, what will west lead? There is no lead he can make to prevent you from bagging the rest. Can you see it now?

MADOC

Thank-Offering Meeting is Held In St. Peter's

Madoc — The St. Peter's thank-offering meeting was held in the church on October 6th with the president, Mrs. Millar, in the chair. The business was taken. Twenty visits were made during the month. The expense secretary reported the bale as being packed and sent away. The November meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Spencer.

The thank-offering was received and dedicated by Rev. C. A. Bunting.

The president called on the guest speaker, Mrs. C. A. Bunting, retired missionary of China. She spoke on the text, "Looking Unto Jesus the Author and Finisher of Our Faith." She spoke of the great commission to tell others and told of many of the conversions in China. Rev. C. A. Bunting then told of great need still existing as millions have never heard about Jesus. The Lord prepares these people for the reception of the gospel as they read their Bibles very intelligently. He closed his remarks with a plea for real Christianity here at home. A vote of thanks to the guest speakers was moved by Mrs. E. West and seconded by Mrs. Jenkins.

Barbara Nicol and Barbara Kincaid sang "Trust and Obey."

Mrs. R. Lewis and Mrs. H. Mackintosh served refreshments.

MARMORA

St. Paul's Greets New Rector Rev. J. Brownlie

Marmora — Large congregations were present at St. Paul's on Sunday to welcome the new rector, Rev. John M. Brownlie, L.Th., S.Th. and to participate in joyous harvest thanksgiving services. Despite the lateness of the festival, members of the congregation excelled themselves in providing flowers, vegetables and fruits for lady decorators to arrange artistically for the beautification of the sacred edifice. Preaching at the morning celebration of Holy Communion at which seventy-eight communicated, the rector gave his hearers an outline of what he believed should be the four marks of not only a harvest thanksgiving service but also of every form of Christian service — truthfulness, right proportions, sacrifice and love. Prior to his sermon, he expressed thanks to the congregation for the work of renovation which had been carried out in the church and rectory, which was reminiscent of the days of the rebuilding of the wall of Jerusalem, under Nehemiah's direction "when the people had a mind to work." He further expressed thanks for kindnesses received since coming to the parish on Friday. During the offertory, the choir rendered as an anthem "This is my Father's World" with Mesdames P. Gray and C. Nichol taking a duet part. In the afternoon, brethren of Marmora A. F. and A. M. 222 with visiting brethren attended in goodly numbers. The parable of the unprofitable servants was chosen as the basis for an impressive discourse upon God's claim on all our services. The lesson was read by W. J. Cottrell and L. R. Rundle sang, "The Stranger of Galilee." Flowers on the altar were given by W. J. Cottrell in memory of the late Canon C. M. Harris and members of the congregation who have passed unto the eternal harvest. Flowers on the organ were the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Matthews of Deloro in loving memory of the latter's mother, Mrs. Ada Cross. In the evening Rev. J. M. Brownlie officiated at the annual harvest thanksgiving service at St. Mark's, Bonarlaw, which was well attended.

Blood Donors

Though colds and Thanksgiving mitigated against the attendance of local donors at the Belleville Clinic on Sunday, fifteen made the trip including Mrs. Fred Matthews of Deloro, the first of the district to give the tenth donation, and to receive the special pin. Two new donors raised the total of individual donors to 260. The following donated—Mrs. Fred Matthews 10, Tom Read 8, Clifford Chambers 8, Harry Park 7, Clayton Clemenger 7, Harry Neal 6, William Pack 6, Warden Deline 6, Leland Richardson 5, Fred Lajoie 5, Mrs. Fred Lajoie 3, Marion Bedore 3, Mrs. Clifford Chambers 2, Raymond Bonter 2, Mrs. Clayton Clemenger 1.

Little Benny's Note Book

Mr. and Mrs. Peebles played bridge with pop and ma last night, and this morning at breakfast pop said to ma, That chap Peebles is a fine example of a really sane man. He's got a really level head on those sloping shoulders of his. His ideas have a background of solid thought and he expresses them in good English and not too much of it. He's one of the small minority who can talk to you or listen to you with equal ease and intelligence. It's a privillidge and a pleasure to be in his company, pop said.

Well, if you think he's as high and mighty as all that, you may be impressed by his final remark just before he left, ma said. I mean it was something I accidently overheard him saying to his wife just as they were going out the front door to the effect that you'd better watch your diet, William, because you seem to be developing quite a little pot in front, she said, and pop said, I'm sorry to hear that about Peebles, but it just proves that even a gifted chap like that has his blind side. My figure is distinguished by a natural undulation very becoming to my years, and no pot about it. Well well, poor Peebles, there goes another idol rolling in the dust. However, I think I'll try to get a little more exercise, if only to discourage baseless rumors, pop said.

That's very broad minded of you, William, ma said. And I think you're quite right, more exercise and less starch is never a bad combination under any circumstances, she said.

And today ma called up Mrs. Peebles to talk about different things saying, And by the way, if my husband happens to mention his suspicion of a stummick to your husband, just tell your husband to laugh, it off, because it was all a little joke on my part.

Proving it was just one of ma's plots.

CHAPTER 18

Ann shrugged. "Couldn't say."

Paul looked at her sharply. The car swerved. "Hey," he admonished himself, "want to land in a ditch?"

They escaped the ditch, but with the lurch, Rowdy like so much quicksilver, poured over their shoulders into their laps. Rowdy's experience in cars had been confided to riding in the front seat, and once esconced she settled down with an air of belonging. "She evidently thinks that her being near the wheel has something to do with the car's getting from one place to another," Ann observed. "But it doesn't my young elephant. Back where you belong, please! Better pull up, Paul."

Paul drew to a stop and, with some difficulty, they poured Rowdy back into the rear seat. She objected strenuously, but finally compromised on a position which involved the full weight of her head on Ann's shoulder. "This is delightful," Ann said. "I just love having you breathe down my neck."

Paul chortled. "Ain't a Great Dane a load in a car?" he demanded with a trace of pride. "What did you mean," he went back, "you 'couldn't say'."

"I don't follow. Couldn't say' what?"

"You know. I said 'It's great to be in love' and you said 'Couldn't say'."

"Oh. Well, that's it. Couldn't say. Never been."

"Yah, you never been," Paul jeered. "Don't make me laugh. It sticks out all over you. Over him, too. Over both of you. You're a pair!"

"You're all wrong. I happen to be engaged to be married to one nice—very nice—Tom Barton. And Mr. Wain's wife is apparently still in love with him."

"That dame couldn't love anybody but herself," Paul stated scornfully. "But she wants him back, that's a cinch."

"What makes you say that?" Ann asked quickly.

"What should you care? You're not in love with the guy."

"You've got a most unpleasant disposition," Ann informed him coldly.

He laughed. "All right, all right. You're just like Carol. Curiosity! She's made out of it."

"You seem to be rather in love yourself," Ann remarked.

"Am I denying it? Married a year and two months and worse than ever in love."

"I'll let you tell me later how wonderful Carol is. What about Mrs. Wain?"

Paul squared himself for a good story. "She comes to me yesterday at the show, see. Just when I'm ready to go home. 'Poor Chris,' she says, 'he's just heartbroken about losing the Baron. I'd like to surprise him with a new stud. Could you help me locate one for him, Mr. Preund?'"

"Oh," said Ann in a small voice. "That does look like she means business."

"Sure it does."

"What did you tell her?"

"I wanted to tell her that there's a couple of things a man likes to buy for himself, and a Great Dane stud happens to be one of them."

"Only you didn't."

"What was the sense? There are no good studs now, anyway. With Germany all messed up, there's none coming over. I just said I'd keep my eye peeled and let it go at that."

"How about Wolfgang? Your Wolfgang?"

"Wolfgang? Now you're talking. Take it from me, the Baron wasn't as good as Wolfgang. The Baron threw plenty of monkeys in his day. But Wolfgang's never passed on a light eye or a roach back. Mom says he's even greater than Rhinegold himself, and she ought to know. But who's going to believe it? How're we going to prove it?"

"Wait'll Rowdy wins at the Morris and Essex. That'll prove something, won't it?"

"Oh, sure."

"You think I'm fooling, but I'm not. I entered her this morning in the American Bred class. It's too late to do anything about it. The application's already in the mail."

"You're kidding."

"Stay in the middle of the road. I'm not kidding, Paul; I've entered her."

Paul's jaw dropped. "Look, Rowdy lost yesterday." His voice went off to a croak. "Wain's giving you the blue ribbon was just to make you feel good, but not to put any wrong ideas in your head."

"Mr. Wain has a great deal to learn about women. He also has a great deal to learn about dogs."

"Nobody knows it all," Paul argued. "He's a swell guy. Lay off him."

"He should lay off Rowdy. Rowdy's a swell dog."

"O.K., she's a swell dog. The Rhinegold bloodline is the finest in the world, and I don't mean maybe. But Rowdy doesn't stand a chance at a show like the Morris and Essex."

"Does Gretel?"

"Gretel has a good win behind her. She'll probably take her class—if there's not too much competition," he added gloomily.

"You bred those dogs, didn't you?" Ann asked slowly. "And you're losing your nerve. Worse than that, you're losing faith in your own achievements. That's bad news, Paul," she finished gravely. "Honestly it is."

"Don't I know it?" he mumbled, with grim lines of worry and strain settling into his round face. "If I don't make a couple of sales soon, I'll have the sheriff on my heels. Over ninety pounds of food a day those pups eat. And I can't cut down, I got to keep 'em up in good shape, or my whole investment's shot."

Ann was shocked into a new realization of the hazards of dog business.

And then Paul started to talk about dogs, and she realized that here was no chance affiliation with a casual livelihood. As well ask a musician to give up his music or an artist to give up his art. Paul lived, ate, and slept the profession he had inherited. Great, sonorous names rolled off his lips; Helgas and Thors and Odins and Rupercets. He was like a Burke's Peerage of Dane genealogy. Ann pricked up her ears as he mentioned a Rowena.

"Any relation of this Rowena?" she asked.

"Grandam in the sixth generation, and she figured again in some line breeding that my father was working on in the fifth and fourth generations," he explained glibly.

"What was she like?"

"That was a dog." His voice quickened with enthusiasm. "One of my uncles bred her mother in the old country and my father brought her over here."

"You don't mean, brought her over before she was born?"

Paul nodded. "That's how the old timers used to do it. They weren't interested in the individual dog, they were interested in the bloodline, in what would some day happen. Well, anyway, the boat was late, and the pups were born in Hoboken on the dock. The trip must have been hard on the mother, because Rowena was the only one of the litter that lived, and the mother died that night. That was some night," he mused. "I was just a kid, and my father sent me out to find a wet nurse—that's a mother dog that had lost her puppies."

"Yes, I know. Dad had to do that once with a litter of setters. And did you find one?"

He pointed to Rowdy's head on her shoulder. "She wouldn't be here if I hadn't."

"And did Rowena—the one that was born on the dock—turn out to be anything?"

Paul shrugged with elaborate nonchalance. "Just a winner at the Garden, that's all."

"Oh."

"Oh,? What do you mean. 'oh'! A winner at the Garden is something, let me tell you."

"Is that all you can go?" Ann asked, still unimpressed.

"Well, she could have licked the male winner and gone Best of winners," Paul admitted.

"And in the dog world, that's like being king; I mean that's the end of the line?"

"That's far enough to satisfy anybody." Paul was adopting the tone of voice that a boy uses when he unravels to his sister the mysteries of a ball game. "Then the Best of Winners goes into competition with the assembled Champions."

"And then what?"

"That's where the Best of Winners usually gets licked."

"Is that a rule or a law or something?"

"Say, listen, are you ribbing me?"

"I am not, I'm serious." Ann was guileless. "I want to know how far a good dog can go."

"A lot of good dogs don't go that far. But just supposing that a miracle happened, and this wonder dog beats a lot of champions—"

"Yes?"

"Well, that would make him—"

"Or her," Ann corrected.

"Or her," Pau accepted the correction, "Best of Breed."

"What do you get for that?"

"What do you get? What don't you get! You get a beautiful ribbon with a rosette on it, and you get a trunk-load of silverware, and you get a pretty swelled head."

"And that makes you king or queen or whatever. That's the end of the road."

"No you go into a group competition. Working Breeds. You meet a lot of champions not monkeys that were licked by some dog that sneaked up through clases. And you get licked."

"But if you don't get licked?"

"The point is that you do get licked. The perfect dog's never been bred, and a Dane's too large and smoothed-skinned to cover up even the smallest fault. So you get licked, see?"

"But suppose you don't?" Ann persisted.

Paul heaved a patient sigh. "Well then this wonder dog goes Best of Show. And don't ask me—That's king and everything else rolled into one in the dog world."

"That's what I wanted to know," said Ann complacently.

Soon they drove up beneath the creaky sign of the Tru-Frend Tourist Camps and Kennels. The surroundings were lovelier than Ann had remembered on that stormy night a few short weeks ago. The big maple tree was putting out green leaves and forsythia bushes in bloom glorified the small white cabins behind the big house. There wasn't a sound, not even from the kennels as the car rattled to a noisy stop.

"The dogs are being fed," Paul surmised. "Mom's probably out there with them, Carol's probably up with the baby."

"Then you take Rowdy while I run in and see my namesake," said Ann. "Oh, and I want to phone Helen, or she'll have the police on my trail."

"Sorry." Paul forced a casual grin to his ips. "Last time you were here the phone was out of order. This time it's disconnected."

"Oh," said Ann. "Never mind, I'll drop her a note." She turned away soberly. There was a quality of quiet despair in Paul's offhand annoucement.

Ann made a quick summary of her dwindling bank account. True Helen had offered to defray the expenses of her illness, but Helen's favors invariably had strings attached to them. In this instance, she would have dictated the full terms of an agreement in which a recuperation under the friendly roof of the Pruends would havev no part. And Helen would double her efforts to bring Ann to her senses as far as Tom Barton was concerned. Indeed she had already hinted darkly that Tom's affections were being sought by a charming girl from the South, a Kentucky belle.

"I don't want to upset you before you get your strength back," Helen had written, "but mark my words, Tom isn't going to wait for you forever. He's too attractive." Certainly she would feel that Ann was completely ruining her chances by this latest whim of burying herself in an out-of-the-way tourist camp.

Ann quickened her steps as a baby's shrill cry sounded from the upper floor. The baby was in her bassinet; and Carol was lying on the bed; her head buried in the pillows. She didn't hear Ann's step on the threshold.

"Carol—" Ann called softly.

Caro sat up. Ann saw that her face was drawn and that she looked as if she had been weeping.

"Ann, for goodness' sake!" Carol exclaimed.

"I'm the new boarder." Ann felt suddenly robust and strong. Instinct told her to ignore Carol's reddened eyes. She moved to the bassinet. The baby stopped crying.

"Oh," Ann breathed, "she's a darling—May I pick her up?"

"If you want to," said Carol listlessly.

"Shall I bring her to you?"

Carol shook her head. "No. Keep her away from me." Her voice was hard and bitter.

Ann repressed a quick, shocked protest. Was it possible Carol didn't love the baby? Anger flared. She laid the baby back into the crib and sat down on the bed. "Look here, Carol," she said straightly. "It's none of my business, but you happen to be Paul's whole life, and you can't let him down at this point."

"That's a joke." Carol's teeth bit sharply at her lip. "I can't let him down, cant I? Well, you just watch me let him down—" Her voice choked and in another moment she was sobbing hysterically against Ann's shoulder.

"Hush—" Ann glanced apprehensively toward the hall. "You wouldn't want him to hear, would you?"

"No, no, he mustn't."

Ann closed the door and returned to the bed. "I don't want to force confidences, Carol, but when I came back here today, I felt as if I was coming home. I mean, somehow you all seem closer to me than my own family."

Carol nodded. "I know what you mean. Once I went to a medium," She faltered shyly. "Well, not once, but a lot of times. I believe in spirits, though Paul says I'm a little nutty to. But anyway this medium said that people you're drawn to you've known in another life, or maybe will go on knowing after you're dead...."

Ann restrained a smile. "Perhaps that's true," she conceded cautiously. "I never thought of it just that way, but I'd like to believe it," she added gently. "I'd like to go on knowing you and Paul."

"That's good, because I'm going to die," said Carol very quietly. And then her quiet broke and she was sobbing her pitiful story in Ann's proecive embrace, and Ann was rocking her back and forth as if she were a child.

"No, no," Ann denied fiercely, "I don't believe a word of it. And you mustn't either. You're just worn out with worry and keeping this to yourself."

"But my mother had it." Carol whispered. "And the doctor said if I didn't get away—"

"But you will get away," Ann broke in.

"How?" Bitterness came back into Carol's voice. "We're down to our last dollar. Paul was expecting that Wolfgang would begin to make a reputation and bring in stud fees; he expected that with the spring coming on we'd make a couple of big sales, but nothing's happened."

"But if you'd only tell Paul, he'd try to do something else."

"He can't do something else." Carol's head raised proudly. "I wouldn't want him to do anything else."

"Forgive me," Ann said, above the lump that suddenly crowded her throat. I thought a few minutes ago that you didn't love him."

"Maybe you thought I didn't love the baby too—" Carol's voice quivered. "Oh, Ann, I'm frightened.... I want to live, I don't want to die!"

"You won't die," Ann cried passionately. "Honestly you won't!"

Carol sank back on the pillow. Peace lay upon her face, as if the stormy weeping had washed her clean of fear and doubt.

The baby began to whimper. Carol sat up. She reached out her arms. "Ann bring her to me," she said.

Ann left Carol with the baby, and ran downstairs in answer to Paul's entreating shouts. "Say, Ann! Where are you! Come on down here!"

She found him standing in the entrance way with his mother. Rowdy was there, too. The old lady looked at Ann with that deeper sight than is given to mortals who can see only with their eyes. "Paul says you have come to live with us for awhile, and that is good," she said.

"Mom thinks Rowdy's got something!" Paul broke in excitedly. "It's her hunch to go ahead and put her in the show!"

"Oh, Mrs. Freund!" Ann was speechless.

"She is a different dog than when you took her," the old lady said. She ran her gnarled hand over Rowdy's back. "You are to be congratulated. She shows fine care. Good strong bones, she has, a beautiful smooth coat—and best of all, the Rheingold head and neck."

"When Mom says that," cried Paul with jubilance, "it's money in the bank!"

She felt Paul's arm around her shoulder. "This means we go to work, partner. Ready?"

"Ready!" she rejoined.

The days flew, with June approaching too swiftly, and gusts of unseasonable summer weather. "Is the Morris and Essex show always held on Decoration Day?" Ann ventured.

"Always," Paul told her.

"I was hoping they could put it off this year until next month."

"Lord, no! We'd be wrecks if this kept up much longer."

It was astonishing how life revolved around Rowdy's well-being for those weeks. Anything you do intensively can become the centre of your universe, Ann discovered. That was why, she concluded, there were so many lopsided people in the world. "I must be careful," she adjured herself, "or I'll turn into one of these doggy women with runover heels and straggly hair."

Taken as a hobby dog business was first-rate, but as a profession, it was like holding on to something with your finger tips. The day Rowdy got into a scrap with the cat and had her ear scratched was like a nightmare. "That ear gets infected and flops, and we're finished," Paul procaimed ominously.

Motorists Warned To Drive Carefully

With the impending autumn rains at their height and leaves falling rapidly, motorists are advised to drive their vehicles with caution at this time of the year.

"Even following the fall rains the water remains beneath the leaves on the city streets making them exceedingly slippery if sudden appliance of weight upon the wet leaves is made, such as tires, when brakes are applied suddenly. Each year about this time reports of increased accidents are received by the police department and we find that invariably the cause of such accidents is due to motor vehicles skidding on the leaf-covered streets following rains," explained Chief Probert today as he urged motorists to drive their vehicles with caution, especially at intersections, at this time of the year.

Pedestrians were also warned to be extremely cautious when crossing city streets, thus materially helping in the minimizing of possible accidents.

Economic Disarming Of Germany Urged

Moscow, Oct. 11 —(AP)— The army newspaper Red Star criticized certain unnamed United States interests today for expressing sentiments in behalf of German industries and demanded economic disarmament of the Reich after victory.

"German business interests are doing all possible to protect their interests after Germany's defeat," the newspaper said. "The German kings of industry expect to protect themselves by international cartels to which they belong."

The article added that unless the Allies agreed on the liquidation of German monopolies, the Reich again would become the centre of international cartels spreading over Europe and Latin America.

WALL ST.

New York, Oct. 11—(AP)—Stocks were steady today but the market had little in the way of leadership apart from specialties and low priced utilities.

Activity of utility holding company shares, marked by transfers of sizable blocks, was attributed, according to brokers, to "a better feeling" on the United States election.

In higher ground most of the time were General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, United Aircraft, Kennecott, Pan American Airways, General Electric, Santa Fe, Great Northern and Canadian Pacific.

Canadian and Allied Army Leaders Informed Of Salvage Drive Here

Letters assuring them of the wholehearted co-operation of Ontario's districts and especially that of the Bay of Quinte have gone forth to General Dwight Eisenhower, Allied commander in chief and General Chris Vokes, Canadian Army Headquarters in Italy, from Mr. Wray VanLuven, provincial organizer for the Emergency Waste Paper Drive which starts here on Monday, Oct. 16th.

Copies of the letters have been received by Mayor Harry Rollins.

The letters are datelined Belleville, Ont., and each urban centre and rural township is mentioned in the letter to General Vokes.

To General Eisenhower, Mr. VanLuven writes, "Let me assure you that our great paper drives in this section of Ontario, will maintain the supply of tools to you and we have every confidence in your ability to finish the job."

To General Vokes he pointed out, "We are going to dig out every cellar and attic in this Quinte district even as the gallant lads of the Hastings and Prince Edward dug out the cellars of Ortona. The regiments of the municipalities will avenge Ortona in this drive for paper."

Air Cadet Training To Undergo Revision

With recruiting of air crew for the Royal Canadian Air Force now discontinued, the syllabus of training for air cadets across Canada is to be revised with emphasis to be placed on peacetime activities and other civil training. Directors of the Air Cadet League of Canada recently met in Toronto to draft the new training schedule to fit in with changed conditions.

Transformation of the air cadet organization into a peacetime youth movement is mooted as advisable in view of the fact that this would enable present equipment and other accommodation to be utilized to advantage.

Belleville air cadets are continuing to meet once each week with members of the band receiving their particular phase of training. Drilling of a precision flight with team musketry shooting and development of a sports program are planned in the local program, it is stated by Commanding Officer Dawson C. Boyd.

To assist in the training of Belleville air cadets the local St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E. has recently forwarded a cheque for $25. Commanding Officer Dawson Boyd assured that the cheque would be used to good advantage in carrying out the new air cadet training syllabus.

Aid Received Is Inadequate

Chungking, Oct. 11 — (AP) — A Chinese cabinet spokesman asserted today that prior to the end of May lend-lease supplies received by the armies in East and South China totalled 50 anti-tank guns, 60 mountain guns and 30,000,000 rounds of rifle and machine-gun ammunition.

The spokesman, P. H. Chang, said China appreciated the immense transportation difficulties involved but he reiterated that aid so far received has been inadequate.

He attributed recent Chinese reverses in Honan province primarily to lack of anti-tank guns and tanks.

HUNGARY ON VERGE OF MILITARY KNOCKOUT HUN MAY BE WITHDRAWING FROM HOLLAND

Russians Expect Imminent Collapse Active Resistance

Siege of Growing Ferocity Reported at Memel Port

London, Oct. 12 — (CP)—Russian troops battled within five miles of the Prussian port of Memel today in a siege of growing ferocity after invading what Hitler considers German soil by occupying the town of Pilkisi inside the Memel metropolitan area, acquired by Germany in the spring of 1939.

In the south, the Moscow radio said, other Russians broke into Debrechen, third largest Hungarian city of 122,517, on the Orient railroad 116 miles east of menaced Budapest. The Germans said their tanks had thrown a 30-mile-wide ring about strong Soviet armored forces in this area and had beaten back relief columns moving from Oradea, in Romania, and Karcag, in Hungary. The German communique acknowledged the loss of Cluj, capital of Transylvania.

All along the frontiers of East Prussia, the Germans reported violent battle.

200 Tanks in Action

A "concentric attack" was launched against Memel by more than 200 Russian tanks, Berlin said. Of these 98 were reported destroyed. 15 by guns of German warships supporting the beleaguered garrison.

Soviet attacks north of Warsaw and south of Rosan on the historic Narew river were checked, the enemy asserted, as was another thrust from the Lithuanian frontier town of Vilkaviskis toward the east frontier of East Prussia.

The Germans said the Red Army had renewed its assault on Riga, capital of Latvia, with fresh divisions and material. The Russians have been at the edge of the port for weeks.

"Near Tilsit, heavy fighting continues on the eastern border of East Prussia," the Berlin radio said. "The Soviets at the same time continued their flank attack with strong forces from the south out of the Natew sector against East Prussia."

The German garrison on the big Estonian island of Saare (Osel) at the mouth of the Bay of Riga was compressed into the Sworbe peninsula, Berlin said, and Russian attempts to liquidate the force with an amphibious operation were declared beaten off.

The enemy said Russian forces which reached the fourth largest city of Hungary, Keckemet, 50 miles southeast of Budapest, had been pushed back by a German-Hungarian counter-attack.

ALBANIAN PORT CLEARED OF NAZIS BY PARTISANS

British Destroyers Help Albanians Capture Port and Seize One Vessel

EQUIPMENT TAKEN

Rome, Oct. 12 —(AP)— Albanian partisans have cleared German troops from Gjashdle, two miles inland from Sarande (Porto Edda), Albanian port opposite Corfu which British invaders captured yesterday, an Allied communique announced today.

More than 600 prisoners were taken in the area by the land forces of the Adriatic. Gjashdle, which was mopped up before noon yesterday, fell to partisans who turned a captured artillery piece on the Germans. Many Germans were killed.

Allied headquarters said a considerable quantity of guns and stores were captured in Sarande area. The list included 24-pounders, Italian 77-mm. Howitzers, German 20-mm. anti-aircraft guns, staff cars, small arms, much oil and miscellaneous equipment.

The bulletin gave no information on the situation in Greece.

Destroyers Assist.

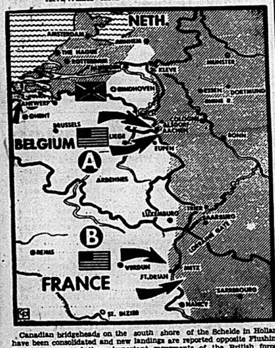
The British destroyers Belvoir and Wilton and two armed landing crafts aided troop operations on the Albanian coast by bombarding enemy batteries Oct. 9, Naval headquarters announced. An enemy craft was captured.

Other British naval vessels meanwhile have been battering harbor installations and shipping in the Aegean to hamper German withdrawals.

British carrier aircraft attacked installations at Porto Largo on Leros Oct. 10.

Allied bombers sank a 1,000-ton merchantman in the gulf of Petali Oct. 8, hit a Siebel ferry and destroyed two locomotives and 20 trucks on the west shore of the gulf of Salonika in Geece.

ANTWERP AND AACHEN BESIEGED



Canadian bridgeheads on the south shore of the Schelde in Holland have been consolidated and new landings are reported opposite Flushing. On the success of these important movements of the British forces, hangs the fate of Antwerp and perhaps, victory in 1944. The small arrow on the map indicates British action near Antwerp. Larger arrows show two engagements of the American 1st and 3rd armies along the Siegfried Line. Aachen (A) is surrounded while American troops are pushing forward in the Metz area (B).

STALIN PRAISES INDUSTRIAL MIGHT OF UNITED STATES

Without American Aid Course of War Might Have Been Different States Marshal

BREAKS PRECEDENT

By EDDY GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Oct. 12—(AP)—Premier Stalin, praising the industrial might of the United States, told a gathering at the British embassy last night that without American war aid the course of the European conflict might have been different.

Speaking at a precedent-setting dinner given in his honor by Prime Minister Churchill, the Soviet Premier also said both Russia and Britain had played big parts in the war, but the stupendous production and organizing ability of the United States had helped turn the tide.

It was the most generous public utterance of any Russian in this war, and British and Russian guests called it a "great tribute."

The formal dinner lasted until almost midnight.

Even as the dinner was in progress, the close co-operation of the United Nations was emphasized by the announcement that Bulgaria had acceded to joint Allied demands to withdraw her troops from Greek and Yugoslav territory before Oct. 15.

Stalin Breaks Precedent.

Mr. Stalin broke all precedent by attending the dinner in the British embassy—the first time he ever had visited any embassy in Moscow. The dinner was interrupted by the sound of Moscow's victory guns saluting the Red army's capture of Cluj, capital of Transylvania.

Mr. Churchill exclaimed it was the first salute he had heard in Moscow, and led a group of 30 guests to the windows of the dining room, where they watched until the last rocket had arched over the Kremlin.

When the meal progressed for some time without toasts, Mr. Stalin inquired if it was against the law to make a toast. Mr. Churchill responded with one to the leaders of both countries—King George of Britain and President Kalinin of Russia.

Many Toasts.

Mr. Stalin's first toast was to President Roosevelt, and his second to the United States for her part in bringing victory to the United Nations. There were many subsequent toasts to the importance of co-operation and friendship among the three great powers.

During the meal, at which turkey was the main dish, Messrs. Churchill and Stalin talked long and earnestly. The Prime Minister was overheard to compare the situation as regards Russia and Britain today with the outlook when he came to Moscow in 1942. Then, he said, both nations were in great difficulty, with the Germans near Moscow and near Suez. At that time, he continued, Britain could give Russia little help.

After the dinner, Mr. Churchill, Foreign Secretary Eden, Foreign Commissar Molotov and United States Ambassador Harriman talked with Ambassador Sir Archibald Clark Kerr.

Super Explosive Built To Blast Way Thru Huns' Dragons' Teeth

Boston, Oct. 12—(AP)—Known only by the cryptic symbol "RDX" a super explosive was built by U. S. Army Ordnance for engineers to blast a way through miles of concrete anti-tank defences on the approaches to the pivotal city of Aachen.

Col. H. B. Sheets, commander of the Boston ordnance district, explained that these obstacles, "known as 'dragons' teeth' and looking like Martian molars," had to be levelled to permit passage of tanks and other combat vehicles.

"RDX" takes up much less space than TNT, and, said the Colonel, is much more effective

Paper Goes to War

Five years ago Private "Paper" went to war. He was one of the important cogs in the wheel of ingredients that has turned out thousands of tons of war materiel.

During that time he has done a splendid job. He is still doing it.

But five years of war have exacted a heavy toll on Private Paper's reserves. A consistent stream of reinforcements has caused stocks on the home front to deplete at an alarming rate.

The drain has been so heavy that at the present time a serious shortage is threatened—unless something is done about it.

That something can be done—if Mr. and Mrs. John Public make up their minds to do it.

It is quite simple. Just gather all the used paper that has been cluttering up the cellar, attic or garage for the past years, bundle it, and place it outside the door before 7 p.m., Monday, October 16th., when collectors will pick it up.

If this is done, then that day to which every one is looking forward—the day of Victory—will be that much closer.

If it is not done, mayhap a soldier, badly wounded in the bloody battlefields, will not get that life-giving blood plasma. Isolated paratroopers will not get the supplies dropped to them by parachute. Gunners and riflemen may not get that shell or cartridge that is so vitally needed.

For that is Private Paper's job. Providing containers for plasma, medical and other supplies, parts and ingredients for shells and cartridges.

His reinforcements are in the cellars, attics, garages and kitchens of the district, waiting to be commandeered.

Put them in the draft. Show Hitler that we back home carry some weight in the nation's war effort. But this time make it paper weight.

Do it now.

'We Have Hard Job Ahead But Victory is Certain'

—Eisenhower

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Oct. 12 —(AP)— Gen. Eisenhower declared today that "we have a hard job ahead but victory is certain."

The supreme commander said he would permit no fraternizing with the Germans as his invasion armies move deeper into the Reich.

He is resolved on one thing: that the fight will continue unabated through the winter, if necessary, and as much longer as it may take to crush the enemy. There may be pauses in the Allied advances due to the ferocity of German resistance and Allied supply problems, but there will be no letup in aggressive action on the part of the Allies.

High Praise For British Airborne Divisions.

Discussing recent operations the General praised the gallant fight of the British 1st Airborne divisions at Arnhem in Holland. Only about 2,000 of 8,000 men returned from the attempt to hold the Arnhem bridgehead.

"I feel myself that not enough credit has been given to the tremendous advantages that accrued to us through operations of the first Allied airborne army," he said, "the first British airborne division not only gave all the Allied forces one of the most gallant examples of bravery, fortitude and courage in all this war, but by drawing upon themselves the fury of the German counter-attack, they enabled us to hold important bridges. "It was a valiant manoeuvre and it does not detract in the slightest degree from the excellent work and courage of the 82nd and 101st. U. S. airborne divisions which came behind them. They did beautiful work and I am proud of them all."

The present destruction of Aachen by the United States 1st army following the refusal of the German commander to surrender to spare the town is a matter of field tactics, rather than General policy toward German cities, he said. Field commanders, it was made clear, can use their own methods as long as they observe the rules of war.

View on Possibility of Collapse.

While the General regards a sudden German collapse as always a possibility, he sees no reason to rely on its coming at any given time. The threat of the Red Army in the east and the Allied army on German soil in the west can have no effect on the leaders who face the loss of everything, once they admit defeat, in Eisenhower's opinion.

He told correspondents today:

"I have every confidence in the peoples of the United States, Great Britain, France and all the United Nations to see this war through to final victory, and as long as they will see it through, I know that the soldiers and sailors and airmen possess the indomitable will to win. We have a hard job ahead but victory is certain."

Gen. Eisenhower, who appeared in excellent health, said the Allied armies were entering Germany as conquerors and would treat the Germans justly.

Report Hungarians Contact Allies Asking Armistice

New York, Oct. 12 — The BBC said in a broadcast recorded by CBS today that its Stockholm correspondent reported "the Hungarians have got in touch with the Allies, asking for an armistice."

"If the results are satisfactory, it's likely that a Hungarian delegation will go to Moscow shortly," the Stockholm correspondent was quoted.

Dunsmoore Given Life Term for Manslaughter

Hamilton, Oct. 12 — (CP)—Douglas Dunsmoor, found guilty of manslaughter by a Supreme Court jury, today was sentenced to life imprisonment in Kingston penitentiary. Dunsmoor was charged with manslaughter in connection with the Moose Hall fire here on May 23, when ten persons lost their lives.

Sentence was passed by Mr. Justice J. A. Hope.

The Moose Hall fire started on the second floor of the building during a dance held by about 70 Royal Oak Dairy employees.

Dunsmoor's sentence was on a charge of manslaughter in the death of Mrs. Dorothy Martin, 33, one of the victims in the fire.

A statement which police said Dunsmoor had given them during the investigation was entered as evidence during the trial. In the statement Dunsmoor confessed to setting five fires in Hamilton.

After sentence was passed, Dunsmoor expressed his thanks for a fair trial and voiced appreciation of the attitude taken by the prosecution and the jury.

THREE-PRONGED DAYLIGHT SMASH MADE AT GERMANY

Synthetic Oil Plants At Wanne-Eickel in Ruhr Valley Attacked By Strong Force

173RD RAID ON BERLIN

London, Oct. 12 — (CP) — Synthetic oil plants at Wanne-Eickel in the Ruhr were attacked by a strong force of R.A.F. heavy bombers today in the first blow of what appeared to be a three-pronged daylight smash at Germany after Berlin was hit for the 173rd time last night.

Spitfires escorted the British bombers on their second successive daylight operation.

Wanne-Eickel is an industrial city northeast of Essen.

While this force was out, approximately 750 U. S. heavy bombers attacked an aircraft components factory at Bremen. This armada, escorted by a powerful fighter screen, also bombed other unspecified targets in northwestern Germany as the German radio reported still another raid on central Austria by Italy-based bombers.

A small force of R.A.F. Lancasters shot across the Channel to Holland ripping gun installations at Breskens, where a large number of German troops are trapped by 1st Canadian Army forces.

173rd Raid on Berlin

The widespread daylight attacks followed the 173rd raid on Berlin last night as British Mosquito bombers, which seldom miss a night over Germany, unloaded several tons of explosives on industrial targets in the capital.

They also hit other objectives in western Germany with the loss of one plane, the Air Ministry said.

Hundreds of American bomber crews that had been alerted for possible participation in the annihilation of Aachen still were standing by. The heavy bombers will not be called in unless the weather is perfect for visual bombing. Attacking troops are dug in to close around the city.

Meanwhile Aachen was gradually being destroyed by artillery and U.S. 9th Air Force dive-bombs.

Drop 100 Tons

Fighter-bombers dropped more than 100 tons of bombs on the city in five hours yesterday afternoon without the loss of a plane. One pilot said he saw a 10-storey building crumble under two direct hits. Others reported great fires burning in the heart of the city.

R.A.F. heavies were sent out late yesterday to crack the sea wall around Walcheren Island, off the Dutch coast, for the third time. They breached the dike on the east side, making the escape of flood-trapped German troops virtually impossible.

British Typhoons destroyed a number of German barges in the Schelde area — near the 1st Canadian Army sector — where increased waterborne traffic has been reported the past two days.

ACTORS SUED

Los Angeles, Oct. 12 (AP)—Actress Teresa Wright and her husband writer-producer Niven Busch, were sued for $15,000 damages yesterday on allegations that Busch's 11-year-old son, Peter, shot their cook in the arm while playing soldier.

Mass Movement Transport Seen Heading Eastward

American Infantry Battles Into Factory Area of Aachen

By DON WHITEHEAD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Outside Aachen, Oct. 12—(AP)—American infantry fought into the factory district on the outskirts of Aachen late today while to the north foot troops and armor beat off a daylong counter-attack by the Germans who were supported by 20 to 25 tanks.

London, Oct. 12 (AP)—U.S. 1st Army infantry smashing a German effort to relieve the besieged garrisons in Aachen, moved in today to attack, the flaming city as artillery and dive-bombers poured in a constant fire.

In the Netherlands Canadian Press War Correspondent Ross Munro reported signs that may mean the enemy has decided to pull out the main part of their forces from that country and retreat to Germany.

Wreck Installations.

Essential installations in Rotterdam—Holland's second city and principal seaport — have been wrecked by 6,000 demolition experts, Munro reported, while a mass movement observed in the areas of Rotterdam and the Hague indicated a possible German withdrawal.

In May, 1940, German bombers levelled the central portions of Rotterdam after the Dutch had made a formal surrender of the city. Now it is learned the enemy who has been at work about 10 days, has already wrecked more than 10 miles of quays and dock works and probably has also destroyed railway installations.

R.A.F. reconnaissance planes on missions late yesterday discovered that roads in the Rotterdam area as well as around the Hague, 15 miles to the north, were crowded with transport moving generally east and south.

New Canadian Gains.

Meantime new Canadian gains were registered in the reinforced beachhead area in the Schelde pocket, while the Leopold Canal bridgehead was reported held firmly.

Canadian infantry took Biervliet, three miles south of the estuary and advanced beyond Hoofdplaat on the road to Breskens across the estuary from Flushing

POLITICAL TRUCE TERMINATED SAYS FORMER PREMIER

Harry Nixon in Radio Address Criticizes Drew for Aug. 9th Speech

AGAINST POWER MOVES

Toronto, Oct. 12—(CP)—Former Ontario Liberal Premier Harry Nixon told the people of this province Wednesday night that "come what may" the political truce between his party and the Progressive Conservative government of Premier Drew is ended.

Since the defeat of the Liberal government in August, 1943, the Liberal members of the legislature, believing it to be in the public interest that the present administration should have every opportunity to put into effect the promises on which they obtained power, had assisted the government on many occasions, Mr. Nixon said in a broadcast over the provincial network of the CBC.

Little apprehension had been shown for this assistance "and certainly there have been wholesale dismissals of civil servants throughout the constituencies who received their appointments under the Liberal regime."

Mr. Nixon, provincial Liberal leader, said the reason for calling off the truce was because Mr. Drew struck at "the very basis of Canadian unity in his shocking speech of Aug. 9," when he condemned the Federal Family Allowance Act and attacked Quebec.

Party Standing.

(Party standing in the Ontario legislature is: Progressive Conservatives, 38; C.C.F., 34; Liberals, 16; Labor Progressive, 2. Total 90.)

When Premier Drew said his one ambition in the political field outside Ontario was "to see an end to the weak and incompetent government at Ottawa" and to assist in the election of John Bracken as prime minister, "he shut the door to friendly co-operation in the face of every self-respecting Liberal member."

But it "is not because of this and not because of his administrative record, bad as it is, but because he strikes at the very basis of Canadian unity in his shocking speech of Aug. 9" condemning the Federal Family Allowances Act and attacking Quebec "that I make this announcement" that the truce is ended.

German Coastal Batteries Biggest Danger Facing Patrolling Fleets

By FRANK LOWE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A South Coast Port, England, Oct. 12 — (CP) — The captain whose long years in the navy had taught him never to speak of serious things in a serious way admitted they were a "bit of a nuisance."

The kid whose brief years on the lower deck had taught him to speak of profane things in a profane way said: "The damn things scare the hell out of me."

They both were talking about the same thing — the German coastal batteries which were the biggest danger faced by the Canadian fleet that patrols English Channel waters. Too, they were the last peril the sailors counted on when they moved into the Channel, and are the last thing to be mentioned whenever the story of a Channel run is told.

Things the sailors could see and combat with steel and explosives weren't nice, but they knew how to handle them. But the invisible pounding from shore was nerve-wracking, consistent and accurate.

"It's uncanny, that's what it is," said one sailor. He then told how it is to be steaming along the French coast and without any warning to see a huge tree of water grow into the air. Then another and another, each coming closer to the ship as the gunners ashore search for the range. The giant splashes creep closer, as if something were walking through the Channel toward the ship.

"There's nothing we can do but run like hell," he said.

By now, Canadian troops have helped their brothers afloat by clearing out these guns from the Dover Straits area. And don't think the men on the ships aren't grateful — it means the end of a six-month nightmare.

Donnan K.C., who is indisposed on account of illness, all cases not previously disposed of prior to the opening of this morning's County Court, held before Magistrate A. B. The other lad is 20-year-old Norman Bell.
